R̄. Vide RUTILIO GACCI. Spanish Medallist of the early part of the seventeenth century. Cf. RUTILIO infra.

R (The Master R). Possibly an Austrian Medallist, who was working circ. 1565, and by whom are several religious medals. Some have ascribed these to the Augsburg Goldsmith, Lorenz Rosenbaum, but no doubt in error. Fiala suggests the name of REUTER. Among the medals signed R I may mention: 1. Birth of Christ; R. Adam and Eve eating of the tree of knowledge; dated .1.5.6.5 (the dies are still preserved at the Vienna Mint); — 2. Birth of Christ; R. + EGO. SVM. VIA. etc. Christ carrying the cross; — 3. A variety of the obv. type; — 4. Obv. + SALVATOR. MVNDI. Facing bust of Christ; R. Christ with cross and cup; — 5. Christ's baptism in the Jordan; — 10. Moses and the brazen serpent; R. Christ's crucifixion, dated, 1551, and others.

Some of the originals of these medals exhibit very fine work.

RACLE, JEAN (French), Medallist, and Engraver of coins, seals, jetons, &c., born at Brevennes, Lorraine, and son of Jean Racle. He appears to have been first employed at the Mint of Sedan, under Nicolas Marteau. In 1626 he was already Mint-engraver at Nancy. Isaac Briot and Racle were entrusted by the King with the coinage of 'milled' silver in 1643, in which year they issued pieces of 2 Sols 6 Deniers. On that occasion he received the appointment of Mint-master and Valet to the King. The Duke of Lorraine raised him to the peerage in 1653. In 1660, he ceded his post of Engraver to his brother Etienne, and died in 1670.

The Nancy Public Library preserves the dies of eight jetons engraved by this artist, four of which refer to the city itself and are dated 1634, 1635, 1637 and 1640. The signature is I. R. F.

Lepage quotes from numerous contemporaneous records in connexion with the life and works of Jean Racle, and other members of the same family.

RADCLYFFE (Brit.). Die-sinker and Engraver of tokens at Birmingham, during the latter end of the eighteenth century (Vide W. J. Davis, Warwickshire Token Coinage).

RADKOVIC, JOSEPH (Austr.). A merchant of Agram, who issued medals, engraved by Adolf Müller of Vienna; amongst others: Visit of the Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria and Consort, to Agram, 1888; — Visit of the Emperor Joseph I. to Croatia, 1888 (2 var). The medals are signed: JOS. RADKOVIC.

RADNITZKY, KARL (Austr.). Sculptor and Medallist, born at Vienna, 17. November 1818, died 10. January 1901. He studied at the Gymnasium of his native city, and was apprenticed at the Mint, where he worked under Josef Daniel Boehm, 1844-1848. In 1848, immediately after the accession of the Emperor Francis Joseph, he was called to Olmütz to model the sovereign's portrait, from which he was commissioned to engrave dies for the new large Medals of Military Merit. From 1848 to 1853 he filled the post of Assistant-engraver at the Vienna Mint, and cut amongst others the dies for the large Medals of Civil Merit, as well as coin-dies. For many years he filled the chair of Professor of modelling and medal-engraving at the Vienna Academy of Decorative Arts.

In the early eighties he retired on a pension, but there are several medallic works by him of a later date. He formed pupils of note, in the front rank of whom I may mention Prof. Tautenhayn and

A. Scharff, who however did not adhere to his style and became greatly his superior in artistic merit.

J. C. Arneth, director of the Vienna Museum, 1851.

Radnitzky's works are very numerous and not of equal merit ; some are purely personal, others commemorate historical events, and many are Prize Medals for Exhibitions, Agricultural and Industrial societies, &c. His first medal of note, executed in 1843, depicts Rubens, and shows on R. a representation of the Genius of painting. For this he won the Reichel Prize. The following medallic works by this talented artist have come under my notice, but the list is very incomplete, as Radnitzky himself seems to have been adverse to the publication of a catalogue of his medals : 1843. Radnitzky signed his medals variously as follows : C. R.; — C. R. F.; — C. RADNITZKY; — C. RADNITZKY F.; — RADNITZKY; — RADNITZKY F., etc.

This artist was one of the most prominent Austrian medallists of the nineteenth century, and his name will long be held in veneration amongst his numerous pupils who have brought Viennese medallic art to such a high standard of perfection.

RADNITZKY, KARL (Austr.) Nephew of the last, and also an Engraver (especially Gem-engraver), by whom I have however only seen an oval memorial medal of Crown Prince Rudolf of Austria, 1889, and a medal on his death, both signed : C. RADNITZKY JUN. He is an official at the Ministry of France, Member of the Society of Decorative Artists of Vienna, and K. K. Engraver of armorial bearings to the Court.

RAEBURN, SIR HENRY (Brit.). Painter, born at Stockbridge, Edinburgh, 1756, died at London, 1823. He was apprenticed to a goldsmith, and gave early promise of his abilities as an artist; went to Italy, made the acquaintance of Reynolds, and settled in Edinburgh after two years' absence. He became famous as one of the greatest painters of the day, and was knighted by George IV. a short time before his death. One of his best known portraits is that of Sir Walter Scott.

Raeburn was in the habit of occasionally practising modelling, and one of his portraits, executed in Tassie's enamel paste, has usually been regarded as modelled by his hand. "It is executed in a much simpler and freer manner than the signed medallions of Tassie, with a handling which, especially in the treatment of the hair, is markedly suggestive of Raeburn's own 'square touch' as a painter. It is not titled with the impressed Roman letters which we generally find on the truncation of Tassie's larger medallions; nor is it marked with the Tassie F. or the capital T., which usually distinguish his works; but bears simply the title, H. Raeburn, 1792, incised in a running handwriting".

Henry Raeburn, the younger, believed that this medallion was executed by the painter himself.

DE RAGVSIO occurs on two Portrait-medals of Federigo di Montefeltro, and Alfonso V., King of Aragon, Sicily and Naples. Both medals were executed in the year 1450; they entirely correspond in size, style and inscription; and both were produced at Naples. "Although not works of distinguished merit", says C. von Fabriczy, "both are nevertheless pleasing achievements of a very able artist".

"On the medal of Federigo Montefeltre, the famous general is designated as the commander of the Neapolitan army, a dignity which was conferred on him in 1450, and he is further represented with his nose still unbroken, showing that the medal was made in that year, towards the end of which he suffered this injury and the loss of an eye at a fête given in Urbino to commemorate the accession of Francesco Sforza to the Dukedom of Milan.

RAM, LUDOVICO (Ital.). Mint-master at Naples, under Charles V.

On Carlini of 1533 by Domenico della Musica his signature occurs, and also on Tari and Carlini of 1542.

RAMAGE, DAVID (Brit.). Possibly of Scottish origin; a member of the company of Moneyers of London, 1649, and himself a clever Engraver, to whom are ascribed some Pattern coins, issued at the time of Blondeau's introduction to the Mint of his new process for the coinage, and which were intended to show that foreign aid was not required. "Though these pieces were very inferior in neatness of execution to those of Blondeau, the opposition was successful and he left the kingdom. The pattern for a Half-crown which he produced is the first piece struck in this country which bore an inscription upon its edge. After this successful resistance to the introduction of improvement, coins continued to be struck by the same inefficient process as before, till the year 1662" (Hawkins, Silver Coins of England, 1887, p. 378).

Under Cromwell, Ramage appears to have been a well-known 'Maker of Farthings', and in a document referred to by Henfrey, he is styled 'Ramage Farthing-maker in the Tower'.

This Engraver died probably in 1662, "as on the 5th November in that year a warrant was issued by Charles II., ordering the removal from the Mint buildings of "the widow and children of David Ramage, who, as Wee are informed, have obstructed Our Service and been very obstinate."

Ramage's Trial pieces are: COMMONWEALTH. Half Crown, 1651. Obv. Mm. mullet on both sides. THE COMMONWEALTH OF ENGLAND.

Pattern Half Crown, by Ramage.

Shield of St. George within wreath of laurel; R. Varieties exist; one is with plain edge.

2. Shilling, 1651. Type and legends exactly as the Half Crown, and probably from the same dies, but struck on a much thinner blank and with the edge engrailed. Varieties exist with plain edge, etc. (Rud., Pl. xxxii, 3).

3. Sixpence (or Farthing), 1651. Obv. Mm. mullet on both sides. TRVTH * AND * PEACE * St. George's shield within beaded circle; R. Similar legend, the Irish shield within beaded circle, edge inscribed with similar motto followed by the date 1651, a mullet before and after each word (Rud., Pl. xxxii, 1).

4. Æ. Farthing. Similar type, but the edge not inscribed (Snell., Copper Coins, Pl. 6, 6. — Mont., Copper Coins, p. 30, 4).

5. Æ. Farthing. Obv. Mm. mullet; THVS · VNITED · INVINCIBLE. Three pillars linked together, surmounted respectively by a cross, a harp and a thistle; R under central pillar; R. Mm. mullet; AND GOD · DIRECT OVR CORSE. Ship in full sail to left. Several varieties exist, some without the signature R (Vide Montagu Sale Catalogue, IV, July 1897, 41-43).

Commonwealth Farthing, by Ramage (?)

The R on this Commonwealth Farthing has been taken by most writers, including Mr. Montagu, to represent Rawlins; but Henfrey in my opinion, appears to have given conclusive proofs that the Engraver must be Ramage, who was at the time "Farthing maker" at the Mint, and who probably cut dies for the other issues of Commonwealth Farthings, and later for those of Cromwell. Besides the improbability of a Royalist making patterns for the Commonwealth and the Protector's coins, Rawlins was scarcely in a position to be able to make these at the time they were actually made, for a letter written by him on the 27th February 1657-8 proves that he was then in extreme distress, and imprisoned in a low prison in London called the "Hole in St. Martin" (Henfrey, op. cit., p. 159). We further find in a contemporary document that Ramage is accused of aiming at suppressing all Tools for making Farthings but his own, . . . that so he may have the sole Trade in his hands . . .

OLIVER CROMWELL. Æ. 6. Farthing. Obv. OLIVAR · PRO · ENG · SC · IRL., Laureate and draped bust of the Protector to left, the top of head extending beyond the inner circle, lozenges in legend; R. Mm.

7. Æ. Farthing. Obv. OLIVAR·PRO·ENG·SC·IRL, lozenges in legend. Bust of the Protector as on the preceding piece; R. CHARITIE·AND·CHANGE, lozenges in legend, Crowned shield of arms as on the silver coins of Cromwell.

8. Æ. Farthing. Obv. Mm. mullet; OLIVAR·PRO·ENG·SC·IRL·, lozenges in legend, Laureate and draped bust of the Protector similar to the preceding but entirely within the inner circle; R. No Mm. CHARITIE·AND·CHANGE. Crowned shield of arms as on last piece.

Cromwell Farthing.

9. Æ. Farthing. Obv. As n° 6. R. AND GOD DIRECT OUR CORSE. A three-masted ship sailing to the left, with a flag on the stern and one on each mast; mullet at the commencement of the legend (Henfrey, Pl. iv, n° 9).

10. Æ. Farthing. Obv. OLIVER·PRO·ENG·SCO· & IRE. Bust to left, laureate, with drapery round the neck; R. Garnished and crowned shield quartered with arms of England, Scotland, and Ireland; legend, CONVENIENT CHANGE. 1651. Unique; in the British Museum Collection. — The date is not correct; the coin was probably a private pattern, made in 1658, the type being copied from Simon's crown.

Silver impressions of Ramage's Pattern Farthings of Cromwell sometimes occur. All these Pattern pieces by Ramage are rare. The latest prices realized for specimens at the Murdoch Sale (1903) were as follows: 1651 Half Crown £ 25; Shilling £ 19 and £ 20; Sixpence £ 2.4.0; Cromwell Farthings, from £ 2.4.0 to £. 15 according to types.

As Ramage did not die until 1662 and the R. THVS·VNITED·INVINCIBLE· occurs on Charles II's early Farthings, we may presume that Ramage is the Engraver of this first issue of Charles II. Farthings. One of these is even signed R. under the king's head. Montagu describes five types of Pattern Farthings, two of which are dated 1660:—

CHARLES II. 11. Æ. Pattern Farthing. Mm. rose; SVCH·GOD·LOVES, lozenge in legend, Crowned bust of Charles II to left; beneath, R.; R. Mm. rose, THVS VNITED INVINCIBLE, lozenges in legend, Three pillars linked, surmounted respectively by a cross, harp and a thistle (Mont. n° 3).

12. Æ. Pattern Farthing. Obv. As last, but no R beneath; R. TRVTH AND PEACE. A rose crowned between C R crowned; under the rose, the date 1660 (Mont. n° 4).

13. Æ. Pattern Farthing. Mm. rose; CAROLVS·II·REX, mullet after CAROLVS, and after II, lozenge after REX. Crowned bust of Charles II. to left; R. Mm. rose, THVS·VNITED·INVINCIBLE, type of the three pillars as on n° 11 (Mont. n° 5).

14. Æ. Pattern Farthing. No legend, Three pillars linked, surmounted respectively by a cross, harp, and a thistle; at sides C—R crowned; above, crown; R. same type (Mont. n° 6).

15. Æ. Pattern Farthing. 1660. Mm. rose; TRVTH·AND·PEACE mullet after TRVTH, and after AND, lozenge after PEACE, expanded rose under crown between C—R crowned; below, the date 1660;

R. Mm. rose, THVS · VNITED · INVINCIBLE, type of the three pillars (Mont. n° 7). Also one dated 1661.

Pattern Farthing of Charles II, 1660.

These Pattern Farthings exist also in silver, and there are varieties.

A series of Bristol Farthing Tokens, dated 1652, 1660 and 1662 are probably by Ramage and not by Rawlins. They are signed R on obv. Boyne describes eight varieties. The same type was struck also in 1670, but without the engraver's initial.

By Ramage are possibly also Farthing Tokens of Gloucester, Oxford, and London (Broad St., Houndsditch, St. Paul's Churchyard, and the Wardrobe) which are usually given to Rawlins.

Ramage was of British origin : the name is common enough in Scotland.

RAMELLI, BENEDETTO (Ital.). A native of Ferrara, Damaskeener, Embosser and Engraver in precious stones, who worked also at Paris, and resided circ. 1530-1535 at Lyons. In 1538 he executed a Portrait-medallion of Francis I., King of France; it is thus described by Rondot: FRANCISCVS · I · D · G · FRANCOR · REX. 1537 (size: 124 mill.). Ramelli was paid 300 Livres tournois for this work. There are replicas slightly modified, of this medal.

After Francis I.'s death, one of the singers of his chapel appropriated to himself this medallion by changing the date into 1547. He had casts made, which he signed : P : AMSTERDAM : CANTOR : REGIVS : FACIEBAT. A specimen is in the Munich Cabinet.

Ramelli's damaskeen work is justly famous, but the medallion of Francis I. is rough in execution and of mediocre modelling.

Engraver of coins to Pope Clement VIII. He remained in office, under Clement VIII.'s second successor, Paul V., until 1611.

This artist executed no less than twenty-five medals of Clement VIII., and one of Paul V., which dates from the last year of his life. These medals are : Clement VIII. (1592-1605): 1. R. ANNONA PVBLICA. Female figure to l., holding three ears of corn and cornucopiae (signed on obv. GIOR.RAN.); — 2. AB. ORIGINE. MVNDI.

Bust to l. with different legend, otherwise as n° 3 (unsigned); — 8. R. FERRARIA. RECEP'TA. View of the city of Ferrara (signed on obv. GIOR.RAN. "This medal was struck to commemorate the reversion of the Duchy of Ferrara to the Pope on the death of Alfonso II. d'Este and of the Pope's entry into the city on May 8th, 1598. The fact that the artist was unable to devise anything else for the reverse than a view of the city surrounded by its walls, which is besides altogether paltry and utterly devoid of monumental character, is significant of the poverty of the period in artistically effective ideas. We must, however, do our master the justice to admit that all his reverses do not show the same insignificance and poverty of thought. Where he has to depict papal ceremonies, however, and allegories of Peace, the Faith, and subjects of the like nature, he errs, as a rule, in overcrowding the compositions with tiny figures, and thus making them confused, or else satisfies himself with one stiff figure borrowed without scruple from the allegories which the painting and sculpture of his day produced in thousands upon thousands" (Corn. von Fabriczy, Italian Medals, Engl. edit. p. 194); — 9. ℞. FERRARIA. RECVPERATA. Type as n° 8 (obv. signed : GIOR.RAN.); — 10. ℞. FERRARIA. Most of these medals are 33 mill. in diameter, but others vary from 32 to 42 mill.

Rancetti was Engraver of the coins at the Zecca from 1594 to 1610.

In contemporary documents, his name occurs as GIORGIO DI ANTONIO RANCETTI. He appears to have been a clever Goldsmith, and to have been entrusted with important orders from the Pope and the pontifical Court.

RANKIN (Brit.). A London Die-sinker, circ. 1820, in which year he signed two medals, one on the Accession of George IV., and another on the Return of Queen Caroline to England, 5. June, 1820. The work is mediocre.

RAOULIN, CHARLOT (French). Goldsmith and Seal-engraver to King René of Anjou (1408-1450). His son, Antoine R., and another member of the same family, Guillemin or Guillaume R., also worked as Seal-engravers to the Sicilian King. Charlot Raoulin is supposed to have engraved coin-dies for René (circ. 1440-1448). Blancard ascribes to this Engraver the execution of the gold Florin of Provence with the effigy of St. Magdalene.

RAPHAEL (RAFFAELE SANZIO) (Ital.). Celebrated Painter, Sculptor, and Architect, born at Urbino, in 1483, died at Rome from fever, which he caught in the excavations in 1520. He studied under Perugino, visited Florence in 1504 and chiefly lived there till 1508, when at the bidding of Pope Julius II. he went to Rome, where he spent the rest of his short life and founded a school, from which issued many eminent artists.

Raphael has left behind a number of masterpieces : the Dispute of the Holy Sacrament, the Transfiguration, the frescoes in the Sallae and Loggie of the Vatican, admirable Portraits and Madonnas which have become classical. His works were the fruits of the study of the masters that preceded him, particularly Perugino and the Florentines, and perhaps only towards the end of his career might his work be called his own.

The influence of this great artist, who has been called the most perfect of the Italian Masters, made itself widely felt in every domain of art, not excluding that of the medallist. No medals or designs for medals can be directly traced to him, but the famous Medallists and Coin-engravers, his contemporaries, who were with him working for the Papal Court, borrowed from his style that keen observation of nature and study of her beauties, as seen from the point of view presented by the artist's own idea and feeling.

RAPUSCH, or RAPPOST, HEINRICH (Germ.). Goldsmith and Medallist, who was working for the Court of Berlin, and appointed there in 1579 for a term of ten years. He died at Wolfenbüttel in 1616. His monogram HR occurs on a medal of inferior work, dated 1588, representing John George of Brandenburg and Christian I. of Saxony, both with their consorts (obv. illustrated; Berlin). This medal is catalogued under Hans Reinhard Junr by Dr Pick. Similar, unsigned medals of John George and Joachim Frederick are no doubt by this Engraver, says Erman.

John George of Brandenburg and Consort.

The name of this artist occurs also under the forms Rappuss, Rappusch, Rappusen, Rappost, and Rappes.

Domanig states that there were two goldsmiths and medallists of the name of Heinrich Rapusch or Rapost, father and son.

P. J. Meier ascribes to Rapusch also an oval Memorial medal of Henry Julius, Duke of Brunswick, Coadjutor of Halberstadt, 1613 and another of the latter's consort, Duchess Elizabeth, but on the other hand Erstein thinks the John George and Christian I. medal is by Hans Reinhard Junior.

Dr Pick further gives to Rappost a Portrait-medal of Frederick Ulrich, Duke of Brunswick-Wolfenbüttel, 1615, in the Gotha Museum, and another of the same Duke, 1613, is described in Hamburger, Münzen u. Medaillen-Sammlung des Herrn Dr Antoine Feill, Hamburg, II, 1908, lot 1456.

RASIÈRES, ROMBAUT DE (Belg.). Seal-engraver and Die-cutter at the Mint of Antwerp, circ. 1599-1600. In 1599 he was commissioned to model in wax three medals with the effigies of the Archdukes, three of which were to represent them enthroned; to these a fifth was added later on. Pinchart suggests that they were Patterns for Coins.

This Engraver is also the author of two jetons issued for the Inauguration of the Infanta Isabella and Archduke Albert, and of the Seals and Counter-seals of Brabant used by the Archdukes, and erroneously attributed to Jacques Jonghelinck.

Rombaut de Rasières prepared in 1599 models and puncheons for the Archdukes' coinage, such as the pieces of 50, 40 and 20 sous, and the Double and Single Ducats, for the mints of Antwerp, Bruges and Maestricht.

Vredius mentions a Theodore de Rosiers (probably R. de Rasières), whom he praises as a clever Silver Chaser.

RASTOUX, HENRI (French). Contemporary Sculptor, born at Nismes (Gard); pupil of J. Félon. At the Paris Salon of 1883 he exhibited a Portrait-medallion of a Lady.

RASUMNY, FÉLIX (Russ.). Sculptor and Medallist, born at Sebastopol (Russia) in 1870; settled in France at an early age; entered the Ecole des Arts décoratifs, Paris, to study drawing and sculpture under the direction of Prof. Gauthier and Aimé Millet, and, later, learned medal-engraving with Paulin Tasset.

He first exhibited at the Salon in 1887, sending in that year several Portrait-medallions of children, and a Medal of the Virgin, which was very successful. At the Universal Exhibition (1900) he obtained a Silver medal, and he was again rewarded in 1906 (R Plaque).

This artist contributed not a little to the vogue of the medal as an article of jewellery. He has executed a great number of artistic and religious medals, Prize medals for Sports, Automobilmism, Music, Photography, etc., the medals for which were made in connection with the Paris firm of A. Duseaux & Co.

Franke, at Halle; Dürer, at Nuremberg; Monument of Maximilian I., at Munich; Equestrian statue of Frederick the Great (1839-1851), at Berlin; bronze statues of Generals Gneisenau and York, Kant at Koenigsberg, and Thaer at Berlin. Of these works Fortnum says that they "are marked by great truthfulness and individuality, harmoniously proportioned and ably grouped, but wanting high ideal aspiration in subjects beyond the range of monumental portraiture".

