INTRODUCTION.

The form in which this Catalogue is drawn up may perhaps need a few words of explanation. The object aimed at is simply usefulness; full detailed description is therefore not attempted. With this Catalogue in their hands, the Members of the Society, especially those who are engaged in numismatic study, or interested in such line of observation, will be aware of what resources they possess at command in the Society's Museum. The Catalogue will also shew the deficiencies in the Collection; and thus indicate where a disposition to advance numismatic study by the help derived from a public collection may have the means of giving effectual aid.

It has been considered rather a special object to add to the Collection coins found within the district, as possessing in addition a local interest; and in this view particularly the Society has from time to time made some purchases.

Discovery of coins, Roman and English, in the district, has been very frequent: and had this Society with its museum existed long since, no doubt there would have been at this time an extensive collection in the hands of the University, possessing both local and general interest, and great value.

The writer cannot forbear expressing here a hope, as he has done elsewhere, that, when the Fitzwilliam building is completed, the several Colleges will deposit in that museum of art, in trust, the collections of coins which they possess. By that course, those collections will be well preserved; and serve a highly useful end, instead of lying, as now they do, uncared for, unknown, and wholly profitless.

This Catalogue also may be adapted to serve as a register for the contents of other collections; and therefore will possess usefulness beyond that of a simple record.

It may be well here to mention, that the University possesses a very good series of Roman Medals, in the bequest of Roger Gale. There are also collections in St John's College, Emmanuel, Caius, (a catalogue of which has been printed, at least as far as the Roman silver, Greek, and English); and a few in St Peter's College.

There is appended a key to the abbreviations made use of; and a list of donors is inserted, to whose liberality the Society is indebted for by much the largest portion of this department of its possessions.

NOTE. 1 B, 2 B, &c. mean Brass of the first &c. magnitude.

The reference to Smyth is to his Catalogue of medals, privately printed, 4to. Bedford, 1834.

This work is an excellent model of a Catalogue.

O. stands for obverse.

R. ..... reverse.

The Roman numeral at the end of each description gives the drawer of the Cabinet; the common numeral following it the compartment in that drawer.

Richb. attached to the description of a coin, signifies that it belongs to a collection of coins found at Richborough and Reculver in Kent, presented by the Vice-Provost of King's College.

The Museum also contains a large number of tokens and foreign coins; a catalogue of these may ere long be printed.