His busts of the Grand Duchess Louise of Weimar, and of Goethe, served for A. Bovy's medals of these two personages, and Brandt's medal of Alexander von Humboldt was also modelled by Rauch. Other medallists who were working at Berlin at the same time as Rauch copied his bronze works on their medals, and among them the most conspicuous are Gottlieb Goetze, Karl Pfeuffer, and J. Karl Fischer.

At the Luxembourg Museum there is a work by him in gold, repoussé and chased, RAWLE, G. (Brit.). Schlickeysen-Pallmann mention this name as that of a London Medallist of the second half of the eighteenth century, but I have not come across any medals by him.

RAWLINS, THOMAS (Brit.). Medallist, Coin-, Gem-, and Seal-engraver, also a Playwright, born about 1620 (some say 1600), died in London in 1670. He was apprenticed as a Goldsmith and Gem-engraver and is said to have been a pupil of Nicholas Briot, with whom he worked for some years at the Royal Mint. An ardent Royalist, he served both Charles I. and Charles II, undergoing great hardships during the Commonwealth. His earliest dated medal, that of William Wade, is of 1641. On the outbreak of the Civil War, he followed Charles I. to Oxford. In 1643 he was commissioned to cut various dies for medals (Badge of the Forlorn Hope; Meeting of Charles I. and Henrietta Maria at Kington; Medal of Sir Robert Welch; Taking of Bristol by Prince Rupert), and in the previous year he had engraved a Medal on the Declaration of Parliament, but his signature does not occur on coins until

The Juxon Medal of Charles I., by Rawlins.

1644, when he produced the famous Crown piece, known as the 'Oxford Crown' (description and illustration infra) from the view of Oxford which he introduced on the reverse, beneath the ordinary equestrian type. From henceforth the artist appears to have cut most of the dies for the coins minted at Oxford, many of which are signed by him. He was formally appointed Chief-engraver of the mint in the twenty-third year of Charles I. (March 1647-March 1648) evidently after the death of Briot. Between 1642 and 1648 he was actively employed in making Royal badges, as well as medals and badges for the King's adherents.

To the last year of Charles I. probably belongs the artist's famous 'unique' pattern for a 'five Broad piece', the so-called 'Juxon Medal', which was supposed to have been given by the King on his scaffold to Bishop Juxon as a mark of regard for the attachment and attention he had shewn him. It is now in the British Museum.

On the death of Charles I., Rawlins appears to have fled to France, but in 1652 we find him again in England earning a precarious livelihood by doing die-sinker's work, principally engraving tradesmen's tokens for the towns of Bristol, Gloucester, Oxford, and London, if these tokens, varieties of which are signed R, do not belong to Ramage, another Engraver, who was employed at the Mint, and was known as "Farthing-maker in the Tower". From a letter written by Rawlins to John Evelyn for assistance, 27. February 1657, we learn that he was then in extreme distress, and imprisoned for debt in a low prison in London, called the "Hole in St. Martin". Evelyn, who had met the Engraver in Paris, endorsed the letter as being from "Mr. Thos Rawlins... an excellent artist, but debash'd fellow". (Wroth, p. 326).

At the Restoration Rawlins was reinstated in his former place at the Mint, and held it till his death in 1670. He was styled Chief-engraver, while Thomas Simon held the appointment of "Chief Engraver of Arms and Seals". Rawlins had a residence in the Mint. He was married, and Walpole (Anecdotes, I, 401) mentions a print of his wife inscribed 'Dorothea Narbona, uxor D. Thomae Rawlins supremi sculptoris sigilli Carol. I et Carol II'; this, says Wroth, was probably identical with the engraving by Anton van der Does in the print room at the British Museum.

On June 15, 1660 (Cal. State Papers, Dom. 1660-1, p. 78) Rawlins was ordered to engrave the King's effigies for the coins. He may possibly have designed and engraved in the same year five patterns for copper Farthings of Charles II., which I however prefer to ascribe to Ramage (q. v.). Between July 30 and September 24 of that year 1660, Rawlins was engaged in cutting a privy seal for Ireland and five judicial seals for the Welsh Counties. For these six seals he was paid 274 l. 2 s. 6 d. (Wroth, p. 326). In the year of his death, 1670, the artist was preparing new dies for Charles II.

I borrow from Mr. Wroth's monograph on Rawlins (Dict. Nat. Biog. XLVII) the following details concerning the Engraver's literary achievements: "Rawlins first comes into notice in 1640, when he published "The Rebellion", a tragedy which is stated on the title-page to have been acted nine days together and divers times since by his Majesty's company of revells. It is 'far from a bad play', though the verse is rather halting and bombastic (Genest, English Stage, x, 113-14). The scene is laid in Seville, and a prominent part is taken in the play by the tailors of that city. "The Rebellion" (London, 1640, 4to, reprinted in 'The Ancient British Drama', vol. III., and in Dodsley's 'Old English Plays', vol. XIV) was dedicated by Rawlins to his "honoured kinsman Robert Ducie, esq. of Aston, Staffordshire".

"Two Comedies, both printed after the year of Rawlins' death, are usually assigned to him: 1. 'Tom Essence, or the Modish Life' (sometimes erroneously attributed to Ravenscroft), a successful play which owes much to Molière's 'Cocu imaginaire'; it was licensed for performance at Dorset Garden on 4. November 1676, and printed in 1677, 4to. 2. 'Tunbridge Wells, or a Day's Courtship', an indifferent comedy, printed in 1678, 4to. A collection of poems called 'Calanthe' (subjoined to Good Friday, being 'Meditations on that Day', 1648, 8vo) is signed T.R., initials which Oldys identified with Thomas Rawlins. Complimentary verses by Rawlins are prefixed to 'Messallina', a tragedy by his friend Nathaniel Richards, and to Lovelace's 'Lucada'" (Wroth, p. 327).

His medals, which are usually cast and chased, are signed R;—T.R: or with his full name.

"In technical finish and sureness of touch", says Mr. Wroth, "Rawlins is inferior to Thomas Simon, the great Medallist of the Commons, yet much of his work is decidedly pleasing and elegant. Evelyn says that he excelled in medals and in intaglios, and in Flecknoe's 'Miscellanies' there is a poem on that excellent cymelist or sculptor in gold and precious stones, Thomas Rawlins" (Wroth, p. 327).

The following is a list of the artist's principal known works in coins and medals.

COINS.

GOLD. Charles I. Only Pattern Coins.

1. Pattern Sovereign or "Five Broad piece", the so-called Juxon Medal (illustrated). Obv. CAROLVS. D'.MAG'.BRIT'.FRAN'.ET. HIBER-

The Juxon Medal, or Pattern Five-Broad piece*.

NIAE'. REX. Bust of King to left, bareheaded, in falling lace collar, armour and scarf across the breast.

℞. FLORENT. CONCORDIA. REGNA. The royal arms in high relief on an oval garnished shield, crowned; at the sides C R, both crowned; mm. rose; engrailed border on both sides; edge plain. Weight: 732 grs. Unique. In the British Museum. Purchased for the National Collection by Messrs. Spink and Son at the Montagu Sale (Cat. Nov. 1896, lot 352, realized £ 770).

This fine coin was said to have been presented by Charles I. to Bishop Juxon on the scaffold just before his execution. Its pedigree is well authenticated up to the present day, but the tradition of the occasion on which the King gave the piece to his faithful prelate may or may not rest on the actual fact, as "according to some old authorities the parting present sent by Charles to his son was the "George", containing his mother's portrait".

The likeness of Charles I. on the 'Juxon medal' is very good, but cannot compare with the portraits executed by Briot, after Vandyck.

There is an interesting notice of this coin by Mr. W. J. Webster in Spink's Numismatic Circular, V, col. 2059.

2. Pattern Broad. Mm. lis; same type and ℞. legend, as on the preceding coin, but reading on obv. CAROLVS·D'.G'.MAG'.BRIT'.FRA'.ET·HI'.REX. Weight: 178 grs. 9. Shilling. Oxford, 1644. Similar type, with Bust in figured armour, lion's head on shoulder piece, falling laced collar, scart looped up in front; R (for Rawlins) on the truncation of the arm, lozenges after words (Hawkins, p. 346, n° 8). A specimen in Miss Helen Farquhar's Collection.

13. Threepence, signed R, with Oxford Obv. and Aberystwith R. (Spink's Num. Circ., II, 518).

The above are, so far as I have been able to find out, the only signed silver coins known by Rawlins, but I would suggest, from similarity of design and execution, that some of the fine Oxford issues (possibly the fine work "Pound" and "Half Pound") may have been engraved by this artist, who superintended that Mint, although Briot and other engravers may have been responsible for most of the coins.

COPPER. Rawlins is supposed to have engraved, during the Commonwealth, and after his return from France, in 1652, Town Tokens for Bristol, Gloucester and Oxford, and also to have produced dies for London Tradesmen's Tokens of Broad St., Houndsditch, St. Paul's Churchyard, and the Wardrobe (Boyne, Tradesmen's Tokens, ed. Williamson). He is also credited with having engraved Pattern Farthings of Cromwell, which however I prefer to ascribe to Ramage (q. v.) as well as Pattern Farthings of Charles II., with similar reverses to the Cromwell Farthings (Vide Description of these coins under Ramage, supra).

Miss Helen Farquhar has given in the British Numismatic Journal, vol. II, pp. 243-290, a very full account and description of the memorial badges of Charles I., and has successfully shown that Rawlins made use of Van Dyck's and other portraits for his designs.

SEALS.

On 15. June 1660 Rawlins was ordered to engrave the king's effigies for the coins (Cal. State Papers, Dom. 1660-1, p. 78). From 30. July to 24. September of that same year he was engaged in engraving a Privy-seal for Ireland and five judicial Seals for the Welsh Counties. For these six Seals he was paid 274 l. 2s. 6 d. (ib. 1660-1, pp. 185, 299; 1663-4, pp. 105, 257). (Wroth, loc. cit.). There is no doubt that during the Commonwealth the Engraver earned his livelihood by cutting private seals and badges, or "suspension medalets, which the disheartened cavaliers wore in remembrance of their beloved sovereign" (B. Nightingale, Thomas Rawlins, and the Honorary Medals of the Commonwealth, Num. Chron., xiii, p. 129 sqq.).

Rawlins, although a very talented artist, was an uneven worker, and some of his productions betray no doubt the great haste with which he had to execute the King's commands.

READY, ROBERT COOPER (Brit.). Modeller, Sigillarist, and Electrotypist, born at Norwich, 28. June 1811, died at Camden Town, London, 15. May 1901.

Portrait of R. C. Ready, by G. A. Carter.

From his early youth he had a penchant for mediæval seals, and in the forties found himself relying entirely upon work in connection with these and kindred objects of glyptic art. He worked in Norwich, and Cambridge, and finally combined his private practice with an appointment which he took up at the British Museum in 1859 and held till within four years of his decease. He was a pioneer in the work of reproducing coins and medals by the electrotpe process, and had among his clientèle several of the Royal houses of Europe.

A medallic portrait of him was modelled in 1879 by G. A. Carter, and the gem-engraver, Luigi Isler, cut his intaglio-portrait.

READY, AUGUSTUS P. (Brit.). Modeller, and Electrotypist at the British Museum. He worked there for many years with his father ROBERT READY, and on his death (1901) he succeeded him. Both his, and his father's reproductions of coins and medals, especially of Greek coins, are so perfectly done, that were it not for the difference in weight, they could hardly be detected from genuine coins. As a measure of precaution, most of these electrotypes are stamped with RR, R or MB on the edge. The authorities at the British Museum now only supply electrotypes in two sections, i. e. obverses separated from the reverses.

REAL, DÉSIRÉ (French). Contemporary Sculptor, born at Paris. He is the author of some Portrait-medallions; one of Dr Réal was exhibited by him at the Salon of 1883, and another of M<sup>me</sup> Veuve François del Sarto in 1887.

REAL, LUCINO (Ital.). Mint-master at Bourg, 1560-1561.

REBEN(REWEN), HANS (Germ.). Mint-master at Neustadt a. S., 1407.

REBER, ANDREAS (Germ.). In conjunction with Adam and Friedrich Schäfer he was instructed to work the Mints of Neisse and Teschen, 10. August 1621, for a term of three years, but in September 1622 they had to transfer their rights to a company of Prague.

BIBLIOGRAPHY. — Friedensburg, Schlesiens neuere Münzgeschichte.

RECIPON, GEORGES (French). Contemporary Sculptor, born at Paris; pupil of his father, Dumont, Thomas and François. I have noted the following medallic works by him: 1896. The Shepherd and the Sea; — The Grasshopper and the Ant; — 1897. M. E. Allez; — M<sup>me</sup> E. Allez; — 1898. M<sup>me</sup> U***; — Symbol of Marriage, etc.

RÉCAMIER, MADAME DE (French). 1777-1849. Celebrated for her wit, virtue, and beauty; she became at fifteen the wife of a rich banker in Paris; her salon was the meeting place of all the literary and artistic celebrities of her time, she was a friend of Madame de Staël, and Chateaubriand whom she soothed in his declining years. Her features have been preserved to us by Canova, Gérard, Louis David; Pradier, and David d'Angers have also both modelled her portrait, and Augustin Dupré is said to have immortalised her further as the prototype for his figure of Liberty or the Republic on the coinage of the first French Republic.

Obv. of Five Centime piece, an. III. (enlarged).

RECORDON, PIERRE (French). “Maistre fondeur ordinaire de l’artillerie de France” at Lyons, and author of cast Medallions. He worked circ. 1608-1627.

RED, JOHN (Amer.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, born at Boston, pupil of Chapu; now domiciled at Berck-sur-Mer. He executed numerous works of decorative art and Portrait-medallions. Three medallions were exhibited by him at the Paris Salon: 1891. La Prière; — 1893. Ferveur; — 1894. Extase.

REDE, ROGER DE (Brit.). Mint-master at St. Edmundsbury from the 25th year of Edward I. to the 12th of Edward II.

REED, SIR BARTHOLOMEW. Vide READE supra (Brit.). Sir Bartholomew Reade (also Reed, Rede, or Reid), Goldsmith, Alderman and Mayor of the City of London, 1501-2. Sheriff in 1497. He was Master of the Royal Mint, London, under Edward IV., Richard III. and Henry VII., circ. 1481-1493. Ruding gives interesting information about his activity at the Mint. In the first year of Henry VII., 1485, Sir Giles Daubeney and Bartholomew Reed "were appointed joint-masters and workers of the mint, to coin pieces of the same description as had been coined under Edward IV., and in 1489 the same persons — Sir Giles having now become Lord Daubeney — were ordered to make a new money of gold according to the point and form of a piece of lead annexed to the Letters Patent. The new money was to be of standard fineness, to be double the weight of the Ryal, and to be called the Sovereign, and was to be current for 20s" (Kenyon, p. 74).

Anno 22 of Edward IV, Reed's name occurs as Warden of the Exchange.

REES, SEBASTIAN (Germ.). Mint-master at Ortenberg, 1622.

REFATI, TIMOTEO, REFATUS, TIMOTHEUS (Ital.). Medallist of Mantua, who was working circ. 1562. Only three medals are ascribed with certainty to him, which are signed : TIM. REF. MANT. F.; TIM. R. M. F. and T. R. respectively. Two are described by Armand, and the third, which is in the British Museum collection was reproduced by Mr. G. F. Hill in the Numismatic Chronicle, 1902, Pl. I, 3.

Refatus, says Mr. Hill, seems to have been under German influence, and has certain mannerisms, such as the introduction of trees bent by the wind in an otherwise still landscape.

Certain medals, signed T. R. have been erroneously ascribed to Timotheus Refatus.

Timotheus Refatus. Mr. Hill has shown that, on account of dissimilarity of style, this identification must be rejected. Armand already hesitated to admit it, both on chronological grounds and difference of workmanship. The medals thus signed are : Diego de Solis; obv. Bust to r., cuirassed; R. NIL DESPERANDVM. T. R. Right arm holding wand, pointing towards the sun; below, a landscape (diam. : 45 mill.; Berlin Museum); — Benedetto Lomellini, cardinal; obv. Bust to r. wearing camail; R. MANSVETVDO Gentleness; signed T. R. on both sides diam. : 34.5 × 28.5; Brit. Mus. — Bibl. Nat.); — Camillo Orsini, 1569; uniface; signed : T. R. (45 mill.; Berl. Mus.); — Ulisse di Teseo Aldrovandi; R. SENSIBVS NAEC IMIS RES EST NON PARVA REPONIT. Cock; signed T. R. on both sides (42 mill.; Brit. Mus.; Berl. Mus.); — Diana Ghisi (Sculptori); obv. DIANA

Horatio Tigrino.

MANTVANA. T. R. Bust to r.; R. AES INCIDIMVS (sic). Hand engraving figure of the Madonna and Child on an oval copper plate; signed : T. R. on both sides (diam. : 40 mill.); Brit. Mus. (obv.) Berl. Mus. (R.); — Horatio Tigrino; rev. HOC AGE Terminal figure of Athena and Greyhound bitch; 32 mill. (kindly communicated to me by Mr. Talbot W. Ready of London). Mr. Ready writes: "I can't help thinking that the T. R. master and Tim(oteo) Ref(ati) may be one and the same; judging perhaps not so much by this one of Tigrino as by that of Diego de Solis".

REFEREN (Bohem.). Bohemian Moneyer in the xith century.

REGA, FILIPO (Ital.). Gem-engraver of the latter end of the eighteenth century and early part of the nineteenth. He was born at Chieti, on 26. August 1761, his father's name was Giuseppe; his mother was Veneranda Ruggieri; and he was baptised in the Church of St. Erustino.

His father owned at Chieti a small provision shop and had earned by his probity the esteem of all his clients, but having suffered serious pecuniary loss through shipwreck at Sinigaglia, he removed to Naples in 1767, where a relative, an antiquity dealer, offered him employment.

Filippo began at an early age to develop artistic taste, which prompted his father to settle in Rome, where the youth might receive proper tuition, under the direction of Antonio Lichter, and his more famous son, Giovanni, with whom the family had become acquainted. After four years' study he ventured to compete for the San Luca prize, was at first unsuccessful, but was awarded later on a second prize in the competition of the third class, for a drawing of Raphael's famous Prophet in St. Augustine's Church.

He thereupon was advised by Lichter to learn modelling, in which he distinguished himself. In sculpture he won again the San Luca second prize, the subject being a Bas-relief representing Abraham receiving the three Angels in the plain of Mamre.

After devoting eight years to the study of drawing and modelling, Rega turned to Gem-engraving, in which art Lichter instructed him for three years.

Rega's family had now been residing in Rome for twelve years, when Giuseppe decided to return to Naples, and resume dealing in antiquities.

Filippo was twenty-six when in 1787 he was entrusted with his first official order. The King of the Two-Sicilies commissioned him to cut in stone the portrait of his son, the hereditary prince Francesco. This he executed on a fine chrysolite, which was surrounded by a frame of large brilliants to form a pendant, which was sent as a present to the Prince's betrothed, Clementina of Austria.

About this time, the British minister, Sir William Hamilton, who had known Filipo from his childhood, returned from a journey to London, and immediately entrusted the artist to engrave the portrait of the famous Lady Hamilton. This he did with such exquisite taste that he not only fully satisfied his patron and benefactor, but won a reputation which soon brought him to affluence and prosperity. Lord Bristol ordered a replica of Lady Hamilton's portrait in cameo; her husband had two more; and a fourth was made for Admiral Nelson.

The next work of merit was a portrait-cameo of Maria Clementina, consort of Francesco, on a stone of three strata, which gave great satisfaction, and was remarkable for the charming blending of the colours of the various strata. This production was followed by Portraits of Sir William Hamilton, Prince Augustus of Great Britain, son of George III., Ferdinand and Caroline, King and Queen of the Two-Sicilies.

In 1804 Rega was elected a Corresponding member of the French Institute.

When the French invaded Naples, Joseph Bonaparte ordered the artist to engrave his portrait. He did two Medallions, and cut in stone the portraits of all the members of the Royal family. On Murat's accession he also made several Portrait-camei of him, which were particularly successful. A portrait of Caroline Murat was executed in commission for the Emperor Napoleon I.

On his departure for Spain, Joseph Bonaparte sent Rega a decoration from Bayonne.

The artist married at 27 the daughter of D. Filippo Tagliolini, first modeller at the Vienna porcelain factory, whom the Empress Maria Theresa had sent to Naples on the request of her daughter, Queen Caroline, to undertake artistic work there. Caterina Taglioni was only 15 when she became Rega's wife. She was a talented harp player, and had the honour of playing before the Sovereigns at Caserta.

Rega's house at Naples became the rendez-vous of artists and notabilities. Kotzebue in his Viaggi d'Italia and In Napoli mentions both the clever gem-engraver, and his musical consort.

I possess an autograph letter of Rega, which refers to Kotzebue's work. It is dated, 6. February 1833.

The date of the artist's death is not known, as far as I have been able to ascertain.

Visconti pronounced Rega a most "admirable artist, some of his heads in intaglio rivalling the best of the ancients".

Rega usually signed his gems, PEGA. He excelled in treating mythological subjects. King confirms Visconti's opinion and especially praises "a Bacchante's head, that favourite subject with the ancients, full of life and wild inspiration, the treatment of the hair also being beyond all praise, and exactly in the true Greek manner". "This piece", continues King, "conspicuously attests his vast superiority over his rival, Marchant, who has treated the same subject, but in his usual tame and laboured style; whereas Rega's, although perfectly finished, displays the utmost freedom of touch. In my own collection is a head of Pallas by him, a hippocampus on the helmet, a complete Greek gem, on aqua-marine. A large Apollo-head (Beverley) displays the true Greek modelling, and even the unattainable velvety polish in the face. It is only the misconceived disposition of the hair that betrays its modern creation. Of his full-length figures, Ajax in despair, a bull recumbent by his side, is truly wonderful both for design and delicacy of finish. Like the others first quoted, it might well be taken for antique, but for his signature, ΡΕΓΑ, which always appears in the field of his gems. His camei also are equally impressed with the genuine antique stamp. Visconti makes a special exception in his favour when dissenting from Millin's eulogium upon the artists of the age, whom he considers far below the best names of the Cinque Cento, like Il Greco, Bernardo, and Belli, in boldness of manner and accuracy of drawing. "Besides, the latter had a style of their own, or at least that of their time, whilst the modern are mere servile copyists of the antique, both in their compositions and their forms" (King, Antique Gems and Rings, London, 1872, p. 441).

Rondot mentions a Portrait-medal by him of Jacques Charlet, seigneur d'Esby, councillor at the Parliament of Paris, dated 1692, and struck in commemoration of the foundation of the Church of Esby. This medal, which is described in Revue numismatique, 3rd series, vol. XIV, 1896, pp. 326-330, is of some importance artistically. There is also one of Guillaume de Nesmond, signed: A. In 1582 he was one of the competitors for the office of Engraver-general of the coins, which was allotted to Philippe Danfrie. In 1590 he engraved a Pattern Franc of Charles X. (illustrated) which Germain Pillon considered as the best piece among those which were executed by various engravers in open competition.

Franc of Charles X., by Philippe Regnault.

Mazerolle ascribes to this Engraver three medals, one cast and two struck, which present the same characteristics in the portrait of Charles X. as the Franc, and indeed the puncheon of the Franc served as a model for one of the struck medals: *Charles X. REGNIER, JEAN (French). Director of the Monnaie du Moulin, by whom is a Jeton, dated 1636, of the Cour des Monnaies.

REGNIER, PIERRE (French). Director of the Monnaie du Moulin, Controller-general of the "boîtes des monnaies", Medallist, and Engraver, was born about 1577, in office circ. 1607-1639, died after 1640. His father was Jean Regnier, purse maker in Paris. Pierre Regnier was apprenticed to Alexandre Olivier, 'to learn the art of engraving', and married his daughter Michelle after 1601. On the death of Olivier in 1607, he was entrusted with the direction of the Mill, except for a short interval during which Gilbert Olivier was in office (1608). Between 1608 and 1620 this artist engraved the dies for the Doubles and Deniers, which were struck in such enormous quantities at that period. In 1618 he was allowed by the Cour des Monnaies to engrave puncheons from models by Dupré for Piedtorts, but on Briot's protest he was ordered by the Council of State to limit himself to the duties of his office. During a temporary absence of Briot in 1612 he had already been entrusted with the cutting of the dies for Half and Quarter Francs intended for the Limoges Mint. In 1625 he agreed to continue his office at the mint alternately with René Olivier, his brother-in-law, who had successfully claimed his rights to his late father's privilege. In the same year, Regnier was instructed by the King's secretary, Henri Auguste de Loménie, to make commemorative medals of the marriage of Louis XIII's sister Henrietta Maria of France with Charles I. ("pièces de plaisir pour faire largesse"). Two types of these jetons are known (one illustrated).

Mazerolle ascribes to Pierre Regnier the Coronation Medals of Marie de' Medici (one obv. type illustrated), struck in 1610, just before Henri IV.'s departure on his Spanish expedition and Ravaillac's crime.

Marie de' Medici, 1610.

After Briot's flight to England, Regnier secured the post of Engraver-general, 1626-1628, but the Cour des Monnaies failed to ratify his nomination, Jean Darmand dit Lorfelin being installed in 1630. In 1627 he was commissioned to make "pièces de plaisir" for Louis Turgot, général des Monnaies, and some of the Portrait-medals of Louis XIII. issued between 1624 and 1628 appear to be by the same artist.

Medal of Nicolas de Bailleul, provost of the merchants of Paris, 1628.

On the murder of René Oliver, at the beginning of 1629, Jean Varin was appointed his successor and joint-assistant-engraver with Regnier notwithstanding the latter's objections. For ten years the two worked conjointly, but in 1639 Regnier resigned, and Varin became Engraver-general.

Mazerolle attributes to Pierre Regnier the following medals: 1610. Coronation of Marie de' Medici; obv. Bust facing, head to r.;

℞. SAECVLI.FOELICITAS. By him are further a large number of jetons, amongst which we find:

Jetons du Conseil d'Etat, 1609-1626, 1628, 1629, 1631, 1633 and 1635; — Jetons for the City of Paris, 1608, 1609, 1611-1613, 1624, 1625 and 1635; — Jetons for the Ordre du Saint-Esprit, 1602-1606, 1618-1631, and 1633; — Jetons for the Argenterie, 1614; — Conseil de Navarre, 1614, 1623 and 1624; — Ballet of Henriette Maria of France, 1615; — Claude Mangot, garde des Sceaux, 1617; — Guillaume du Vair, garde des sceaux, 1617; — Parties casuelles, 1619; — Menus-Plaisirs, 1619; — Henri de Schonberg, comte de Nanteuil, 1620 and 1622; — Chambre des Comptes of Paris, 1620; — Méri de Vic, garde des sceaux, 1622; — Nicolas Brulart de Sillery, chancellor of France, 1624; — Etienne d'Aligre, garde des sceaux, 1624; — Etienne d'Aligre, chancellor of France, 1625; — Jetons for the Cour des Monnaies, 1625-1634; — Claude de Mollier, sieur de Houssay, 1626; — Michel de Marillac, 1626; — Antoine Ruzé, marquis de Longjumeau, 1626; — Michel de Marillac, garde des sceaux, 1626; — Jetons for the King's Stables, with arms of Roger de Saint-Lary, duc de Bellegarde, 1631, 1633 and 1635; — Charles de l'Aubépine, seigneur de Préaux, garde des sceaux, 1632; — Claude de Bullion, garde des sceaux, 1632; — Claude de Bouthillier, 1632; — Pierre Séguier, garde des sceaux, 1633, &c.

The coins which Pierre Régner engraved are mostly copper Doubles and Deniers, but he was occasionally employed also on the silver currency. He strongly opposed Briot's introduction of machinery for the striking of coins in 1624, but apparently from personal motives.

He frequented the 'Domingos Sequeira' industrial school at Leiria from 1887 to 1889, where he learned drawing, and began to study engraving on copper and bronze, for which art he manifested quite early a marked aptitude. In 1891 he went to Lisbon, where until 1895 he followed the evening classes of the Academy of Fine Arts. In 1894 he entered the Mint as a pupil of the School of engraving, directed by the clever Medallist, Venancio Pedro de Macedo Alves, and began to work as a Line- and Medal-engraver.

Rego is an excellent Engraver, with a perfect mastery of the graving-tool. He signs A. REGO in full, and sometimes only with his initials, A. R., or quite shortly R.

Among his productions I may mention : Medal of the Society for prevention of cruelty to Children; — Antonio de Lisboa, 1895; —

REHN, BERNHARD (Germ.). Goldsmith of Bamberg, who in 1584 made a cast reproduction of Valentin Maler's medal of Ernst von Mengersdorf, bishop of Bamberg (Erman, op. cit., p. 58, note).

REHNEN, HEINRICH VON (Germ.). Mint-master, Medallist, and Die-cutter of the latter part of the sixteenth century and first two decades of the seventeenth. He was a native of Oldenburg, and his name occurs also as VON REHNE, or VON REHN. As early as 1584 he worked for Duke Augustus of Saxony, and in that same year he was transferred to Coburg in the service of Duke John Casimir. In 1587 we find him employed at the Dresden Mint as 'Conterfacter' and Die-cutter. Ten years later (1597) he was appointed by the Margrave of Brandenburg Joachim Frederick, Mint-master at Cöln-on-the-Spree (Berlin). On a Half Thaler of 1595, with busts of Christian II., John George and Augustus of Saxony, he signed KR, but his usual signature at that period, and on the currency of Brandenburg, is a swan with closed wings. On the death of Hans Biener, Mint-master at Dresden, Heinrich von Rehnen was called upon to succeed him, and he filled this post from 1605 to 1611. There he signed HR.

John George I. of Saxony.

Among this clever Medallist's works I have noted : 1586/7. Augustus, Prince Elector of Saxony ; R. Christian (A. gilt. Gotha Museum); — 1591 (?). Anna Maria, Consort of Frederick William, Duke of Saxony (A. Altenburg); — 1591 (?). Frederick William and Anna Maria (A. Weimar); — 1592. Portrait-badge of Frederick Oval Portrait-medal of Duke John George of Saxony (Tentzel, 32, III; illustrated).

Heinrich von Rehmen's successor as Mint-master at Dresden was Hans Jacob, installed on 27. July 1624. Among the coins he issued, and possibly prepared the dies of, are the second to sixth types of Christian II., Duke of Saxony's series, as well as the first to third types of John George I.

REICH, DAVID (Swiss). Goldsmith, Medallist and Coin-engraver of St. Gallen, born in 1715, died there in 1771. He was employed at the Mint there, and his initials *D. from 1729 to 1738. The initials GR occur, undoubtedly as those of the Engraver, on a Quarter-Thaler or Half-Gulden of 1738, issued by Schinner, Master of the Mint, whose arms are on the obv.; also on Fifteen Kreuzer pieces of 1730, 1732 and 1738; Six Kreuzer pieces of 1732; and on Half Batzen of 1730.

REICH, JOHANN CHRISTIAN (Germ.). Medallist, born at Eisenberg (Saxe-Altenburg) about 1740, settled at Fürth in 1758, and died in 1814. He probably began as an assistant to a Counter-manufacturer, but started business on his own account about 1770, as shown by various counters bearing his name, some of which refer to the famine of 1771/1772. He had a factory of organs, clocks, mathematical instruments, musical boxes, and other objects. Of that period is a series of medals by him dated 1771 and 1772, and commemorating also that famine (Hauschild, Beitrag zur neueren Münz- und Medaillengeschichte vom XV Jahrhundert bis jetzt (1805), nos 2863-2869. — Pfeiffer and Ruland, Pestilentia in nummis, nos 133-159); further, a tin medal of better work, dated 1773, with Hope and Noah's ark on obv. and on R. Altar with obelisk, and another, undated, obv. 'Hörst Du Böses schweige still. Sags nicht nach es schadet viel'. A mouth and two ears; and R. 'Wer ohne Hader leben will muss hören viel und schweigen still. Denn darum ist der Mensch gebohren mit einem Mundt und zweyen Ohren'.

Portrait-medal of J. C. Reich.

But the first medallic works, really worthy of the name, which Reich executed, are two medals, dated 1773, on the Abolition of the Order of Jesuits and their Expulsion from Prussia, both with the portrait of Pope Clement XIV. (Ampach, nos 6521-22). Then follow numerous other medals, among which I will only name the following which have come under my notice : Memorial medal of Clement XIV., 1774 ; — Election of Pius VI., 1775 ; — Accession of Pius VI., 1775 ; — Peace of Teschen, with busts of Emperor Joseph II. and King Frederick II., 1779 ; — Remission of the Edict of Tolerance by Joseph II., 1782 (3 var.); — Defence of Gibraltar, with bust of George Augustus Elliot, Lord Heathfield, 1783 (illustrated); — Memorial medal of Duke Max Julius of Brunswick, 1785 (3 or 4 var.); — Portrait-medal of the aeronaut Blanchard, Defence of Gibraltar, 1783.

1785; — Memorial medals of Frederick the Great, 1786 (several varieties : I have seen an unfinished proof struck in steel); — Accession of King Frederick William II. of Prussia, 1786 (2 or 3 var.); — Birth of Charles Louis, Crown Prince of Bavaria, 1786; — Proclamation medal of the same King, 1786 (Aus den Flammen wieder auflebend); — Annexation of the Principalities of Ansbach and Bayreuth, 1791; — Frederick William II. as Margrave of Ansbach and Bayreuth, 1792; — Memorial medal of the Prussian strategist Joh. Joachim von Zieten, 1786; — Catherine II., Czarina of Russia, 1787; — Duke Charles William Ferdinand of Brunswick, on his suppression of the riots in Holland and capture of Amsterdam, 1787 (2 var.); — Prince Frederick Josiah of Coburg's Victory over the Turks at Foksan, 1789; — K. K. General Field Marshal Laudon's Capture of Belgrade, 1789; — Archduke Charles of Austria (R. SEINEM HERMANN DAS DANKBARE VATERLAND); — Pope Pius VI., 1789; — Coronation Medal of Leopold II., 1790 (a large medal); — Leopold II.'s Coronation as King of Hungary, 1790; — Coronation at Prague of Leopold II. as King of Bohemia, 1791; — Convention of Pillnitz, 1791 (2 var.); — Leopold II. and Frederick William II., 1791, with their busts, on the same Convention, 1791; — View of Eisenberg, the Medallist's native town, on his Visit, in 1788 (obv. illustrated); — Coronation of Emperor Francis II, at Frankfort-on-Main, 1792 (sev. var.); — Freiherr Prince von Hardenberg, 1792; — Landgrave William IX. of Hesse-Cassel, on the recapture of Frankfort from the French, 1792; — Counters with busts of Louis XV., Louis XVI., Marie Antoinette, etc.; — Memorial Medal of Louis XVI., 1793 (sev. var.); — Visit of Frederick William III., of Prussia with Queen Louise to Fürth, 1799; — Peace of Luneville; — Napoleon at Austerlitz; — Frederick William III.; — Napoleon I.; — Nelson; — Suvarow; — etc. Some of these medals were engraved in conjunction with Johann Christian Reich's son, Johann Martin, by whom is the R. of the artist's Portrait-medal, reproduced above.

To the above list I might add still further: — Coronation of Joseph II., 1764 (signed: R. F.); — School for the poor at Fürth, 1775; — Thanksgiving Jeton, 1773; — Peace of Kutschuk Kainardschi, between Russia and Turkey, 1774; — Preliminaries of the Peace of Foksan, 1774; — State of the World in 1778; — Peace of Teschen, 1779; — Edict of Tolerance promulgated, 1782; — End of the American War of Independence, 1783; — Drought of 1784 (sev. var.); — Member's Jewel of the famous Lodge 'Minerva of the three Palms', Leipzig; — Peace of Lunéville, 1801; — Stadthauptmann Majer of Hall in Suabia; — Alexander, Margrave of Brandenburg; — St. Rupert; — Jetons for Salzburg, Uffenheim, etc.; — Charles, Primate of the Rhine Confederation, 1807; — Nic. Schlimbach, 1808; — Peace of Versailles, etc., and numerous Personal medals, also Portrait-medallions in wax, one of which I have seen of Alexander von Humboldt.

J. C. Reich's signature occurs in various forms on his medals: R.; — R. F.; — REICH; — I. C. REICH FE.; — I. C. REICH F.; — IOH. CHR. REICH and on J. M. Reich's Portrait-medal of his father he is designated: IOH. CHRIST. REICH. H(och). F(ürstlich). ANSPACH. HOF. METALLIER (sic!).

One can only confirm Bolzenthals's appreciation of this Medallist's work, that it does not rank very high in artistic merit.

REICH, JOHANN MATTHIAS (Germ.). Medallist; son of Johann Christian Reich, and his collaborator from about 1789 to 1800, was born at Fürth in 1768. Meissner states that many of the medals signed R. or REICH, and issued between 1789 and 1800, as well as numerous Counters, were the work of both father and son conjointly. The signatures I. M. R. and I. M. REICH occur on the R $\zeta$ . of Johann Christian's Portrait-medal, 1789: DES VATTERS WERTH VOM SOHN VEREHRT-DENKMAL KINDLICHER LIEBE VON I. M. REICH 1789. The Portrait on the obv. (illustrated under J. C. Reich) is by the father. Hennin ascribes to the son Memorial medals of Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette, 1793, signed R. (sev. var.); Louis XVI., 1793; Louis XVII., etc. and says that he emigrated in 1800 to the United States, settling at Philadelphia.

REICHEL, JOHANN JACOB (Germ.). Medallist at Warsaw, towards the end of the eighteenth century. He signed his medallic productions: I. R. or I. I. R. He is probably the same Engraver, whom Schlickeysen calls JACOB REICHEL, and who was working at St. Petersburg, circ. 1815. There is by this artist a series of Portrait-medals of the Kings of Poland; and one of Sigismund III., King of Sweden, is described in Hildebrand's Catalogue of Swedish medals, I, p. 72, n° 49.

REIHL, CHRISTOPH (Germ.). Mint-warden at Mannheim, 1746.

REIMANN, MARTIN (Germ.). Mint-master at Coburg, 1633-1639; possibly the same, or his son, of the same name, was Mint-master at Saalfeld, 1658-1672. The coins (Thaler, Ducat, Gulden), dated 1673, and reproduced in Tentzel (Saxonia numismatica, Pl. 1, nos III, IV and VI), are signed MR, except the Ducat. They belong to the time of Ernest the Pious, after Duke Frederick had undertaken the regency of the newly annexed Altenburg district. Reimann may have been the Engraver as well as the Issuer of these coins.

REIMER, HANS (Germ.). Goldsmith of Munich, a native of Mecklenburg, who worked circ. 1557-1598 for Dukes Albert V.

(1550-1579) and his successor, William V. (1579-1598). He cannot properly be called a Medallist, but he cast Presentation medals (possibly after his own models) and mounted them as Pendants, &c.

Between 1557 and 1597 the Bavarian National Archives contain many records of payments made to him for all kind of goldsmith's and medallic work : 1560 (20 'Eerpfenninge', one of the weight of 5 Ducats), 1561 (10 large gold 'Gnadenpfenninge' with portrait of Albert V., and several other medals), 1562 (10 'Gnadenpfenninge'), 1565 (15 'Gnadenpfenningen'), 1566 ('Ehrpfenning für den Ruedolf'), 1567 (1 'Gnadenpfenning' of a value of 10 Kronen), 1568 (various 'Ehrenpfenninge'), 1569, 1570, 1571 ('Gnadenpfenninge'), 1573 (10 large and 10 small 'Gnadenpfenninge', etc.), 1574 (various 'Gnadenpfenninge', etc.), 1575 ("zur Giessung etlicher guldiner Pfening"), 1576 (3 'Ehrpfenninge'; also 19 large and 23 small 'Ehrpfenninge', and a gold "Pfening" dedicated to the Princely Counsellor Sebastian Ridler in Burghausen), 1578 (30 large and 50 small 'Gnadenpfenninge' with the Duke's portrait), 1581 ("per mererlei Arbeit" for Duke William), 1585 ("per Macherlohn etlicher goldner Pfeninge mit Bildniss Herzogs Wilhelm. One of these Portrait-medals may have been used in the Pendant of the three brothers, illustrated above), 1589 ('Ehr' or 'Gnadenpfenninge' with portrait of Duke William), 1591 (24 'Gnadenpfenninge'), 1594, 1596, 1597 (for goldsmith's work), etc.

From comparison with a honestone Medallion, signed HR in the Ducal Library at Gotha, Dr Habich has been able to ascribe to Hans Reimer a medallic jewel of Duke Ernest of Bavaria, archbishop of Cologne (1583-1612) and bishop of Liège (1581-1612). This medal (Medaillen und Münzen des Gesamtthauses Wittelsbach, I, p. 82, n° 565; obv. illustrated) which forms part of a Presentation Pendant of the three brothers, Dukes William V., Ferdinand, and Ernest, to the Duchess their mother, has on obv. a bust of Duke Ernest, and on R. Orb and a representation of the Fall.

D<sup>r</sup> Julius Cahn has further attributed to Hans Reimer a Medallion Jewel, in the British Museum, of the Emperor Rudolf II., 1584; signed HR, lozenge shaped, 30 × 30 mill. (Berliner Münzblätter, pp. 329-331; Numismatic Chronicle, 1904, p. 59, Pl. vi, 5).

Following the suggestions of J. V. Kull, P. J. Meier, A. Erman and other writers, I said (Vol. II, p. 369) that the monogram IA on Portrait-medals of Duke Albert V. of Bavaria, 1554, has been misread for HR and that these medals, as well as those of Margarethe von Fraunhofen (Beierlein, Berühmte Bayern, part. V, Pl. I, 10), Wilhelm Prant von Pranthausen (in Vienna Medal Cabinet), and Hans von Pfaffenhausen, † 1563 (medal known to exist, but of which no specimen has yet been found) were the work of Hans Reimer. D<sup>r</sup> Habich, who has had the opportunity of carefully examining several specimens of these medals is absolutely convinced that the monogram is H. R. and the attribution to Hans Reimer therefore falls to the ground. The name of HANS AESSLINGER, sculptor to the court of Albert V. has been suggested as that of the artist, by the same writer, but without any material proof in evidence.

As to the Portrait-medal of Frankenstein (Erman, Pl. viii, 5) which is also signed H. R., the work is again quite different to that of Hans Reimer, and Erman's attribution to Hans Reinhard Junior is possibly, or even probably, correct.

Hans Reimer was undoubtedly a very clever and gifted craftsman.

REINHARD, HANS (Germ.). One of the best known of German Renaissance medallists, whose works, so far as they exist, range from 1535 to 1568. To Dr E. G. Gersdorf is the honour due of having discovered his name, in the Annals of the Leipzig Corporation of Goldsmiths, as the author of fine medallic works, the earliest of which were executed in commission for Dukes Johann

probably by himself, 1568.

Friedrich and Maurice of Saxony, and Cardinal Albrecht von Brandenburg. These fine productions are variously signed: H.R., or HR, and also ·HR, which letters, on Tentzel's suggestion, had formerly been attributed to a certain Heinrich Reitz, an altogether imaginary person.

Hans Reinhard the Elder was probably born at Wittenberg, not much later than 1510; he spent there his early life, and may have been a pupil of Lucas Cranach, whose influence is strongly felt in his works; he settled at Leipzig at latest in 1539, where he married a widow with fair means, became a pupil of the goldsmith

The Fall.

Treutler, and 1547 was made himself a 'Meister'. He is supposed to have died on 29. January 1581.

His medallic productions occur in box-wood medallions, silver, bronze, and lead medals. The list of his works I am able to give here is far from complete, but it comprises all that is known up to the present, including the most recent additions which Prof. Dr Pick has been kind enough to bring to my knowledge.

1535. Johann Friedrich der Grossmütige, Duke of Saxony; box-wood medallion, with reverse (Gotha Museum); — The same, in silver, gilt in parts, with mount and loop for suspension (Weimar); — The same; Reverse type only (Leipzig University); — Another, (Berlin; obv. illustrated; Trésor de num., 20, 5); — Another, unpublished variety, was sold by Messrs Sotheby, Wilkinson and Hodge, Hawkins sale, 31. March 1909, for £ 8.15.0; — Boxwood Portrait-medallion of the same (Gotha Museum); — Cardinal Albrecht von Brandenburg, archbishop of Mayence (Berlin; Heraeus, Bildnisse der regierenden Fürsten und berühmter Männer, Wien, 1828; Pl. 1, 9; obv. illustrated); — 1536. The Fall and Crucifixion; executed in commission for Prince Elector Johann Emperor Charles V., 1537.

Friedrich (Berlin; two varieties illustrated). Numerous varieties and dates exist of this medal, which is known in two sizes, 66 and 54 mill. A proof or trial-piece in lead without any chasing and engraved inscription, was exhibited by Dr Pick at the '3. Deutsche Kunstgewerbe-Ausstellung, Dresden, 1906', from the Gotha Museum, with three other specimens, one in silver, lettering cast with the type, &c., the second, silver gilt, undated, engraved inscription, and in unfinished state, and the third, without border and with inscription in field, 1536; — 1537. Charles V. (Berlin; illustrated; Trésor, 20, 5). This medal occurs in silver and copper alloy; — Charles V. and his brother, king Ferdinand. These portraits, although of beautiful execution, were evidently done after paintings, and not from life; — 1538-1539. Various Religious Medals: Moses and the burning bush; R. Adoration of the three holy Kings (Berlin). Several varieties known (one illustrated); — Abraham's sacrifice of his son Isaac; R. The Crucifixion (Dresden Exhibition, from the Steeger collection; R. gilt, with loop and ring for suspension). A specimen, dated 1539, was represented in the Felix collection. — 1539. Allegorical Representation from the Apocalypse; obv. Christ as judge of the World; R. God enthroned amidst the saints (Berlin Museum); — 1539. Friedrich Myconius, a theologian of Gotha (R. specimen in Gotha; R. by another artist; another, in Berlin Museum); — King Ferdinand (Berlin; Trésor, 23, 7); — 1541. Christian III., King of Denmark; — 1547. Satirical medal, described by Gersdorf, but not by Erman; Cardinal and Fool (vide Dr. Pick's monograph); — Charles V. (Berlin Museum). Several varieties are known. One lozenge-shaped was sold at Nuremberg, October 1906 (Sale Catalogue C. F. Gebert, lot 545; illustrated); — 1544. The so-called "Dreifaltigkeitsthaler" executed in commission for Duke Maurice of Saxony. Cast in silver; some of the figures being soldered on and the details having been finished with the chisel. Only seven originals are known to Dr Jul. Cahn (June 1905); those in the cabinets of Weimar, Gotha, Dresden, and Berlin; the Engelhardt specimen (Catal., n° 242), and that of the Pogge-Dr Belli collections, now in the cabinet of Herr Carl Nathan Mayer of Offenbach. I may add an eighth specimen, which was exhibited at the Burlington Fine Arts Club 1906

Exhibition of German Renaissance Art. This medallion was imitated in the seventeenth century in the Netherlands, in the technique of Pieter van Abeele or his school, and it is evident that the specimens reproduced by Van Mieris, Nederlandsche Vorsten, III, p. 87, and Bolzental, Pl. XII, were such copies and not originals. It is however now known also that Hans Reinhard himself made reproductions, of three different years, for Duke Maurice's successor, Prince Elector Augustus of Saxony; one is dated 1561 (in

Mr. Ad. E. Cahn's cabinet, June 1905; described in Bl. für Mzf Freunde, 1905, p. 3341; 103 mill. diam.; weight: 272, 5 gr.); a second one, of 1569 (in the Victoria and Albert Museum, South Kensington, London) shows various alterations, and the body of Christ much larger; diam. 116 mill.; and the third one, with date 1574 (Metzler-Frankfurter Kunstgewerbeverein collections) is entirely modified in the type as well as in the inscriptions (reproduced by Dr. Jul. Cahn, Katalog der Sammlung Metzler, Pl. XIII, Obv. The so-called 'Dreifaltigkeit' Medal, by Hans Reinhard.

71). This specimen is signed HR and appears to be the last known work of the great Master. — To his son, Hans Reinhard junior, another 'Dreifaltigkeit' medal, made by order of Ulrich Mordeisen, a Leipzig lawyer, is attributed by Dr. B. Pick; this has on the R. Christ with the banner of Victory. — At the Dresden Fine Arts Exhibition, 1906, a silver-gilt specimen of the 1544 'Dreifaltigkeitsthaler', from Gotha, was shown; the crucifix and sceptre are soldered on this piece, which is very much chased.

Dr Pick suggests that Hans Reinhard executed his 'Trinity Medal' while serving at Leipzig as an apprentice under Treutler.

Dated 1544 is also a Portrait-medal of Hieronymus Loter, architect to the Leipzig Council (lead; Gotha) which has been tentatively attributed to Reinhard; a reverse of a similar medal, in silver, is in the Werner collection at Leipzig. Of the same year Erman describes another satirical medal by the Master, with Cardinal's Head and Head of a Fool; "effigies carinum mundi" (Dannenberg).

Rev. The so-called ' Dreifaltigkeit ' Medal, by Hans Reinhard.

Between 1547 and 1581 there are no signed medals by Hans Reinhard, but Dr Pick suggests the attribution to him of a medalet, dated 1568, bearing the Master's own portrait (R. gilt. Gotha; illustrated from a plaster cast kindly sent me by Dr Pick).

In the Erbstein Sale Catalogue a Portrait-medal of Marcus Krampf, 1562, is described as in the art of Hans Reinhardt.

Domanig gives to this artist a medal of King Ludwig II. of Hungary and his consort Maria, and another of King Christian II. of Denmark, but neither is signed, and I find no other writer confirming this attribution. Hans Reinhard found many imitators, especially of his religious medals. Among the best of these imitations are those by the "Joachimsthal Masters".

"An artist well-acquainted with the technicalities of goldsmith's work could alone have produced such works as those of Hans Reinhard", says Bolzenthall, and Dr B. Pick remarks that "he is the only Saxon artist, of the best period of German Medallistic Art, whose works are worthy to be placed by the side of those of his contemporaries of South Germany". Pinchart calls him the cleverest German Chaser of the time.

REINHARD, HANS (the Younger) (Germ.). Son of the last, who took the civic oath at Leipzig, 10. November 1584, as 'Hans Reinhard, aurifaber, Johannis filius', and was still living on 22. November 1619. He continued his father's business, but does not appear to have produced anything remarkable. The 'religious medals', modelled by Hans Reinhard the elder were imitated a great deal in various places, and most successfully by the so-called "Joachimsthaler Masters". Some of the imitations may have been issued by Hans Reinhard junior, to whom Erman ascribes a Portrait-medal, dated 1582, of Paul Frankenstein (Berlin Museum; illustrated), the style of which bears analogy to a Portrait-medal of the Breslau ecclesiastic Ambrosius Moiban and his consort Anna.

Dr Pick in his Catalogue of German Medals exhibited at the 'Dresden Kunstgewerbe-Ausstellung', 1906, has described under the name of Hans Reinhard the younger the following medals: 'Dreifaltigkeitsmedaille' (R. Christ with the banner of Victory), Medal executed by order of Ulrich Mordeisen, a Leipzig lawyer (R.); — Christian I. and Sophia (R. John George and Elizabeth of Brandenburg, 1588). This medal, says the writer above-named, is attributed by some, Erman amongst them, to the Court-goldsmith Heinrich Rapusch of Berlin. Bolzenthal, on the other hand, ascribed it to Heinrich Reitz Junr = Hans Reinhard Junior. It is signed HR. This monogram occurs on medals, with portraits of Paul Frankenstein.

Charles I. of Great Britain, and his Queen, 1636, commemorating the 'Treaty between the English and Dutch by which the latter were to pay £ 30,000 for the permission to fish in the British seas'. The British Museum possesses four varieties (one illustrated). They are all cast and chased. The compilers of Medallic Illustrations, &c.,

John George of Brandenburg and consort.

and of the portfolios of Plates xxiii, n<sup>os</sup> 5, 6, ascribe them to Heinrich Reitz junior = Hans Reinhard Junior.

To the same artist may belong also a Memorial Medal of Charles I., 1649 (Med. Ill., I, <sup>350</sup>/<sub>200</sub>) with busts of the King and Queen similar to those on the Dutch Fishery Medal, 1636. The Portrait of Charles I., cut from one of these medals, sometimes occurs, having possibly served as an ornament to a snuff-box or book cover.

Bolzenthall states that Heinrich Reitz Jun<sup>r</sup> = Hans Reinhard Junior flourished during the first half of the seventeenth century, and that he worked chiefly for Princes of the Houses of Brandenburg and Brunswick. He mentions several medals of the Dukes of Brunswick, as executed by him, and among them, a Memorial of Duke Heinrich Julius, and another of Duke Friedrich Ulrich, on the Siege of Brunswick, 1615, Dutch Fishery Medal, 1636.

A Marriage medal, dated 1626, of the Emperor Ferdinand II. and Eleonora of Mantua, is likewise signed HR.

He has left, says King, a considerable number of works, among which one of the best is a Portrait of Charles XII. of Sweden, three-quarter face, the drawing of which is correct. A veiled head of Faustina Senior (cornelian intaglio); — Head of Lucius Verus (cornelian intaglio); — Head of Charles I. of England (cornelian intaglio) are also known from Tassie's reproductions, but, remarks King, "all Reisen's intagli are much deficient in finish, owing to the excessive rapidity of his mode of execution".

Seaton, his pupil, surpassed him greatly. Claus, and Smart, are also said to have been apprenticed with him.

It has been suggested that Reisen also cut coin-dies, or at least a silver Pattern for a Neuchâtel Pistole, 1712, signed R. (Von Schroet-ter, Die Münzprägung in Neuenburg, etc., Zeits. f. Num., XXII, p. 73, note 2).

His productions are numerous, but among the best known is one commemorating the Second Centenary of the Augsburg Confession, 1755. These Medallion Boxes contain usually a series of coloured wood engravings, representing celebrated personages, or events connected with the subject of the medal, and some are most interesting. The signature is : ABR. REMSHART EXC. A common Medallion Box has on obv. a Bust of Ferdinand III. and on R a View of Augsburg. This signature occurs on two Clichés, representing the Napoleon Museum, 1804; one showing the Laocoön, in one of the salons, and the other the Apollo Belvedere (Edwards, Napoleon Medals, p. 17; Pl. v, 8-9; Bramsen, op. cit., nos 369, 372). Possibly the modeller of these clichés was Jean Martin Renaud (q. v.).

RENAUD, JEAN MARTIN (French). Named Renard by Rondot; Sculptor and Medallist, born in 1746 at Sarreguemines, settled in Paris about 1771, and died there in 1821. Several of this artist's busts are exhibited at the Versailles Museum and in the Museum at Valenciennes are four bas-reliefs: Crushing of the Titans; — Niobe's family; — Feast of the Olympian gods; — Nymphs dancing.

The Hague Medal Cabinet possesses two Portrait-medallions in terra-cotta by J. M. Renaud of J. D. Van der Capellen, 1784 (Van Loon, 611), and Marx (Les Médailleurs modernes à l'Exposition universelle de 1900, Pl. 2) reproduces nine models by this artist: Head of Lysimachus; — Leda and the Swan; — Bust of the Empress Josephine (?); — Head in Phrygian helmet; — Satyr, full-length, holding thyrsus and wine-cup; — Male Portrait; — Female head, from the antique; — Mask, facing; — Head of Priam.

RENÉ I. (French). Titular King of Naples, born at Angers, son of Louis II., Duke of Anjou and Count of Provence. On the death of his father-in-law, Duke of Lorraine, he in 1431 claimed the dukedom; was defeated and imprisoned; bought his liberty and the dukedom in 1437, in which year he also made an ineffectual attempt to make good his claim to the throne of Naples and Sicily; settled down in Provence and devoted himself to literature and art and to developing the country (1409-1480).

King René is said to have engraved Medals as well as Gems, and M. Babelon (Pierres gravées, 1894, p. 266) makes the following statement : “ Une opinion qui ne manque pas d’une certaine vraisemblance prétend que le roi René d’Anjou lui-même s’exerça à la gravure sur pierres fines. Des camées exécutés de son temps ornaient un beau reliquaire de Saint-Nicolas-du-Port, près de Nancy, et l’on a quelques raisons de croire que René les avait sculptés ou, tout au moins, en avait donné le dessein ou le modèle. Ce qui est bien certain, c’est que le bon roi, protecteur si ardent des lettres et des arts, grava des médailles, et nous savons que ce genre de gravure va presque toujours de pair avec la glyptique. René, qui aborda tous les genres, la peinture, la sculpture, la miniature, a dû d’autant moins négliger la glyptique que très souvent les personnages de ses compositions picturales ont leurs vêtements ornés de camées. Dans son tableau du Buisson ardent, à la cathédrale d’Aix, un camée où figure le Christ bénissant, brille sur le casque de saint Maurice ; la fibule du manteau de l’archange saint Michel est un camée représentant Adam et Eve ; l’Enfant Jésus, enfin, tient à la main un camée à l’effigie de sa Mère. N’est-il pas démontré par là que le roi René, comme Charles V et le duc de Berry, affectionnait particulièrement les pierres gravées ? Et comme il joignait à ses goûts d’amateur les talents d’un artiste consommé, n’est-il pas naturel de penser qu’il s’essaya en ce genre d’ouvrage comme dans tous les autres ? L’Inventaire du Château de Pau, rédigé en 1561, renferme la mention d’un camée avec son portrait : “ Une agathe où est enlevé le roy René de Cécyle, et douze petis esmerauldes alentour ”.

The Italian medallists Pietro da Milano, and Francesco Laurana, who worked at the court of King René, executed Portrait-medals of him and his Queen, but I do not think any medals or gems, known to be his work, have as yet come to light, although there are many in existence of his period and which probably originated at his court.

RICCI, A. (Ital.). Gem-engraver of Florence, second and third quarters of the eighteenth century.

RICCI, DOMENICO (Ital.). Gem-engraver of the sixteenth century ; a pupil of Matteo del Nassaro.

RICCIARELLI DA VOLTERRA, DANIELE (Ital.). Sculptor of the sixteenth century (1509-1566). He modelled and cast in bronze a portrait head of Michael Angelo, "probably that now preserved in the Halls of the Conservatori at the Capitol, and which has been wrongly ascribed to Angelo's own hand" (Fortnum, Bronzes in the South Kensington Museum, Int. CXXIV).

RICCIO surname of ANDREA BRIOSCO (Vol. I, N. E., p. 283). This artist is specially famous for his well-known Paschal candlestick in the Santo at Padua, begun in 1507 and set up in 1516. For the choir screen of the same church he executed two reliefs, David dancing before the Ark, and his Contest with Goliath. The Tomb of the brothers Della Torre at Verona is another very fine production of this eminent sculptor, who however 'excelled in works of decorative minor art'.

"The medal with his likeness", says von Fabriczy, "in the inscription of which the Italian nickname derived from his curly hair is translated into its Latin equivalent, 'Crispus', is, it is true, not signed. Nevertheless, not only because of the similarity in the features with those of the bust in relief on the candelabrum in the church of the Santo, but equally owing to the resemblance of style between the two works, no doubt has ever existed that the medal is the work of Riccio himself. It shows the same strongly defined conception of the type, the decided characterisation bordering on the rude, which frequently obtrude themselves in his figures; nevertheless the work is full of power and life, and still entirely in the spirit of the Quattrocento. On some of the other medals conjecturally ascribed to this master, that of Girolamo Donato, the Venetian envoy at the Curia, has the greatest evidence of probability in its favour, since it was for Donato that Riccio made in 1492 the five reliefs (still preserved in the Academia at Venice) for the altar in the Church of the Servites in his native city. Less by the portrait, which is somewhat tame for our artist, than by the excellently composed and cast reverse with the figure (difficult, however, to explain) of a handsome youth sleeping, from whom two Cupids are engaged in trying to steal divine wisdom from a half-opened book, the medal reveals many points of resemblance with other allegorical scenes in Riccio's plaques; indeed, it has itself been repeated in the form of a plaque (Italian Medals, Enj. ed., p. 63).

Prof. Bode (Die italienischen Bronzen, Berlin, 1904) describes a number of bronze statuettes by Riccio (n° 313-329) and the following Plaques: Judith holding the head of Holofernes; signed: A.R. All these are reproduced in Prof. Bode's admirable work.

A Family of Satyrs
(in the G. Dreyfus Collection)
Reduced.

The Dreyfus Collection includes the following specimens of Riccio's Plaquettes : Entombment of Christ (2 var.) ; — Triumph of a Hero ; — Engagement before city walls ; — Vulcan forging the arrows of Cupid (2 var.) ; — St George slaying the Dragon (2 var.) ; — Hippomenes and Atlanta ; — Judith ; — Allegory on Love ; — Allegory on Fortune ; — Allegory on Fame (2 var.) ; — Fame ; — Antique Sacrificial Scene ; — Death of Lucretia (illustrated) ; — Allegory on Virtue ; — Tritons and Nereids (illustrated), etc.

M. Gaston Migeon in his description of the Dreyfus Collection in Les Arts (August 1908) writes : “ De Riccio, les plaquettes sont un peu le côté faible. Dans ces œuvrettes, il copie l'antique ou reproduit les compositions d'autres maîtres. C'est une face de son art tout à fait industrielle. Elles portent souvent au revers R ou R<sup>o</sup>I. Nous retrouvons ici la plaquette si connue de la Judith, d'après le dessin de Mantegna, gravé par Mocetto. L'épreuve de la collection Dreyfus porte la marque rare R<sup>o</sup>I. La Mise au Tombeau, où tout le groupe central, la Vierge évanouie, soutenue par les saintes femmes, est emprunté à la célèbre estampe de Mantegna ; voici encore saint Georges à cheval tuant le Dragon, le Triomphe d'un héros, et la foule des allégories sur la Fortune, la Vertu ou l'Amour. Toute cette dernière série de plaquettes allégoriques ne sont, à la vérité, que des revers de médailles dont les droits sont pour la plupart inconnus, et beaucoup des éléments décoratifs qu'elles renferment se retrouvent dans un des bas-reliefs du tombeau de Della Torre, qui se trouve au musée du Louvre ”.

The fine Plaques representing the Entombment, St. Jérôme, and a Family of Satyrs reproduced here, are in the celebrated Collection of M. Gustave Dreyfus in Paris, and were figured in the January 1908 number of Les Arts.

The Portrait-plaquette of Dr Chauveau is a remarkable work. Dr Lacronique describes it thus in Gazette numismatique française, 1905, p. 20: "La physionomie si expressive et si imposante de Chauveau est d'une ressemblance parfaite. Cette tête olympienne,

où se lit à la fois l'intelligence, la vigueur et la bonté, surmonte un buste puissant dont les épaules sont courbées moins par l'âge que par le travail. Elle est couronnée d'une abondante chevelure dont on ne peut soupçonner, sur la médaille, l'éclatante blancheur, tant la figure est restée celle d'un homme dans tout l'épanouissement d'une verte et forte maturité. — La scène du revers se passe dans le laboratoire physiologique de Chauveau à l'école vétérinaire de Lyon. Les appareils représentés, le dispositif employé, les aides, le cheval en expérience, tout est d'une exactitude absolue. Cet ensemble met en évidence l'ingéniosité et l'originalité que le savant apporta dans ses moyens de recherches, ainsi que le lieu où naquit et grandit sa renommée".

D<sup>r</sup> Paul Richer designed the obv. of the official medal of the 15th International Medical Congress at Lisbon in 1906, which was modelled by Simões of Almeida. A specimen was exhibited at the Salon, 1908, with a Medal of the Congress of Lyons, and a Portrait-plaquette of Bénédict Tessier.

RICHERDES, HERMANN (Germ.). Mint-master at Wunstorf, 1568-1569; was imprisoned for issuing false money; but later his initials HR occur on coins of Münden, 1577, proving that he was reinstated at the latter Mint.

RICHIER, JACOB (French). Sculptor, born at Saint-Mihiel, Lorraine, in 1585, settled first at Vizille, and later at Grenoble, where he married in 1615. He was in the service of the Duc de Lesdiguières, for whom he executed numerous works of sculpture. His signature I.R.F. 1613 occurs on a Portrait-medallion of Marie de Vignon, marquise de Treffort, which is reproduced by Mazerolle, Pl. XXXVII, n° 759.

The date of this artist's activity is placed between 1610 and 1641, but the year of his death is not known.

RICHIER, JEAN (French). Sculptor, born at Saint-Mihiel, about 1565, died at Metz, 16. December 1625. He was residing at Metz from about 1608. By him are four Portrait-medallions, cast in bronze, signed IR, and executed in 1616, 1617 and 1622. They are: Claude de la Cloche, 1616; signed: I.R.F. 1616 (91 × 70 mill.); — Barbe Mayotte, wife of Claude de la Cloche, 1616 (91 × 69 mill.); — Gérard Richier, 1617; signed: I.R.F. 1617 (92 × 70 mill.); — Marguerite Groulot, wife of Gérard Richier, Marie de Vignon, Marquise de Treffort.

(after Sir Peter Lely).

1617; signed: I.R.F. 1617 (91 × 71 mill.; illustrated); — Pierre Joly, King's Counsellor and Procureur général of Metz, 1622; signed: I.R.F. (68 × 52 mill.; lead in the Epinal Museum).

Jean Richier was a grandson of the famous Ligier Richier, the sculptor of the Saint Mihiel sepulchre. His medallions, says Mazerolle, have a certain artistic merit and are of a fairly good style.

RICHMOND, FRANCES STEWART, DUCHESS OF. Vide JAN ROETTIER infra. The figure of Britannia on Charles II.'s Halfpennies and Farthings, from 1668, is said to be a portrait of the famous mistress of the 'merry monarch'.

RICHMOND, DOWAGER DUCHESS OF (Brit.) On 11. July 1626 a patent was granted for seventeen years to the Dowager Duchess of Richmond, and Sir Francis Crane, to issue Farthing tokens, which are usually known as 'Richmond Farthings'. The obv. type is a Crown over two sceptres in saltire and R. crowned harp. Numerous varieties exist, differing principally in the disposition and contraction of the legends and sizes of crown and harp. Montagu specifies fifty-five different mint-marks which he had noted on them.

RICHMOND, W. B. (Brit.). Contemporary Sculptor, Painter, and Medallist; son of the painter George Richmond; Associate of the Royal Academy; a pupil of Prof. Legros and E. J. Poynter. He has executed some clever Portrait-medallions, modelled in wax first, and cast in bronze.

RICHOU, HENRI LOUIS (French). Contemporary Sculptor, born at Seine-Port; pupil of C. Monceau and A. Dumont. At the Salon of 1892 he exhibited a Portrait-medallion of M<sup>me</sup> Alice Richou.

RICHTHAUSEN, JOHANN CONRAD, FREIHERR VON CHAOS (Aust.). Mint-master at Vienna, 1646-1659. His mint-mark occurs on A 10, 2 and 1 Ducats; R. Double Thalers, Thalers, Half-Thalers, and subsidiary coinage of Ferdinand III. Before being appointed at Vienna, he appears to have served in the same capacity at Brünn. He died on 25. July 1663.

RICHTER, BENEDIKT or BENGT (Swed.). Medallist, born at Stockholm in 1670, died at Vienna on 18. April 1735. He was a pupil and son-in-law of Karlsteen, and after leaving Sweden he worked for some time in Paris, where he was employed at the Medal Mint to engrave medals for Louis XIV. In 1703 he came over to England, but soon after returned to Stockholm, being appointed Engraver at the Royal Mint there. In 1712 he was called to Vienna to fill the post of chief Medallist (Obermedailleur) to the Imperial Mint, and on 15. January 1715 he was named Inspector of the Coinage (K. Münzpräginginspector). It would appear, from documents, that the artist also spent some years at Berlin, about 1710-1712.

Among this Medallist's productions I have come across the following, which are variously signed : RICHTER; — R.; — R; — Richter; — BR.; — B. R.: — Unknown Portrait, undated, and uniface, 69 mill.; — Charles XII.'s defeat of King Augustus of Saxony, near Riga, 9. July, 1701; — Peace of Alt-Ranstadt between Charles XII. and Augustus, 14. September 1706; — Charles XII. grants Religious Tolerance to Silesia, 1707; — Another, on the same event; ℞. DEIECTIS. LEVAMEN. AFFERT; — Sweden's Valour, 1809; ℞. LABOR. ENVMERARE. LABORES. Hercules; — Admiral Sir George and Lady Rooke, 1703; — Sir William Rich, 1703; — Richard Nevill, 1703. (The last three medals were executed by Richter for the Swedish Club in London. "The head of each person," says Vertue, "was done on one side [of the medal] and some motto and device on the other. These were done by Bengt Richter, a Sweed, who first modelled them by the life, and cast and repaired them curiously. He was related to [Christian Richter], the limner, but staid not long in England"); — Arrival of Emperor Charles VI. from Spain for his Coronation in Germany, 1711; — Coronation of Charles VI., 1711 (sev. var.); — Charles VI. and Empress Elizabeth Christina, 1711; — Hungarian Coronation of Charles VI., 1712; — Preliminaries of Peace signed between Prince Eugene and Villars, and Peace of Rastadt, 1714; — Hungarian Coronation of Empress Elizabeth Christina, 1714 (℞. by Warou); — Another, with CORON. POSON. (Presburg) MDCCLXIII; — Foundation of the Pest Memorial at Mariahilf, 1715; — Foundation of the Carl Boromäi Church at Vienna, 1716; — Building of the Carlo Boromäi Church at Vienna, 1716; — Capture of Temesvar by Prince Eugene, 1716; — Building of the 'Landtafelgebäude' at Vienna, 1717; — Capture of Belgrade, 1717 (sev. var.); — Treaty of Protection concluded at Messina, 1719; ℞. SECVRITAS ITALIAE; — Coronation of Charles VI. at Prague, 1723; — Coronation of the Emperor and Empress at Prague, and Millenary of the Bohemian capital, 1723; ℞. by Warou; — Hungarian Coronation of Charles VI., 1712; ℞. by G. F. Nürnberger; — Erection of a Memorial Column of the Pest at Baden, 1714; — Gottfried Bessel, abbot of Göttweig; Reconstruction of the Abbey after the fire (1718); — Peace of Passarovitz, 1718 (2 var. ; both with Reverses by Fuchs; obv. illustrated); — Jeton, on the same event ; — The Quadruple Alliance formed to maintain the Peace of Utrecht, 1718; R. PRO QUIETE PVBLICA; — Birth of Archduke Leopold Johann Joseph, son of Charles VI., 13. April 1716; R. FOECVNDITATI AVGVSTAE (2 var.); — Victories of Prince Eugene over the Turks. 1717; — Empress Elizabeth Christina, Coronation at Pressburg, Charles VI., 1718.

1714; — Arrival of the Empress at Vienna, 1713; R. Rising sun; — Another; R. Goddess driven in triumphal chariot; — Empress crowned at Prague, 1723; — Foundation of Breslau University, 1728; — Marriage of Maria Anna Christina, eldest daughter of Ferdinand Maria, Prince Elector of Bavaria, and Louis, Dauphin of Viennois, son of Louis XIV., 1680; — Jeton of 1681 with bust of the Dauphine; R. NOVVM. DECVS. ADDITA. COELO. Crown in clouds; — Defeat of the Spanish Fleet off Cape Passaro, 1718; — Count Karl Gustav Tessin, 1730(?); — Count Giovanni Baptista Comazzi, undated(?); — Johann Bernhard Fischer von Erlach, 1719.

N. Keder issued a Portrait-medal of Bengt Richter.

Daniel Warou, who was likewise a pupil of Karlsten, and who cut some dies of medals in conjunction with Bengt Richter, appears to me, from his work, especially that connected with the Imperial House of Germany, to have been the better artist of the two, although some of the latter's productions are not without merit.

RIEDTSCHAL, GEORG (Austr.). Mint-engraver at Kuttenberg, 1627.

RIEGER, HANS (Germ.). Two Medallists and Coin-engravers of that name were working at Breslau during the first three quarters of the seventeenth century. The father, son of Georg Rieger, cutter of armorial bearings, was born in 1580 and died on 15. March 1653, and the son was still living in 1660. About 1621 and following years Hans Rieger Sen<sup>r</sup> was Mint-master at Breslau. His initials occur, in that capacity, on a number of coins, which he however may also have engraved. One of his best known works, which is signed : HANS RIEGER, is the Broad Schauthaler commemorating the Pest of 1633. The Half Schauthaler only bears his initials H. R.

The Riegers worked not only for the Mint of Breslau, but also for the Kings of Poland, the Princes of Liegnitz-Brieg, etc. The elder Rieger produced a considerable number of coins and medals, beginning with a Double Ducat of 1611 on the Visit of Emperor Mathias to Breslau, and ending with a Portrait-medal of Prince Ludwig von Liegnitz-Brieg, 1647.

Mathias Ries worked for many years at Rome, where he executed a number of intaglios, after antique statuary. His series of Portraits is also characteristic. Nagler mentions a Portrait-intaglio, cut in a carnelian of thaler size, of Prince Elector Johann Wilhelm von der Pfalz; also a Bacchus, cut in carnelian, which eventually went to Sweden, and is of excellent workmanship. After his death a series of plaster casts of his gems was issued, about 1740.

In 1883 he obtained a Mention honorable ; in 1888 a medal of the Third class, and a Silver Medal at the Universal Exhibition of 1889.

In the spring of 1906 I had the pleasure of seeing the eminent artist at work in his studio at Strassburg, and was very much impressed by his skill.

Ringel d'Illzach, by himself.

This artist is the author of two series of singularly boldly modelled Portrait-medallions, of eminent Frenchmen, 140 mill. in diameter. Each Portrait is accompanied with attributes, inscriptions, or emblems relating to the intellectual influence exercised on contemporaneous history by each of the individuals that are represented.

This series of Medallions was published by J. Rouam, Librairie de l'Art, Paris. Among these I have noted the following Portraits: M. E. Chevreul, 1895; — Ferdinand de Lesseps; — Dr J. A. d'Arsonval, of Paris (145 mill.); — Emile Augier; — Jean Dollfus; — Léon Gambetta; — Eugène Guillaume; — Auguste Rodin; — Victor Hugo; — Léon Lhermite; — Louis Pasteur; — Ernest Renan; — Jules Grévy; — Savorgnan de Brazza; — Alexandre Dumas fils; — Falguière; — E. de Goncourt; — Charles Gounod; — Etienne Arago; — Got; — Ludovic Halévy; — Labiche; — General Pittié; — Francisque Sarcey; — Aug. Vacquerie; — Bertillon, director of the Paris 'Service anthropométrique'; — Brochin, violonist; — Dr Capitan; — Dr Charcot; — Dr Debacker; — Léon Desfontaines, director of the 'Cercle philharmonique'; — Expert-Besançon, chemist; — Froidevaux; — Dr P. Galippe, of the 'Académie de Médecine'; — Girard, director of the 'Laboratoire municipal'; — Granger; — Dr Gréhant; — J. Gurt, 1903; — Henrivaux; — William Marie, 1903; — Georges Eugène Marty, 1903; — Massenet; — J. Meunier; — Miniart; — Nicot, of the 'Opéra comique'; — Ogier; — Pothier; — Dr Raspail; — Dr Ribart; — Dr Charles Richet; — J. Ringel, archeologist; — A. Ringel; — Ringel d'Illzach (illustrated); — General Baron Rothvilliers; — Sanglé; — Dr Stef; — Tourcy; — Dr Tridon; — Dr Trillat, of the 'Pasteur Institute'; — Sansbœuf, president of the 'Fédération des Alsaciens-Lorrains'; — Philippe Bellenot; — Th. Dubois; — Léon Letellier, 1903; — Pickaert; — G. Pierné, composer; — Reine; — Albert Kern, 1904; — Liliane Kern, 1904. The last two are reproduced in The Studio, xxxvi, 175; — A. de Saint-Marceaux; — R. de Saint-Marceaux; — G. Steinbach; — Medal on the 60th Anniversary of M. et M<sup>me</sup> Jean Dollfus' wedding, etc.

M. Ringel d'Illzach, so successful in practising the art of ceramic work, is also one of the most excellent sculptors of our time. His strong individuality marks him out as a Master of a school, around whom gravitate an imposing group of pupils of whom many to-day can also boast of celebrity.

In Gazette numismatique française, 1803, p. 96, M. Jean de Foville makes the following observations on the style of this artist: « Je ne veux pas passer sous silence la série de portraits de M. Ringel d'Illzach. Connus surtout par des bustes de cire peinte d'une conception toujours originale, M. Ringel d'Illzach expose cette année des médaillons qui rappellent ceux de David d'Angers. La plupart sont des portraits d'artistes; les musiciens y sont en majorité. Ennemi de l'art trop minutieux, l'auteur a surtout cherché l'accent. Il souligne dans chaque physionomie le trait vraiment caractéristique et traite l'ensemble d'une touche très large. Cette méthode difficile est la vraie. Si M. Ringel d'Illzach n'est pas toujours égal à lui-même, il est souvent très évocateur, et il n'est jamais banal. Il était connu comme statuaire : il faut désormais se souvenir de lui comme médailleur » (La Gravure en médaille aux Salons de 1903).

Several of Rivet's medals are exhibited at the Luxembourg Museum.

Rivet has also done good work in ceramic art and in plate. He is a keen observer and lover of nature, and at the same time a thinker with broad ideas, a conscientious and sincere artist. His knowledge and experience enable him to distinguish between essentials and matters of second importance, and his works in consequence do not suffer from ill-balance or lack of proportion.

To one of the two sons of Andrea della Robbia, Frati Ambrogio and Luca, “brethren of Savonarola in the convent and his zealous adherents”, are ascribed, on Vasari’s authority, a series of ten medals, all derived from two models, with the portrait “of the gloomy prophet and unfortunate reformer”. “With slight deviations”, writes von Fabriczy, “they all reproduce his well-known features with rare fidelity; his deep-set glowing eye, his bony cheeks, the strong nose and protruding lips. Most directly, perhaps, are they expressed in the large medal (illustrated) of the British Museum and the Berlin Cabinet, the only one in which he holds the crucifix. The reverse displays, in an awkward composition, on a field divided by a vertical line, the avenging sword of God and the Holy Ghost hovering over the city of Florence — an allusion to the gloomy prophecies of the implacable censor of morals”. The specimen of this type, described by Armand is 62 mill. in diam.; the one reproduced above, after Heiss (G. Dreyfus collection) is 95 mill., and the British Museum one, 89 mill. Heiss gives a full description of eight varieties (7  $\text{\AA}$  and 1 lead) six of which show on obv. the bust of Savonarola, to left, without the crucifix. The obv. and R. legends differ on each variety. All these medals were executed after two prototypes; one is a bust in carnelian by Giovanni delle Corniole (Uffizi Gallery), and the other a bronze bust attributed to one of the Della Robbia.

Fra Ambrogio (PAOLO DELLA ROBBIA (?)) was born 6. April 1468; the date of Fra Luca's (MARIO DELLA ROBBIA (?)) birth is not known. They both entered the convent of San Marco at Florence, where they continued their profession of Sculptors and Plasticatori Morsolin favours the attribution of the Savonarola medals to Fra Ambrogio della Robbia. However Prof. W. Bode rejects this attribution and gives them to Niccolo Spinelli (q. v.), and states: "To Giovanni della Robbia the Savonarola medals have been assigned, simply because Vasari mentions his having executed a small portrait relief of this friend of the Della Robbia family."

ROCHE, JOHN VERNON (Brit.). Manufacturer of metal buttons for the army, residing at South King St., Dublin, about 1760, in which year he issued a series of private tokens, the so-called "Voce Populi" Halfpence and Farthings. Usual type: Obv. VOCE POPULI. Youthful bust, bare, head laureate; before, P. R. HIBERNIA Hibernia seated to l., holding branch and sceptre; her harp at her side; in ex., 1760.

'Voce Populi' Halfpenny, 1760.

It has been suggested that the obverse bust was intended to represent Prince Charles Edward, and that the initial P was for Princeps. Another explanation, suggested by Dr Nelson, on the strength of a pamphlet in the Harleian library, is that the head is that of Hely Hutchinson, afterwards Provost of Dublin, and that the P may indicate Provost. A third suggestion is that "These tokens, in imitation of a regal coinage, were struck in Ireland as an expression of loyalty, and in commemoration of the joyful accession of George Prince of Wales to the crown of the United Kingdom, and the fact that these pieces only bear one date, which chronicles the end of one reign and the beginning of another, would seem to show that at any rate the "Vox Populi" was all on the side of the popular grandson of George II. The pieces bearing P (for Princeps) upon them were doubtless struck earlier in the same year, before his accession as king (W. J. Webster, Sale Catalogue Sotheby, Wilkinson and Hodge, 16. Nov. 1904, lot. 204).

Dr Nelson describes twelve varieties of Voce Populi-Haltpence (some without the P) and two of Farthings. The occasion for the striking of these private tokens was no doubt supplied by the sudden cessation of the issue of regal coins in 1755.

Frazer mentions the name of Roche as a Die-sinker, to whom are ascribed some Prize-medals, etc.

ROCHE, PIERRE (French). Contemporary Sculptor, born and residing at Paris. He was requested by M. Roger Marx to model for the "Société des Amis de la Médaille française" a medal dedicated to Loïe Fuller. "C'est dans un tourbillon de gaze, un corps souple dont les rondeurs vont se fondant et laissant comme une phosphorescence partout où elles se devinent. Bien rarement œuvre a donné avec autant d'intensité la sensation même du phénomène qu'elle doit rappeler".

Amongst other medallic works by Pierre Roche 'whose fine taste' is praised by M. Marx are : Mélusine (reproduced in Médailleurs français contemporains, Pl. 31, 2); — Fortune; — Nude child on horseback, a study in anatomy, etc.

"On ne saurait demander à Pierre Roche", says M. Saunier, "de s'astreindre aux règles étroites, aux procédés consacrés. L'art, à son avis, peut tout traduire à condition de varier ses manifestations. C'est donc dans un but bien défini que le même artiste qui, dans ses gypsographies, se contente de reliefs imperceptibles, a accusé fortement le corps même de la Loïe Fuller, afin de pouvoir disposer à son gré des saillies du métal dont l'éclat va mourir selon la loi des vibrations lumineuses ” (Ch. Saunier, La médaille française contemporaine, Art décoratif, n° 38, 1901).

Medallist of the first half of the eighteenth century, born about 1685, worked at Copenhagen till 1715 when he was called over to France, receiving 1000 livres to defray his journeying expenses. He abjured the protestant faith, but on the death of Louis XIV. he found himself in straightened circumstances, and was on the point of accepting an offer from the King of Portugal to go to Lisbon, when the Regent, Duke Philip of Orleans, attached him to his service, and granted him a pension of 1200 livres.

Some of his medals are signed : RÖG. He executed about sixty pieces, either as originals or reproductions of the Louis XIV. and XV. series, but he does not appear to have produced any work of superior merit.

Amongst his best known productions I may mention : Memorial Medal of Prince George of Denmark, 1708 (two varieties, one with bust of Prince George ; signed : RÖG ; Med. Ill., II, p. 334, n<sup>os</sup> 163, 164) ; — Victories of the French and Spaniards at Ekeren, 1703

France's happiness; — Bust of the Regent's mother; — Coronation of the King at Rheims; — Reestablishment of the Company of Cadets; — Conquest of the Milanese provinces, etc.

Roeg was almost exclusively employed to recut dies of the Louis XIV. series which had become damaged by use and to do the work which the Engraver-general or the chief Medallists at the Mint would not undertake themselves.

ROETTIERS (ROETTIER, ROTIER). Several Medallists proceeded from a family of the name of Roettiers, whose members distinguished themselves in the art for nearly two centuries and worked for the Kings of England, France, and Spain. The founder of the family, Philip Roettiers, was born at Antwerp in 1596, and was still living in 1660; the last descendant connected with the Paris Mint, Alexandre Louis Roettiers de Montaleau, was born in 1748, and appointed Director of the Paris Mint in 1791, whilst Joseph Charles Roettiers de la Bretèche, Medallist in Paris, passed through trouble during the Revolution.

The names of the various members of this family of Engravers occur on official documents in the following forms, Roëttiers, Roettiers, Roettiez, Roettier, Rætier, Rottier, Rottie, Rotiers, Rotier, Rothier, Rothiez, Roittiers and Roitier.

The accompanying genealogical table will show at a glance the family relation of the various medallists of the name of Roettiers to one another. Vide Genealogical Table.

ROETTIERS DE MONTALEAU, ALEXANDRE LOUIS (French). Son of Jacques (IV) Roettiers, and grand-son of Norbert R.; born at Paris, 22. November 1748; died on 27. February 1855 (?)

He was a Goldsmith by profession, and from 1765 to 1772 worked in partnership with his father, but in 1775 he retired, and obtained an official post at the Chambre des Comptes. On 30. August 1791 he was appointed Director of the Paris Mint. The original document of his official appointment is in my possession.

During the first two years of his tenure of office he was subjected, under the Comité du salut public, to great annoyances, but he nevertheless remained in the public service until 17. Fructidor An V, when he was replaced by Charles Pierre de l'Espine. His privy-mark on the coins is a cornucopiae.

From the time of his retirement into private life, nothing more is known of the former Goldsmith of Louis XV.

He was a Knight of the Legion of Honour.

ROETTIERS, FRANÇOIS (French). Son of Philip Roettiers Jun<sup>r</sup>, and grandson of Philip Roettiers sen<sup>r</sup>, founder of this celebrated family of medallists. Francis (or François) was born in London on 3. November 1685. He learned engraving under his father's tuition, and quite young went over to Paris, where he practised the art, and later became first Painter to the Elector of Bavaria, who resided at St. Cloud, and Professor at the French 'Académie de peinture et de Sculpture'. About 1718 he was called to Vienna, and appointed (1720) Director of the Academy of Fine Arts in that city, where he died on 10. June 1743.

The Emperor Charles VI. granted letters of nobility to the artist in 1720.

For a description of Franz von Roettiers' work at Vienna, confer Dr Albert Ilg's notice.

François Roettiers married in Paris, on 12. July 1712, Jeanne Hacquet, widow of François Heurté.

ROETTIERS, GEORGES (French). Son of Joseph Roettiers, by his first wife, and grandson of Philip Roettiers Sen<sup>r</sup>. The date of his birth is not known, but he died in Paris, at the Mint, 6. January 1749. He succeeded his father as Engraver at the Paris Mint, and remained in office from 1703 to 1748, when he resigned the post on behalf of his son, Joseph Charles. He held also the appointment of "Privy Medallist to Louis XV".

The Paris Mint Museum possesses no puncheon by this artist, whose productions were not signed. La Chenaye-Desbois states that he acquired a great reputation in his art. Of his six children, only one son, JOSEPH CHARLES, born on 12. January 1722, followed his father's profession.

ROETTIERS, JAMES (I) (Brit.). Second son of John Roettiers, and grandson of Philip (I) Roettiers; born in London in 1663 (others say at Antwerp in 1661); Engraver at the Royal Mint, London, where he succeeded to George Bower, 1690-1697; died in 1698 at Bromley (Kent) from the effects of a fall from his horse.

"From about 1680 he assisted his father at the English Mint in making dies and puncheons (Cal. Treasury Papers, 1556-1696, pp. 108, 110, 513; 1697-1701-2, p. 195), and in 1690 (on the death of Bower) was officially employed as an Assistant-engraver at the mint, together with his brother Norbert. An annual salary of 325 l. was divided between the brothers. In 1697 (before July) James Roettiers was removed from his office at the mint in consequence of the theft of dies from the Tower (see under ROETTIERS, JOHN (II)). He was however allowed to retain his dies and puncheons for medals." (W. Wroth, James Roettiers, Dict. Nat. Biog. XLIX, p. 98).

James (I) Roettiers' principal medals are: Battle of La Hogue, <sup>19</sup>/<sub>29</sub> May 1692 (illustrated). This medal, of which there are two other varieties, of smaller size, thought by some to be patterns for coins, is probably by this artist although he did not sign it; — Death of Queen Mary,  $\frac{28. \text{Dec.}}{7. \text{Jan.}}$  169  $\frac{4}{5}$ ; R. SVBLATAM EX OCVLIS QVÆRIMVS INVIDI; inscription across the field (by James and Norbert Roettiers; 'specimens in copper were sold at the price of five shillings soon after the Queen's death'); — Another; R. Sun setting behind hill ('medal made of two thin plates united in a strong rim'); — Another; R. Interior of Chapel; signed: I. R. (2 var.; Med. Ill., nos 366-7); — Medal of Charles I.; R. VIRTVTEM EX ME (by James and Norbert Roettiers); — Presentation of New Collar to the Lord Mayor of Dublin, 1697; R. Inscription; signed on obv. James R. F. ('one of James Roettiers' best medals', says Mr. Wroth).

It is impossible to assign any coins to James Roettiers, but it is probable that a large number of the dies for the coinage of William and Mary were prepared by him, in conjunction with his brother Norbert. (For a list of coins see John R. infra.) On the copper coins of 1694 a small satyr's head was said, no doubt in error, to have been introduced within the head of William III.

ROETTIERS, JAMES II (Flem.). Medallist and Coin-engraver; son of James I Roettiers; born at Bromley (Kent) 1698, in the year of his father's death; settled at Paris, 1718; went over to the Low-Countries, 1733, on the death of his uncle, Philip (II) where he held the office of Engraver-general of the coins of the Low Countries from 31. August 1733 till his death at Brussels, on 15. July 1772. His son, JAMES (III) ROETTIERS came to London in 1733 with his cousin, James, son of Norbert.

Among Jacques (II) Roettier's medals, usually signed R, we find: Commemorative jeton of the Reconstruction of the Brussels Mint, 1756; — Portrait-medal of Charles of Lorraine, 1756; — Medal of the Academy of Brussels, 1768; — Medal of the Academy of Antwerp, 1770; — Portrait-medal of Maria Theresia, 1734 (signed: R.); — Portrait-medal (retrospective) of Joseph II.; — Medal dedicated to Maria Elizabeth, governor of the Low-Countries, 1727 (R) (illustrated); — Inauguration of the University of Louvain, 1728; — Wise rule of Maria Elizabeth, 1729; — The Jansenists and Anti-constitutionalists, 1730; — Brave behaviour of Maria Elizabeth at the Fire of Brussels Palace, and Death of her Prime Minister; — Portrait-medals of Maria Elizabeth, governor of the Low-Countries (several varieties, of different dates, and undated; all signed R.); — Conrad, Duke of Ursel, governor of the Low-Countries; — Courageous attitude of Maria Elizabeth, governor of the Low-Countries, 1733; — Piety of Maria Elizabeth (1734); obv. Bust; R. Ship (R. on both sides); — Neutrality of the Low-Countries during Maria Elizabeth's rule (1735); — Resolution of Maria Elizabeth not to resign her governorship and not return to Vienna (1738); — Foundation of Brussels Almshouses (1738); — Accession of Maria Theresia; Homage of the Low-Countries (1740); — Benevolence of the governor of the Low-Countries, Maria Elizabeth (1741); — Homage of Namur to Maria Theresia (1744); — Charles Alexander, Duke of Lorraine, commemorates the coronations of Charles V., Charles VI. and Joseph II, 1764; — Courtrai School of Midwifery, 1780 (signed R.; probably executed from an earlier die by J. Roettiers); — Maria Theresia, 1767 (R.), etc.

On 27. February 1744 Jacques Roettiers was called upon to take up temporarily the post of Engraver at the Mint of Bruges (Rev. belge num., 1897, p. 230).

He engraved the Seals of state and private ones as well. His own are reproduced in Rev. belge num., 1895, p. 282.

Portrait-medal of Maria Elizabeth, 1734.

Jacques Roettiers married Philipp Louis Roettiers' niece, Catherine Verwilt († 1762) and had three children, who survived him: James (III), Elisabeth Jeanne Thérèse, and François Marie Thérèse. He died suddenly at Brussels, 15. July 1772.

James Roettiers, as well as the two Philippe R. not only held the appointment of Engravers-general of the Spanish, and, later, Austrian Low-Countries, but they were at the same time Engravers to the Antwerp Mint, and even at times worked as Engravers for the Mints of Bruges and Brussels.

In 1772 the Austrian government of the Low-Countries purchased from the surviving children of Jacques Roettiers the puncheons and dies left by the artist. They are now in the Brussels Museum, and have been catalogued by Piot (G. Cumont, Revue belge de num., 1891, 135).

ROETTIERS DE LA TOUR, JAMES (IV) or JACQUES (French). Medallist and Goldsmith, son of Norbert Roettiers and his wife, Winifred Clarke, niece of the Duke of Marlborough; born at Saint-

Germain en Laye, 20. August 1707; the elder Pretender stood sponsor at his christening. He learned drawing and sculpture, was ‘pensionnaire du Roi’, obtained a Prize, and was to go to Rome with Cardinal de Rohan, when his relative, George Roettiers, was advised to let him be taught medal-engraving, before leaving Paris. George Roettiers died before James had finished his apprenticeship. In 1732 (or January 1733) he went to London, in the company of his cousin James (III), son of James (II), and obtained an appointment of Engraver at the English mint. He had brought over with him several dies for medals and medallions, executed by his grandfather, John Roettiers, and had intended asking for leave to strike medallions of the twelve Caesars, the Duchesses of Mazarin, Richmond, and Portsmouth, and of other celebrities. The dies had come into his possession from his father Norbert, who himself inherited them from John Roettiers. Sir Hans Sloane and Dr Mead encouraged James in his intention, and promised the artist an apartment at the Royal Mint, which he refused. They advised him to engrave a series of medals with portraits of celebrated Englishmen, and Conduit procured for him drawings of Newton, Locke, and others. Dr Mead thought it would be better to leave the twelve Caesars, as they were, without legends around the heads, and to place the name within a laurel-wreath on the reverse, which he did. He executed a Portrait-medal of Sir Isaac Newton, which he signed R; it is dated, 1739; he also engraved a head of the Duke of Beaufort, and as his grandfather had made one of the Duke's father, the dies of which had been damaged, he executed others. Only one or two specimens of each of those two medals were struck. The Elder Pretender had appointed James 'Engraver to the Mint' in 1727 on Norbert Roettiers' death. In 1733 the

Sir Isaac Newton, 1739.

Engraver returned to Paris; married on 6. June 1734 Marie Anne Besnier, the sixteen-year-old daughter of Nicolas Besnier, goldsmith to Louis XV., who died in 1737, and whom he succeeded.

His principal works in the goldsmith's art date from this period. In 1765 he took his son Alexandre Louis into partnership, but retired in 1772. In this year, the artist was raised to the peerage, with the title of 'Noble' and 'Ecuyer' conferred upon him and his children. The Académie royale de Peinture et de Sculpture admitted him a member in 1773 on the presentation of the puncheons of the Portrait-medals of Locke and Newton, which he had formerly executed in England.

Baron Pichon has described a number of articles of plate by Jacques Roettiers, and among his best known medals are : John Locke (medal executed in 1731 in compliment to the memory of Locke; the dies are in the British Museum; signed : Jac. Roettiers); — Sir Isaac Newton, 1739 (obv. signed : Jac. Roettiers; R. R.; illustrated); — Small Portrait-medal (oval) of Sir Isaac Newton (in Dr S. Bousfield's collection); — The Duke of Beaufort, 1730 (signed : Jac. Roettiers. f.); — Convention of Prado, 1739 (signed : I. R. FECIT i. e. James Roettiers fecit?).

Jacques Roettiers died at the Galeries du Louvre on 17. May 1784, and was buried at the age of seventy-seven, in the Church of St. Germain-L'Auxerrois.

There is a portrait of him by C. N. Cochin, and another by Auguste de Saint-Aubin, 1771.

One of his sons, also named JACQUES (V) practised the goldsmith's art and was his father's partner for many years.

A Portrait-plaque of Samuel Pepys, the diarist (attributed to Norbert Roettiers by Mr. W. J. Webster) is possibly by James Roettiers, and belongs to the series of celebrated Englishmen, which was only begun, when the artist returned to France.

ROETTIERS (ROETTIER, or ROTIER), JOHN (or JAN). (Flem.). Eldest son of Philip Roettiers, Medallist and Goldsmith of Antwerp, by his wife Elizabeth Thermés, was born at Antwerp (?) on 4. July 1631; died in London towards the end of the xvii. century or beginning of the xviii. He learned the art of medal-engraving and stone-cutting with his father. His first signed production is dated from 1656; it is a medal of Leopold William, governor of the Low-Countries. In 1661 he engraved another, that of Charles Vanden Bosch, bishop of Ghent. He entered at an early age the Antwerp Mint as an assistant, and left it in 1661, on going to London. He became Chief-engraver at the Royal Mint, London, in 1670, and remained in office until 1698.

From Mr. W. Wroth's biographical notice of the artist in Dict. Nat. Biog. (XLIX, 99) I extract the following particulars : —

"In 1661 John Roettiers and his brother Joseph (and subsequently the third brother, Philip) were invited to England by Charles II. to work at the English mint. According to Walpole (Anecdotes of Painting, II, 184), their father had lent money to Charles during his exile, and had been promised employment for his sons. The letters patent appointing the three Roettiers engravers at the mint state that they were employed on account of the King's long experience of their great skill and knowledge 'in the arts of graveing and cutting in stone' (see Cat. Treasury Papers, 1697-1701-2, pp. 437-438).

"In January and February 1662 John Roettiers and Thomas Simon (q. v.) were ordered to engrave dies for the new 'milled' money in gold and silver, but, 'by reason of a contest in art between them', they could not be brought to an agreement. They therefore submitted patterns for gold 'Unites', and for silver 'Crowns'. Simon produced his splendid 'Petition Crown', but his rival's work was preferred, and John Roettiers was entrusted with the preparation of the coinage, and on 19. May 1662 received a grant of the office of one of the Chief-engravers of the mint.

Obv. of Roettiers's Pattern Crown, 1662. Obv. of Simon's Pattern Crown, 1662.

'Roettiers had been already at work upon medals commemorating the Restoration, and he produced many important medals throughout the reign of Charles II. In February 1666-7 he was directed to make a new great Seal of the kingdom of Great Britain, completed at a cost of 246 l. 3 s. 2 d. Joseph Roettiers, John's principal assistant at the mint, left England in or before 1680, and in 1682 became engraver-general of the French mint. He died at Paris in 1703. James Roettiers, John's second son, who rendered assistance to his father at the mint in place of Joseph Philip Roettiers was officially connected with the English mint as an engraver till February 1684, but he was absent (at any rate temporarily) in the Low Countries from about 1673, and afterwards became engraver-general of the mint of the king of Spain in the Low Countries. Norbert Roettiers, John's third son, assisted his father after Philip's departure from England. John, Joseph, and Philip Roettiers appear to have originally received an annual allowance of 325 l. divided between them. On 7. April 1669 they were granted by warrant a yearly pension of 450 l. (i. e. 150 l. each). John continued to receive the 450 l. after his brothers had left the mint, but he had to petition more than once for arrears of payment.

“John Roettiers produced the official Coronation medals of James II., Mary, 1685, and William and Mary, 1689, but he was not actively employed after the death of Charles II. In January 1696-7 it was discovered that dies for coins of Charles II. and James II. had been abstracted by labourers at the mint, and had been handed over by them to coiners in the Fleet prison, who used the dies for striking ‘Guineas’ of James II. on gilded blanks of copper. A committee of the House of Commons reported on 2. February

R. Peace of Breda (1667).

1696-7 that John Roettiers, who occupied ‘the graver’s house’ at the Tower, was responsible for the custody of the dies, and was an unfit custodian, inasmuch as he was a violent papist, and ‘will not nor ever did own the king (William III.), or do any one thing as a graver since the revolution’. Roettiers appears to have been removed from his office about this time, and to have taken up his residence in Red Lion Square, London. In his later years he suffered from the stone and from ‘a lameness in his right hand’. He died in 1703, and was buried in the Tower.

“John Roettiers married, in 1658, Catherine Prost, by whom he had five daughters and three sons: John (b. 1661), James (b. 1663) and Norbert (b. 1665).

Restoration, 'Felicitas Britanniae', 1660.

“John Roettiers’s usual signature on medals is ‘J. R.’ in monogram; he also signs : ROTI. ; ROETTI. ; IAN. R. ; JOAN. ROTI. Little is known of his work as a Gem-engraver. Walpole (Anecdotes, &c., II, 187) mentions a cornelian seal by him with the heads of Mars and Venus. Many dies and puncheons executed by John Roettiers and his relatives were purchased from the Roettiers family by a Mr. Cox, and were by him sold in 1828 to Matthew Young, the coin dealer, who, after striking some impressions for sale, presented them in 1829 to the British Museum.

“John Roettiers was one of the best engravers ever employed at the English mint. Evelyn (Diary, 20 July 1678) refers to him as ‘that excellent graver... who emulates even the ancients in both metal and stone’; and Pepys (Diary, 26. March 1666), who visited Roettiers at the Tower, declares that he there saw ‘some of the finest pieces of work, in embossed work, that ever I did see in my life, for fineness and smallness of the images thereon’. On 11. October 1687 Henry Slingsby (ex-master of the mint) offered Pepys his collection of Roettiers’s medals. The “Great Britannia” (FELICITAS BRITANNIÆ) was valued by Slingsby at 4 l. 10 s., and the other medals at sums from 10 s. to 3 l. 4 s. apiece”.

The following is a list of Roettiers’s principal medals, which are all subsequent to the Restoration : Archbishop Laud, executed, 10. Jan. 1645 (signed : Roti : f.) ; — Giles Strangways, 1648 (obv. Stewart, the later Duchess of Richmond, Charles II.'s favourite, sat to the artist for the model of Britannia<sup>1</sup>.

dies made for a new farthing in 1665, which date is shown beneath the head of Charles II. on the obverse of the coin I reproduce. It was modelled, therefore, when the lovely Frances, “la plus jolie fille du monde”, was in the first flush of her beauty at Court, two years before her marriage to the Duke of Richmond. It is, in my opinion, impossible to compare it with the Commodus medallion without believing that Roettiers deliberately took the Roman design and treated it in his own way with a new model. There are many resemblances, but the slight differences are even more convincing. The Roman standard becomes an olive-branch, the spear is slightly more upright, the helmet beneath the shield becomes a heraldic flourish, the bosom is even more undraped than in the first design for the medal of two years later, which was struck to commemorate the Peace of Breda.

“It will be noticed that the dominion of the seas was announced in the new farthing with the legend “Quattuor Maria Vindico”. It is, therefore, quite intelligible that these farthings did not widely circulate in 1665 and 1666; for not only did Louis XIV. openly express his annoyance at this bombast, but the Dutch sailed up to Chatham and burnt our ships at anchor. After that the motto became discredited. “I hear of no supply”, says Lord Lucas somewhat bitterly, speaking in the House in 1671, “except it be of copper farthings, and that is the metal that is to vindicate, according to the inscription on it, the dominion of the four seas.” Another criticism that might be made is on the somewhat inelegant posture of the undraped right leg. This Roettiers altered both in the two designs for the Breda medal, and in the halfpenny of 1672, '3, and '5”.

Copper. Pattern Halfpennies (Britannia type), undated, 1672, etc.; — Pattern Farthings, 1665, and other dates.

As already mentioned, John Roettiers' first association with the Royal Mint dates from 1661, when he worked under Rawlins, until the latter's death; in 1670, he became Chief-engraver, and was assisted first by his brothers Joseph (1670-73) and Philip (1670-78) and later by his sons James (1690-1697) and Norbert (1690-1695). It is therefore impossible to know which dies John Roettiers cut himself. Mr. Grueber states that Jan Roettiers cut the dies for the milled money of Charles II. in all metals. The coins issued between 1670 and 1697 may safely be ascribed to members of the Roettiers family, during their activity in England.

GENEALOGY OF JOHN ROETTIERS

ROETTIERS, JOHN (II) (Flem.). Eldest son of John Roettiers, was born about 1661 in London, but does not appear to have been a Medallist. Mr. W. Wroth, in his notice of John Roettiers Senr. (Dict. Nat. Biog., XLIX, 100) states : “ The committee of the House of Commons concerning the abstraction of the dies reported (2. February 1696-7) that this younger John was suspected of participation in the conspiracy of Rookwood and Bernado, the ‘ assassins’, having at that time provided himself of horses and arms at his own house in Essex, where he entertained very ill company, to the great terror of the neighbourhood’. A warrant for high treason was out against him, ‘ but he fled from justice’.”

ROETTIERS, JOSEPH (Flem.). Son of Philip Roettiers, and brother of John (1631-1703), and Philip (1640-1718), and also a Medallist and Coin-engraver, born at Antwerp, 1. August 1635, died at Paris, 11. September 1703. He learned the art of die-sinking with his father, at Antwerp, and came to London, about 1670; from 1670 to 1672 or ’73 he worked at the Royal Mint, as Assistant-engraver. In 1673 (Mr. Wroth says in or before 1680) he went over to France (at the invitation of Colbert), where he became naturalized, and in 1682 he was appointed Engraver-general of the French coins, in succession to Warin. His first wife, Elizabeth Nilis (a sister or relative of the engraver Nilis) died at the Galeries du Louvre, 16. October 1680; he married again, 12. June 1690; the name of his second wife, with whom he appears to have been living since 1674, was Helen Stonehouse. By the first wife he had four sons and a daughter; the eldest son, Philip, is not to be confused with Philip (III), son of Joseph’s brother Philip (II) (vide Guiffrey, Rev. num., 1889, p. 450); another son, Georges, became Engraver at the Paris Mint. By Helen Stonehouse, the artist had three sons and three daughters; the fourth child being Joseph Charles, who on the death of Norbert Roettiers became Engraver-general in 1727.

Joseph Roettiers was appointed Engraver at the Paris Mint in 1674, and Engraver-general in 1682; he obtained an apartment in the Galeries du Louvre in 1679, and was admitted a Member of the Académie royale de peinture et de sculpture, 30. January 1683, on the presentation of a portrait (in intaglio) of Colbert, intended as a Seal for the Academy.

It is said that previous to his leaving for France, his brother John advised him not to accept the office of Engraver-general without the coining-press. He however worked without the press for the first year, and Colbert having died in the meantime, he was told that the King intended to farm out the Press for a sum of 20.000 Livres, which was due to him. The Engraver’s wife dissuaded him from accepting, and immediately De Launay, goldsmith to the King, acquired the right, thus securing a considerable yearly income.

Guiffrey gives extracts from Mint accounts, mentioning payments made to Roettiers for dies and puncheons executed by him.

Joseph Roettiers' medals are usually signed : R. or J. R. (mon).

ROETTIERS, JOSEPH CHARLES (French). Son of Joseph Roettiers and Helen Stonehouse, born in 1691 (or 1692). He learned die-engraving with his father, and his cousin, Norbert Roettiers. In 1711 he obtained the second prize for sculpture at the Académie royale, and was admitted a member of that body in 1717, on the presentation of a portrait of the King, intended for a medal of the Academy. From 1715, he took the title of 'Graveur des médailles du Roi', and a month after the death of Norbert Roettiers, Engraver-general to the Paris Mint, he was appointed to that office, 18. June 1727. He married in 1716 Catherine Hérault, by whom he had four children, two daughters and two sons, one of whom was the future medallist, Charles Norbert (q. v.); after his wife's death he married a second time, Jeanne Hermant (17. November 1753-† 1781), by whom he had no children. The date of his death is given as 14. March 1779, at the age of 87. He appears to have retired into private life some time before, and possibly through ill-health.

The medals signed J. C. R. are the only ones which may safely be ascribed to Joseph Charles Roettiers. A difficulty arises in connection with the signature R. fils, or R. filius, R. f., and Roettiers filius. Guiffrey is of the opinion that before 1731, Joseph Charles, wishing to distinguish his works from those of his father, Joseph, signed thus, but that after 1731 he signed I. C. R. Advielle, on the contrary, thinks that this signature entirely belongs to Charles Norbert, who on a medal of 1770 signs: C. N. Roettiers filius.

Why should not George, Joseph Charles' elder brother, who was employed as Engraver at the Medal Mint, have also signed R. filius, as he began cutting dies when his father, Joseph, was still living? And, as Guiffrey remarks, Jacques R. might equally have signed Roettiers filius.

ROETTIERS DE LA BRÊTÈCHE (or BERTAICHE), JOSEPH CHARLES (French.). Second son of Georges Roettiers, and Marie Claude Hermant, born at Paris, 12. January 1722; Engraver (Graveur particulier) at the Paris Mint, from 1748 to 1759. He married in 1747 Marie-Anne Bonnin. The date of his death is not known (Rondot gives it as 1803), but during the French Revolution he was arrested on 5. Frimaire, an XI, for having in his possession silver forks and spoons on which the arms had not been effaced and a pocket-book containing notes on the King and the Constitution; he was however released on the following 21. Ventôse.

None of his productions are known, but he no doubt cut many of the dies for the small currency issued during his tenure of office.

ROETTIERS, NORBERT (Flem.). Third son of John Roettiers, and grandson of Philip Roettiers of Antwerp; was probably born at Antwerp (or London) in 1665 (Guiffrey gives the date as 1664, and Advielle, 1666). He was apprenticed to his father, with whom he worked at the Royal Mint, London, from about 1684. In 1690 he obtained, together with his brother James, the appointment of Assistant-engraver, in which capacity he acted until 1695, when he left England for France. There he attached himself to the Stuarts at St. Germain, and thanks to the protection and help of his uncle, Joseph Roettiers, then in high favour at Paris, he soon obtained employment at the French mint. On the death of Joseph Roettiers, in 1703, he was appointed Engraver-general of the French coins, a post which he retained until his own death, at Choisy-sur-Seine, 18. May 1727. He married twice, first, Elizabeth Isard, and secondly, Winifred Clarke, daughter of an Englishman living at St. Germain, and niece of the Duke of Marlborough. His eldest son, James (IV) Roettiers, born at St. Germain, became goldsmith to Louis XVI., and the Elder Pretender stood sponsor at his christening. Norbert Roettiers had been granted letters of naturalization in 1719, and in 1722 he became a member of the Académie royale de peinture et de sculpture, "He was", says Mr. W. Wroth, "an ardent Jacobite, and, according to Walpole (Anecdotes of painting, II, 186), was suspected by persons with 'penetrating eyes' of having introduced a small satyr's head within the head of William III. on the English copper coinage of 1694. The existence of the satyr is more than doubtful, and, in any case, James, and not Norbert, Roettiers had the principal hand in the coinage".

Pattern Crown of James III., 1709.

The elder Pretender appointed Norbert Roettiers "Engraver of the Mint", and the artist officially described himself as 'Graveur général des monnaies de France et d'Angleterre'. After his departure from England he executed a number of dies for coins, medals, and medalets for the exiled Stuart family (1697-1720) and their adherents. In 1709 he made the English 'Crown-piece', with the effigy and titles of James III. (Numismatic Chronicle, 1879, p. 135, Pl. v, 3; illustrated) and the Pattern Shilling, or Guinea, 1716 (loc. cit., p. 136, Pl. v, 2). The Crown is unique (Brit. Museum); also the Scottish 'coins' (1716) with the pretender's title of 'James VIII': Pattern Dollar, or Sixty-shilling piece (loc. cit., p. 137, Pl. v, 5; illustrated), and Pattern Shilling, or Quarter Dollar loc. cit.,

p. 137, Pl. v, 4). The three last described patterns only exist in restrikes, from the dies cleaned and repaired by Matthew Young, in 1828.

Pinchart describes this artist's medals as "fort belles".

ROETTIERS, PHILIP (I) (Flem.). Goldsmith and Engraver, born at Antwerp(?), 20. December 1596; died there in 1669; father of John Roettiers (1631-1703), Joseph (1635-1703), and Philip (1640-1718). He was descended from an ancient noble family; and his father, also named Philip, had married a niece of the Duke of Alba, viceroy of the Low-Countries. The portraits, full-length, of our artist's father and mother, were painted in form of ex-votos by Anthony Vandyck. The Archduke Albert, governor of the Netherlands, held the child at the baptismal font, and young Philip received an excellent education at the Antwerp Jesuits' College. He learned die-sinking and chasing, and made a name as a Goldsmith and possibly also as a Medallist. He was married on 24. January 1625 to Elizabeth Thermés. It is said that he lent money to the exiled Charles II. of England, who promised employment for his sons on the Restoration.

MM. Ch. Gillemann and A. Van Werweke (Medailles gantoises, Rev. belge num., 1902, p. 69) ascribe to Philip (I) Roettiers a medal of 1659, with busts of Louis XIV. and Philip IV. of Spain (reproduced, Pl. 1, 3), on the Conclusion of the Peace of the Pyrenees. On 17. November 1659, Meester Philip contracted to supply, not later than a fortnight after Christmas, 45 specimens in gold of this medal, and his sons stood guarantors. This medal is also described in Van Loon, II, p. 459, and in Catalogus der Nederlandsche Gedenkenningen, I, n° 907. He is further said to have engraved a medal for Charles II. of England.

ROETTIERS, PHILIPPE (II) JACQUES JOSEPH (Flem.). Third son of Philip Roettiers and Elizabeth Thermés, was born at Antwerp, where he was christened on 13. September 1640; died in the same town in 1718. He was officially connected with the Royal Mint, London, as an Engraver from 1670 or before, to 1684, with a temporary absence from about 1673 to 1679. On 10. February 1674 he married Jeanne Marie de Mangelaer, by whom he had two sons who followed the profession of medallists, Philip (III), and Francis. He appears to have been still in London on 3. November 1685, when Francis was born, although he was nominated Engraver-general of the coins of the Low-Countries on 4. December 1684. On 5. August 1686 he took the oath as Engraver of the Antwerp mint. He held the two posts simultaneously with a salary of 4000 livres, and was lodged at the government's expense. During his tenure of office in London, he was employed in the cutting of dies for the currency. Lord Braybrooke (editor of Pepy's diary) ascribes to him the innovation of the Britannia type on the Pattern Farthing of 1665, although its author is no doubt John Roettiers. He executed some interesting English medals : Charles II. and Catherine (1667); their busts on either side ; signed on obv. P. R. ; — State of Britain (1667) ; obv. Bust of Charles II. ; R. Sleeping lion ; signed : P. R. ; — Liberty of Conscience, 1672 ; obv. Bust of Charles II. ; signed : *Philip. Among the other medals engraved by Philip Roettiers I have come across the description of the following : 1679. Son of Philippe (II) Roettiers; born at Antwerp (?); his father's successor as Engraver-general of the coins of the Low-Countries, and Engraver to the Antwerp Mint, from 1719 to 1732, died, without issue, at Antwerp, probably in 1732. His second cousin, James (II) was appointed to fill his place, which he did from 1733 to 1772.

There are three medals known by him of 1844, and also the following : Presentation medal to Baron d'Huart, 1847; — François Gérard Pirson, 1848; — Agricultural Prize Medal of Namur, with bust of Leopold I., 1848; — Provincial Exhibition of Namur, 1849; — François Joseph Cornet, 1852, &c.

ROKESLEY, GREGORY DE (Brit.). A celebrated goldsmith, who lived in the Old Change, about 1275. In the third year of Edward I. (1275), he was Chief Assay Master of all the king's mints throughout England, and Keeper of the king's exchange in London. In 1282 he was Master of the London Mint, and somewhat later, 1291, Warden of the Canterbury Mint.

He was Sheriff in 1271, and eight times Mayor between 1275 and 1285.

Chaffers (Gilda Aurifabrorum, p. 27) states : "In the 8th year of Edward I. (1279), the value of the coins had become so deteriorated by clipping, that a new standard of value was established, and a new coinage issued, which was conducted by an agreement with William de Turnemire of Marseilles; Groats and Half-groats were made as well as Sterlings or Pennies. The pound of Esterling money was to contain 12 ounces, to wit, fine silver, such as was then made into foil, and commonly called "Silver of Guthurons Lane", viz. 11 oz. 2  $\frac{1}{4}$  dwt. The dies for this new money were delivered to Gregory de Rokesley on the 27th May 1280".

Gregory de Rokesley was buried in Christ's Church, Newgate Street (1291).

ROLL, WOLFGANG (Austr.). Goldsmith and Engraver of Kremnitz; appointed Master of the Joachimsthal Mint, 2. July 1543; then transferred to Kremnitz, 1544-1550. In 1551 we find him in Vienna as Goldsmith to the Court and Mint-engraver. Privy mark, crescent moon. He was still in office at the end of November 1586, when he received fresh instructions regarding the Hungarian coinage.

His mint-mark occurs on Joachimsthaler and Half-Thaler of Ferdinand (1542-1544) and also on medals of a religious character. Of this sum, the officers of the mint struck off £. 20 for overcharge for the seal for South Carolina. The account included seals for England and Ireland, and also for the Plantations of America. The amount for Plantation seals came to £. 349. 13 s. 3 d., which was paid out of the Virginia quit rents. ROMANO, GIANCRISTOFORO (Ital.). Sculptor, Goldsmith, Medallist and Gem-engraver of the last four decades of the fifteenth century and early part of the sixteenth, circ. 1465-1512.

"Strongly influenced by l'Antico", says Herr von Fabriczy, "but surpassing him in almost every respect, appears an artist whom, in spite of his foreign origin, we must rank here, since the most important part of his career belongs to Milan and Mantua. Giancristoforo Romano represents in the third generation a family of artists, which, in his grandfather, Pippo Gante at Pisa, and in his father Isaia of Pisa in Rome, had furnished distinguished masters of sculpture. From 1491 to 1497 we find Giancristoforo occupied with important works of plastic art at the Court of Milan, from that time until the end of 1505 in Mantua, where in 1498 he made the medal

medal, in 1506; also, in the following year at Naples, that of Isabella of Aragon, widow of Giangaleazzo Maria Sforza who had been dethroned by Lodovico II Moro. After a passing sojourn at the Court of Urbino, where — accomplished courtier that he was

1. "Thanks to the sympathetic personality of the Marchioness, honoured throughout Italy, as well as to the excellence of the medal as an artistic achievement, it became so popular and was so much sought after that in 1505 Giancristoforo was obliged to issue a replica — the only instance known to us of an artist personally supervising a second edition of a medal. It deviates in a few features — the aquiline nose, the slightly projecting lower lip, the different necklace, the sharply defined edge of the bodice — from the original treatment, as is clearly evident from the example (in a gold frame set with jewels) in the Cabinet of Vienna. The reverse remained entirely unaltered in the replica."

— he won all hearts, especially by his musical and poetic endowments, he was entrusted in 1509 with the position of architect of the Cathedral at Loreto, where he died in the course of three years in the prime of life, a victim of the terrible disease which had been brought to Italy by the army of Charles VIII.

Lucrezia Borgia.

“ A document only recently discovered has shown the master to be the author of the three medals already mentioned. All three are inspired with a grace hitherto unknown in works of the kind — even the “Papa terribile” has acquired an expression of fatherly bonhomie in Romano's presentation. The relief is, at the same time, modelled with unusual delicacy, even a little affected nicety is not disdained : for example, the veil, which reveals rather than hides the features of Duchess Isabella, which the contemporary letter already mentioned extols as "cosa molto artificiosa." The allegories of the reverses, in their carefully thought out composition, breathing throughout the keenest sense of beauty both in motive and form, are likewise jewels of their kind : inspired in both respects by the antique, they nevertheless forfeit nothing of their attractive individual cachet. The proudly standing goddess of Victory of the Gonzaga medal, with her draperies flowing round her ; the indescribably graceful seated nude maiden on the Aragon medal, a marvel of expression and modelling on so small a scale ; Peace and Faith joining hands in alliance over the sacrificial fire on the medal of Julius — all are perfectly finished pictures. With entire justice does the witness already mentioned say that they "ad iudicio di ogni intelligente alli boni antichi se possono comparar", since not only in motive, but in their innermost being they breathe the spirit of the antique. True, their composition has been dictated by an entirely different principle from the realism which in Pisano appeals to us with elemental power. We already stand confronted with the Cinquecento view of the world and art!

"Besides these three undoubted pieces, some others have been quite recently added to the number of his works. Hitherto they had been attributed to an anonymous artist (or even, without any justification, to the Florentine painter, Filippino Lippi). On the ground of their great similarity in style, the time and place of their origin, the ties of relationship or friendship which existed between the persons depicted, W. Bode has recognised the hand of Giancristoforo Romano in the medals of Alfonso I. of Este and of his wife, Lucrezia Borgia, as well as in those of the otherwise unknown Jacopa Correggio, Maddalena de' Rossi and F. Francina. The medals of the Este couple were made in the year 1503, while one of the three redactions of the medal of Lucrezia, deviating by some slight alterations from the original, is not earlier than 1505. The assumption that the artist made the former in Mantua, the latter when passing through Ferrara on his way to Rome, has every show of probability, since Alfonso and his wife were brother and sister-in-law of the artist's patroness, Isabella Gonzaga. It is likewise known that the families of the Correggio and Rossi of Parma were related or on friendly terms with the Gonzaga and Este. Decisive, however, is the criterion of style. The medals of Jacopa and Maddalena still retain much of the character of L'Antico — in the latter his realistic force, in the former the delight in emphasising the ornament in costume and headdress (see his Balzo medal); while in grace and delicacy of modelling both medals far surpass the earlier artist's skill. Now the portraits of Lucrezia have so much in common with those of Isabella Gonzaga both in style and arrangement, and that of Alfonso, more especially in its soft modelling, so vividly recalls the portrait on the medal of Julius, that the attribution of the pieces to the same hand seems almost irrefutable. It is true that the perfectly charming representation of captive Cupid on the reverse of one of the medals of Lucrezia seems, in its free pictorial composition, to contrast with the severe plastic manner of the pieces certainly made by Giancristoforo Romano. Nevertheless it is more nearly approached by the earlier redaction of the Cupid scene on the Correggio and Rossi medals, and it is by no means inexplicable that the scene should be developed later in a more picturesque form. Above all, however, it is the same spirit of exquisite grace and deep sense of beauty that connects the fettered Cupid with the allegories of the undoubted pieces. Not without reason has so accomplished a judge as Friedländer pronounced the medal adorned by this scene "one of the most beautiful, most charming, and most rare".

"In addition to these pieces, restored to our master by Bode, we are inclined to ascribe to him the medal of the youthful Cardinal Domenico Grimani. Hitherto it has been regarded as a work of the Venetian medallist Vittore Gambello, probably on the sole ground that Gambello made a medal of the same personage in more advanced years, on the reverse of which the composition of the type of the earlier medal was copied exactly. In style, however, the two pieces are worlds apart! While the latter may be classed with Gambello's other works, the former shows many points of similarity with the medals of Giancristoforo, even to the form of the letters and the peculiarity that the letters on the reverse are smaller and thicker than those on the obverse. Moreover, the subject on the reverse, Theology and Philosophy, symbolized by two female figures, most strikingly corresponds, both in composition and outline, with those on the other medals of the master, but has not the smallest resemblance to Gambello's style, as a comparison between this and the repetition of the same composition on his Grimani medal clearly shows. Since Giancristoforo's medal represents Grimani, who became cardinal in 1493 at the age of thirty, as at the most thirty-five years of age, it must have been made during the artist's Mantuan period, while on some chance visit to Venice, where the Cardinal may also have been accidentally at the time. That, however, his later medal, which represents him at the age of fifty to fifty-five, repeats the design on the reverse of the earlier piece was perhaps due to some express wish of the sitter. According to what we have just said, these medals must have been made about 1515; in fact, Gambello was occupied in Rome at the Papal Mint from 1515 to 1517."

The above admirable notice of Giancristoforo's Romano's work from the pen of Herr von Fabriczy, whom I have quoted in extenso, gives a clear account of the artist's work.

Bertolotti was the first to discover Giancristoforo's name as a Medallist (Artisti in relazione coi Gonzaga) from a letter addressed to the Marchesa of Mantua, Isabella d'Este, by Giacomo d'Atri, her ambassador at Naples, who mentions three of his medals. Vasari informs us that he was a pupil of Paolo Romano, and he calls him a clever sculptor, by whom are some works at Santa Maria in Trastevere. Giancristoforo is known also to have executed a tomb in the church of St. Vincent at Cremona, while at Venice are still existing two crystal vases by him with Biblical representations cut on them. He died at Loreto, 31. May 1512, from fever, leaving, amongst other things, a collection of 36 bronze medals, 87 silver medals, cameos, rings, precious stones, and antique intaglios, etc.

M. de la Tour hesitates to accept von Fabriczy's attribution to Giancristoforo Romano of the medals mentioned above, beyond the three first, which M. Valton was first to give to him (Rev. num., 1885, p. 316). Mr. Hill does not dispute the artist's authorship of the Lucrezia Borgia medal, but is not quite so confident about those of Alfonso I d'Este and Jacopa Correggio. The last was hitherto ascribed to Pomedello. M. de Foville suggests (Le Médailleur à "l'Amour captif", Gazette des Beaux-Arts, 1908, pp. 385-393) the Mantuan artist MELIOLI as the author of the Lucrezia Borgia medal as well as those of Clara Gonzaga, and Jacopa Correggio. Melioli (q. v.), the Engraver of the coins of Giovanni Francesco II. of Mantua, executed medals of that Marquis, and of Magdalena Gonzaga. M. de Foville finds a great analogy in the work of the medal and coin of Gian Francesco II and the portrait of Lucrezia Borgia.

C. von Fabriczy's notice of this artist in Italian Medals is worth quoting here:

“ The most prolific of the Florentine medallists of the Cinquecento — Pastorino excepted — was Pier Paolo Galeotti (died 1584), called “Il Romano”, from the place of his birth, which, however, he exchanged in his early youth for Florence. We possess seventy-two authenticated pieces by his hand, of which no fewer than sixteen bear the portrait of Duke Cosimo I. To judge from the considerable number of Milanese and Genoese personages depicted, he appears to have worked in North Italy also. In 1575 he was appointed one of the die-engravers of the papal mint, but never seems to have made any prolonged sojourn in Rome. From 1550 until his death he was employed at the grand-ducal mint. Vasari cites among his works twelve medals of Cosimo I., the reverses of which depict the most important works of peace executed during his reign — the sanitation of Pisa, the water-supply of Florence, the foundation of a city on Elba, the building of the Laurentiana, the Palazzo Pitti, etc. All have been preserved: eight are even extant in marble replicas on a larger scale on the pedestal of a piece of sculpture, the purpose of which can no longer be ascertained, now standing in the Museum of the Refectory of the Ognisanti" (Engl. ed., p. 181).

one of Charles V's great generals.

ROSSI, GIOVANNI ANTONIO DE (Ital.). Milanese Gem-, and Coin-engraver, and Medallist who flourished from about 1517 until after 1575. He was born at Milan, worked at Venice for some years, and in 1544 settled at Rome, where he was employed in engraving medals for the Popes Marcellus II. and Paul IV. In 1557 he accepted an offer of two hundred ducats from Cosimo I., Duke of Florence, to cut a large cameo on which is depicted the entire grand-ducal family. This famous cameo is still preserved, although in a fragmentary condition, in the gem collection of the Uffizi gallery at Florence. The artist resided four years in Florence, 1557-1560. To this period belong his medals on the conquest of Calais by Henry II. of France, 1558, and that of Giovanni Battista Gelli. In 1560, he returned to Rome, and there became Warden of the Papal Mint in Cesati's place. In this capacity he also engraved dies for coins, and medals of Cardinal Carlo Borromeo (1563), Popes Pius IV. (seven pieces), Pius V. (nine) and Gregory XIII. (three).

Beside these, Armand ascribes to Rossi a Portrait-medal of Vincenzo Bovio, apostolic protonotary of Bologna, 1550, and Keary three others, but without any justification (Brit. Museum Guide, Italian Medals, pp. 60-61).

The workmanship of the Rossi medals is somewhat rough.

As a Gem-engraver, this artist established a reputation by his famous cameo, an onyx of seven inches in diameter, with the portraits of Cosimo I. and his wife, Eleonora di Toledo, accompanied by their seven children in three-quarters length. "One of Rossi's signed works," says King, "has come under my notice, an intaglio in sard, Saturn seated, holding a large scythe; under the throne, G. ROSSI. The work exhibits that excessive polish which is the surest criterion for recognizing the productions of the cinquecento school. This is the sole instance known to me of a cinquecento artist's signature occurring, placed on any other of his works than the crystal plaques, with the exception perhaps, of the masterpieces of Il Greco; and even his name may have been intended to pass current for antique with the world at large. Hence it is demonstrable that the smaller gems then so abundantly executed were meant to be brought into the market as works of ancient engravers, just as the heaps of coins from the dies of the same artists are known to have been."

Giovanni Antonio de Rossi's period of activity as a Gem-engraver belongs to the earlier part of his life, which he spent at Milan, Venice, and Florence. A Portrait-cameo of a Mr. Marlyn, is signed : V. P. M. IO. ANT. R. (onyx).

ROSSI, PROPERZIA DE' (Ital.). Gem-engraver of the first half of the sixteenth century, who died in 1533 at Bologna. She commenced her career by engraving minute reliefs on peach-stones. Vasari speaks with astonishment of a Crucifixion with an infinity of figures, besides the executioners and the Apostles, worked in this manner. Afterwards she distinguished herself in sculpture in marble, many pieces from her chisel being incorporated in the Cathedral of San Petronio. Finally, she gave herself up entirely to engraving copper-plates. Nothing is recorded of her proficiency in gem-engraving, but her extraordinary skill in the first art she cultivated makes it almost certain that she succeeded in cameo-cutting on harder materials. She died in 1533, in the very week that Clement VII. crowned the Emperor at Bologna, to that pontiff's infinite disappointment, who as a lover of art was extremely anxious to have seen her. ROTH, JOHANN BAPTIST (Austr.). Chief Coin- and Medal-engraver to the Imperial Mint at Vienna, was born in that city in 1802, and died there in 1869. His first work of note was the Milanese Coronation medal of Ferdinand I., 1838, which after Manfredini's medal was the best of the eight competitive medals issued to commemorate that event. In 1840 he engraved the Medal on the Inauguration of the Kaiser Ferdinand Waterworks at Vienna; — 1841. Return of Syria to the Porte by Mehemet Ali; — 1843.

Completion of the Tower of St. Stephan's Church at Vienna; — 1844. Inauguration of the Southern State Railways from Vienna to Gratz; — 1845. Inauguration of the Northern State Railways from Vienna to Prague; — Industrial and Agricultural Exhibition at Vienna; — 1846. Tenth Anniversary of the Death of Francis I.

In 1840 J. B. Roth undertook the issue of Viennese Historical Thalers, but only one, that commemorating the construction of the Schottenthor was struck.

In 1841 he executed the official medal on the Building of the famous Bridge over the lagoons at Venice, which however is not signed.

Roth's activity as a Medallist ceased about 1846. He owned the gold Cross of Merit with crown of the Austrian empire.

ROTHER, CONSTANTIN (Germ.). Mint-master at Dresden, 1640-1678. He was a son of Michael Rothe, and grandson of the Annaberg Mint-master, Matthaeus Rothe; born 16. September 1600; died, 6. June 1678. He was city Warden of Leipzig, and was called over to Dresden about 1640. As Mint-master he placed his initials and an acorn on the coins. He married on 21. September 1641 and had eleven children.

This Mint-master's privy mark occurs on the coins of John George I. and II.

“The Reichs-Thalers of Johann Georg II., Halves and Orts produced by Mint-master Constantin Rothe are of the usual type but the Elector is represented in his robes and ermine-mantle with drawn sword, the cap of State being placed on a table before him. These portraits are of very poor execution, but this monarch probably furnished a very ungrateful task to the artist, for his features are of surpassing ugliness on all coins of his reign. Of splendid conception and execution however are the “broad” multiple thalers of 1663 which represent a large standing figure of the Elector facing, robed over his armour, and standing upon a tessellated pavement between a draped column and a table upon which is placed his plumed helmet and gauntlets.

John George II, Reichsthaler, 1675.

“The reverse shews the Electoral Arms with date etc. within a narrow wreath surrounded by twenty shields of Arms of the Saxon territories and dependencies. This was also issued by Constantin Rothe whose initials appear with the Annaberg mint-mark, an acorn.”

“In 1667 John George II. entered into convention with the Elector of Brandenburg and the Duke of Brunswick by which the “Mark” of fine silver should in their lands be converted into ten Thalers and twelve Groschen whence the distinction between “Reichs” and “Species” Thalers.

“The second series of Reichs-Thalers produced by Rothe shew a half-figure of John George II. in armour and wig with naked sword, his plumed helmet placed before him. The reverses continue the conventional type.

“Probably the most remarkable numismatic productions of this reign to British notions would be the several so-called “Hosenband” Thalers which commemorate the joyful reception by John George II. of the Order of the Garter from King Charles the Second of England in 1671 and the Chapter of 1678 which was celebrated at the Saxon Court with great circumstance.

“The obverse of these pieces shews a large and elaborate representation of the combat between St George and the dragon, surrounded by EN HONNEUR DU SOUVERAIN DU TRES NOBLE ORDRE DE LA LARTIERE. On the reverse in nine lines within a

He was created a Knight of the Legion of Honour in 1885, and promoted to the rank of Officer, on 29. October 1889. In June une attitude, un beau pli antique, la vie contemporaine l'a pris bien davantage. Les puissants et les humbles ont tour à tour passé devant lui, et tous lui ont laissé le secret d'eux-mêmes, car il a surpris chez les uns et les autres l'expression ou le geste simple qui caractérise une vie. De là ces dessins pleins de charme, si naturels en leur séduction (L'Art décoratif, III, p. 244).

Patrie, grave, sérieuse, triste, au grand oeil creux et réfléchi, toujours en deuil, mais dont le revers réveille le frisson des grands espoirs avec son coq qui chante dans l'aurore, sur la terre inondée de rayons, éventrée par la charrue ? Qui ne connaît cette grande et immortelle figure de Jeanne, liée au poteau infâme, levant au ciel, dans les flammes du bûcher, ses yeux pleins de foi, qui semblent répéter les paroles de l'exergue : « Ma mission était de Dieu ! ». Qui ne connaît toutes ces nobles et touchantes allégories qui font vibrer si discrètement et si profondément les fibres les plus sensibles de nos cœurs : La Maternité, pressant sur son sein, dans un geste de tendresse si chaude et si caressante, le cher petit être qu'elle baise au front, la Jeunesse offrant ses hommages au vieux Chevreul, la fiancée de la Médaille de Mariage qui tend sa main pour recevoir l'anneau du fiancé, avec une dignité si modeste, si chaste, un don si pur et si entier de son être ? Et toutes ces figures, d'une grâce infinie, ces types enchanteurs de jeunes femmes d'une beauté particulière qui les fait toutes parentes, d'une gravité simple, d'une élégance sérieuse et réservée, ayant toutes, dans leur attitude calme et leurs gestes rythmés, je ne sais quoi de noble, de chaste, de fier et de virginal. Il s'en exhale un parfum très frais de nature, uni à un souvenir lointain et suave des plus beaux exemples de l'antiquité. Ce charme opère si instantanément, avec une telle puissance, qu'on a l'impression, devant cet ensemble si riche et si varié, si imprévu et si nouveau, d'être en contemplation devant l'œuvre d'un génie ardent et spontané, à l'imagination active et toujours mouvante, produisant sous l'empire de l'inspiration et de l'entraînement. On ne perçoit pas au premier abord toute la science, la réflexion, la logique, l'esprit d'observation rigoureuse, d'analyse méthodique subtile et délicate, qui ont contribué à former cette magnifique éclosion poétique, si séduisante et si émouvante, cette splendeur d'art et cette profondeur de pensée (L. Bénédite, L. O. Roty : Art et Décoration, 1897, I, p. 34).

“Every one knows how important a position has now been reached by the medal in the domain of jewellery. For a long time it was the fashion to have a piece of antique money mounted as a brooch or pin ; then came the idea of substituting effigies of more recent date for these relics of by-gone civilisations, these little discs of metal, with their time-worn, half-effaced relief ; finally, it seemed desirable to be, as Daumier strove to be, de son époque — up-to-date, in a word ; to pass over works which were not conceived with a view to ornament, and in their stead to model specially medals appropriate in character to the part they were to play in setting off the modern toilette.

M. Roty was the first to understand their legitimate conditions, the first to realise them fully. His native delicacy, his sentiment at once subtle and strong, did much to support his ambition. Again and again, to the delight of womankind, he has revived the smiling graces of the eighteenth century. His success, as was only natural, produced imitators ; and to-day, even in the small towns in France, one may see in the jewellers' windows these medal-brooches, some the work of M. Roty himself, others by M. Vernon, M. Prouvé, or M. Yencesse—all most attractive and appropriate articles of ornament, and at the same time genuine works of art” (Roger Marx, French Medal, XXV, 23).

“The powers of men like Roty or Chaplain stand out the more prominently as they mark the logical conclusion, the result of half a century of labour and research. There is an abundance of contrasts between the works of the two men; and the diversity of talent shown by these leaders, while adding considerable lustre to the present movement, is also an incentive to fresh rivalry between them. Chaplain is remarkable for his force. His works gain fulness by the boldness of their plan, their sober style of draughtsmanship, and the pronounced fondness of their author for powerful figuration. He is above all a rigorously truthful portraitist, excelling in the characterisation and the definition of the male physiognomy. His series of portraits of the members of the Academy of Fine Arts deserves hence-forward to be regarded as classic. M. Roty’s art reveals other phases of French thought. More sensitive and more imaginative than M. Chaplain, and more solicitous of grace and distinction, at once ingenuous and subtle, he recalls Proud’hon, inasmuch as, like him, he has the gift of realising, arousing, and making evident at the first glance the meaning of the most abstract generalities. In his allegories, as in his symbols of faith and love and maternity, poetry and truth are delightfully mingled. His whole work proclaims and sings the beauty of womanhood, now revealed quite unclothed, now the contour of the form left to be divined under the transparent draperies. These garments, flowing in harmonious folds, have been compared to those seen in Grecian statuary and in the coroplastes of Tanagra. It would be more correct to say that M. Roty has rejuvenated the art of antique drapery, and has derived therefrom many exquisite effects. His, too, is the credit of having restored to honour the plaquette, which would seem to have lost its use since the Renaissance” (R. Marx, The Renaissance of the Medal in France, The Studio, XV, 15).

« Avec M. Roty “says M. Roger Marx”, l’art du médailleur atteint sa pleine expression d’originalité, d’indépendance. L’allégorie, qui a répudié les mythes consacrés, s’humanise, s’individualise, de manière à découvrir au premier regard les sens des généralisations les plus abstraites; moderne par le type, le galbe, l’ajustement, elle revêt une forme définitivement dégagée des lourdeurs du second Empire, une forme jeune, svelte, nerveuse, dont la courbe se suit sans peine sous l’envolée des draperies légères. Et l’accord est exquis quand à l’allégorie se mêle quelque réalité naïvement observée. Une médaille, une plaquette de M. Roty, c’est cette alliance imprévue : la fraîcheur souriante de l’imagination s’accom-pagnant de l'étude passionnée de la nature, l'invention s'ajoutant à la vérité pour se pénétrer délicieusement ; c'est encore le métal qui s'anime et emprunte à la dégradation à peine accusée des reliefs et à la transparence des ombres le secret de la couleur, l'attrait d'une harmonie apaisée. D'où vient pourtant que cet art nous trouble à ce point, sinon qu'il est tout d'instinct, plein de sincérité, d'émotion tendre et neuve ? L'exemple d'Evainetos, de Kimôn, de Sperandio n'a donc que faire ici. M. Roty a pu goûter le charme de l'antiquité, à la façon d'André Chénier, mais rien ne vaut à son gré la nature ambiante, qu'il interroge ardemment, en analyste patient et sensible, qu'il exprime sans subtilité florentine, avec la pure bonne foi et la chaleur d'âme d'un maître de vraie lignée française » (Médailleurs français, p. 21).

By Roussel are a larger number of Jetons, besides a series of 60 medalets or playing counters, made in 1711, for the "Jeu de l'homme" on which he represented subjects drawn from Ovid's Metamorphoses.

Dr Eug. Demôle of Geneva has just published a memoir in Revue suisse de numismatique, t. XVI, 1910, entitled : "Les Jetons représentant les Métamorphoses d'Ovide sont-ils l'œuvre de Jérôme Roussel, de Jean Dassier ou de Ferdinand de Saint-Urbain" and conclusively proved that the jetons in question are by Jérôme Roussel, who had them struck at Geneva. The dies apparently came into the possession of Jean Dassier, who in conjunction with a certain Barthélemy Favre, had the series restruck with three fresh dedication pieces to Philip Duke of Orleans to take the place of those issued by Roussel.

Roussel's jetons illustrating Ovid's Metamorphoses are : Lib. I.

dolphins (a variety exists in M. Paul Bordeaux's collection at Neuilly-sur-Seine) ; — 15. Panthaeus torn up by his mother and aunts.

Jean Dassier, who acquired the dies of Roussel, issued the following additional Jetons of the above series : Dedicatory Jeton to Philip of Orleans, regent of France, 1717 ; — 1. Semiramis builds the walls of Babylon ; — 2. Pyramus and Thisbe ; — Unfinished die, represented Semele consumed by Jupiter's fire.

The Paris Mint Museum possesses 18 unfinished dies depicting various subjects of Ovid's Metamorphoses, which are copies of some of the above-described types, of a slightly smaller size, but D<sup>r</sup> Demole does not decide on their authorship, and so they may be either by Jérôme Roussel or Jean Dassier.

Roussel's dies came ultimately into the possession of Ferdinand de St. Urbain (q. v.) who intended reissuing these jetons, but there is nothing to prove that he did so.

Koehler and Brunn ascribed this cameo to the sixteenth century, but Furtwängler maintains that it is antique. Some modern replicas exist.

RUNDELL, BRIDGE AND RUNDELL (Brit.). A Firm of Jewellers and Silversmiths, who edited a number of medals in the early part of the nineteenth century, some of which will be found described under the names of their respective engravers. One of them, by Thomas Wyon, commemorates the Bombardment of Algiers, 1816. The following medals bear this firm's name in full: — The peace of 1814. Laureate bust of the Prince Regent. GEORGIUS PRINCEPS WALLÆ PATRIAM PRO PATRE REGENS. MDCCCXIII (J. Barber on truncation). R. SEIPSAM CONSTANTIA EUROPAM EXEMPLO. Britannia raising the drooping figure of Europa; above, Victory with laurel wreath (T. Wyon jun. in exergue); — Bombardment of Algiers, 1816 (illustrated) (T. Wyon jun. on obverse, T. Wyon on reverse); — Accession of George IV, 1820 (without the artist's name). R. ACCESSIT XXIX IAN MDCCCXX; — Coronation of George IV, 1821 (Without the artist's name). R. GOD SAVE THE KING, &c.

RUNET (French). The signature is said to occur on a Pattern 5 Franc piece of Charles X., but Dewamin evidently did not know of it, as he does not mention it.

RUNG, HANS (Germ.). Goldsmith and Medallist at Augsburg, circ. 1565, died in 1602. He worked for the mint at Munich, and received payments for work done from the Mint-master, Anton Hundertpfund. He married his second wife in 1588. His name also occurs as RUNGE or RUNGEN.

RUPRECHT (Austr.). Moneyer at Vienna, 1378; died before 1385.

RUS, CHRISTOPH (Germ.). Mint-warden at Kallmünz-Neuburg, circ. 1619.

RUSKIN, JOHN (Brit.). Born in London, 1819. He graduated at the University of Oxford, and gained the Newdigate Prize for Poetry in 1839. Later, he studied art under Fielding and J. D. Harding, attaining an ordinary proficiency as a draughtsman, but never becoming a professional artist. Ruskin is known, however, throughout the English-speaking world as an art critic, and a brilliant and prolific, as well as original, writer upon art subjects. Not always temperate in his strictures upon existing art and contemporary artists, he has frequently been the subject of severe criticism from rival critics; but, unquestionably, no work of its kind has been more widely read than Ruskin's "Modern Painters", and to no single work and to no single author does the world of art owe so much.

In 1867 Ruskin was appointed Rede Lecturer at Cambridge, and in 1869, Slade Professor of Fine Arts at Oxford. In 1871 he endowed the Taylor Gallery at Oxford with £. 5,000 for the maintenance of a master of Drawing, and he generally spent the greater part of his private fortune in other schemes for art education and the public good.

Ruskin furnished illustrations for "The Stones of Venice", and for the later volumes of "Modern Painters".

Ruskin, in his works on art, did not omit the coin- and medal-engravers' productions, and he certainly influenced in some measure present-day British medallists. The famous critic had great power of observation and much skill in expressing that observation.

RUSMEYER, JOACHIM (Germ.). Mint-master at Hamburg, circ. 1694-1717. Ammon states that his issues are signed : I. R.

RUSPAGIARI, ALFONSO DA TOMASO (Ital.). Sculptor, and Medallist, born at Reggio d'Emilia, on 28. July 1521, appears to have died before 1577. Bolzenthall, D. Promis, and Armand, have ascribed to this artist a series of medals, mostly signed A. R. or AR. Very little is known about Ruspagliari's career. Balletti, who has made thorough investigations in the Reggian archives, has not been able to add much to the scant information given by former writers. He appears to have been descended from one of the patrician families of his native city, and was very well connected.

He married in 1540; his wife's name was Ippolita. She presented him with four daughters: Filarida Anna, 12. March 1541; Dalia Anna, 31. May 1556; Celia, 1. February 1559; and Isabella. Contemporary documents show that he held a prominent position in the Council of Reggio, and that he was several times deputed to superintend public works.

The medals attributed to Ruspagliari are: Self Portrait, with legend: ALF. RUSPAGIARI. REGIEN. and on truncation of bust: IDEM A. R.; diam.: 78 mill. (illustrated); — Another, smaller (reproduced in Rassegna d'Arte, July 1901); — Camilla Ruggieri; signed: A. R.; diam.: 69 mill. (Rassegna d'Arte, May 1904, p. 45);

— Lucia Ruspagiari; uniface; signed : A.R.; diam. : 63 mill.
(Rassegna d'Arte, July 1901); — Alessandro Ardeni, painter of Faenza; signed : A.R. This medal has a reverse, whereas the preceding are uniface; diam.: 53 mill.; — A specimen of Alessandro Ardeni's portrait in the Rosenheim Collection is attached to the portrait of Agostino Ardeni, who may have been his brother; — Portrait-plaquette, uniface, of a Lady, veiled, with left shoulder; bare: 70 × 53 mill.; — Portrait-medallion, uniface, of a Lady, in oval frame; in front of her, profile of beardless man; signed : A.R.; diam.: 68 mill. (illustrated); — Claudia Pancalieri; uniface; signed : A.R.; diam.: 65 mill.; — Filiberto Pingone, baron of Cusi, 1526-1582; dated 1573 and signed : A.R.; R. SAPIENTER AVDE. Eagle and peacock perched on a tree. A specimen, without the signature, is dated 1574 (According to Mr. Hill, this medal cannot be by Ruspagiari, and may even be of Flemish origin); — Unknown Lady, in the attributes of Pallas, helmeted; uniface; 62 mill.

Testoni of Alfonso II d'Este for Reggio, 1571, have been ascribed to the artist also. Armand, and more recently, Balletti, have drawn attention to the great difference in style and execution between the medals just mentioned, and those signed AR, which may be by another artist, although Promis did not hesitate to give them to Ruspagiari, and that most of the personages represented are Savoyard, and especially the medal of Asdrubale Bambasi, who was a poet of Reggio, and consequently a fellow Burgess of Ruspagiari, seems likely enough to be the latter's work.

The following medals, signed AR, are described by Armand: Asdrubale Bambasi; uniface; diam.: 58 mill. (illustrated); — Emanuele Filiberto, duke of Savoy, 1528-1580; uniface; diam.:

76 mill. ; — Carlo Emanuele, duke of Savoy, 1562-1630 ; uniface ; 77 mill. ; — Another specimen has a RZ. by Leone Leoni (the three Graces) affixed to it ; — Marie de Grillet, contessa Pancalieri ; uniface ; 62 mill. ; — Beatrice Langosco, contessa Scarampi ; uniface ; 54 mill. ; — Jacqueline de Montbel et d'Entremont, wife of the famous French huguenot admiral, Gaspard de Coligny ; diam. : 55 mill. ; two reverses : (a) IN.TENEBRIS.LVCET. Five butterflies fluttering around a torch ; (b) PREMITVR.NO.OPRIMITVR. Stormy sea from which emerges an anchor ; — Unknown Lady, as Pallas, helmeted ; legend : VIRTVTI.VICTRICI. ; unsigned ; uniface ; 72 mill. ; — Pietro Machiavelli of Lucca ; signed : AAR. These medals cannot be by Ruspagiari, and Mr. Hill suggests Alessandro Ardeni, who worked in Lucca and Savoy, as their author.

To these Armand adds a medal of Ercole II. d'Este, fourth duke of Ferrara, 1508-1559, and Domanig, another of Alfonso II d'Este, 1533-1597, which he calls " in the art of Ruspagiari. "

" There exists " says Mr. Hill ", a group of medals signed : AR representing Charles Emanuel and Emanuel Filibert of Savoy, which have been without any reason attributed to Ruspagiari. With these (on grounds of style) may be classed a medal of Pietro Machiavelli of Lucca, which is signed : AAR. All these medals, as well as some others of Savoyan personages, signed AR, may possibly belong to Alessandro Ardeni, who worked in Lucca and Savoy. Ruspagiari should also be relieved of the medal of Filiberto Pingone, which has absolutely no relation to his style. Its high relief, method of dating on the truncation, its reverse design, its whole treatment and feeling, are as different from his as possible. Closely related, in the manner of treating the bust, to the medallist A.A. are Bombarda and the artist who signs S, and who has on quite insufficient evidence been identified with Niccolò Signoretti. We must for the present be content to place S alongside of A.A. as a probable pupil of Ruspagiari ".

Ruspagiari's style betrays, say Balletti, the influence of Pastorino (1553-7) and Bombarda (1557-9).

with the confection of the seal of the Bernese Grossrat, that of the Post Office, and many other official seals. The only medal that I know by him is the Federal Shooting Fête medal at Berne, 1830, which exhibits tolerable work. There are varieties. One specimen in bronze, probably unique, exists in M. Arnold Robert's collection.

RUTILIO GACI (Ital.). Caci or Cacius (q. v. Final supplement) was a Florentine nobleman, and a Sculptor in the service of Philip IV., King of Spain, at Madrid, during the first half of the seventeenth century. He was held in high esteem as an artist, and especially noted as a modeller in wax.

He likewise distinguished himself as a Medallist. His works betray the influence of Leone Leoni, and Jacopo da Trezzo.

Don Pablo Bosch of Madrid possesses a Portrait-medal, uniface, depicting a man, aged about forty, accompanied by the legend : RVTILVS CACIVS. MDCXV, undoubtedly the artist's self portrait ; also, that of his wife, Dona Beatriz de Rojas y de Castro, uniface, and signed : RVT.CA (both illustrated, by kind permission of the owner).

Philip III and Margaret.

The signature RVT or R<sup>o</sup> occurs also on two uniface medals of Philip III. of Spain, and his consort, the Archduchess Margaret, daughter of the Archduke Charles of Styria. The latter is dated 1609. A medal, formerly in the Gutekunst collection had both portraits affixed ; another is in the Madrid Museo Arqueologico Nacional, and a third is in Don Pablo Bosch's cabinet. Both are described in Van Loon.

Philip III and Margaret.

Mr. W. Moore formerly owned a fine Portrait medal in bronze of Philip II., 1621, signed on both sides with LVSTRAT ET FOVET and Chariot of the Sun on R (55 mill.), copied from the R of a medal of Philip II. by Jacopo da Trezzo. A specimen in lead is preserved in the Madrid Museo Arqueológico, and another in bronze is also in Don Pablo Bosch's collection. Published by Van Loon and in the Catalogue of the Vidal y Quadras Collection.

Pinchart mentions the monogram of the artist on a Portrait-medal of Archduke Leopold William.

Herrera gives an interesting monograph of Rutilio Gaci and dwells on his manifold activity in various branches of art and letters.

A further uniface medal in lead with the same monogram was formerly in Mr. Max Rosenheim's Collection, and is now in that of Don Pablo Bosch. The personage depicted, Alexander Rodulphius, appears otherwise unknown. I owe to the kindness of the above gentlemen the favour of giving an illustration of this interesting portrait-piece, which is one of the finest of the medallic works of Rutilio Gaci.

Alexander Rodulphius.

A specimen of Rutilio Caci's Self-portrait, 1615, uniface, in lead, was sold in November 1910 (Gutekunst Sale, n° 91) for 80 Marks.

Don Pablo Bosch exhibited his medals of Rutilio Gaci at the International Numismatic Congress at Brussels, June 1910.

SAINT-ÉLÈNE, MICHEL DE (also MICHAEL DE ST. HELEN). (Brit.). Mint-engraver at London in the earlier part of the reign of Henry III, circ. 1225. In a document of 1220, he is styled "Reparator Cuneorum". Ruding, under the date 1621, states: "A considerable coinage being about to be executed in the sixth year of Henry III., the following persons were sworn in the court of exchequer, on the morrow of Ash-Wednesday: Ilger, and three others, as custodes monetæ of the city of London; Adam Blund, and seven others custodes cuneorum; Michael de St. Helen, repurator cuneorum; and Robert de Grettone, and Geffrey de Frowe, assayers. On the same day eight dies for round halfpennies and farthings, and, in a short time afterwards, eight more for pennies, and eight for halfpennies, and the same number for farthings, over and above the eight first mentioned, were delivered to the same persons".

SAINT-GAUDENS, AUGUSTUS. (Vide GAUDENS. Vol. II, p. 215). This artist was born in Dublin, Ireland, March 1, 1848. His father, Bernard Paul Ernest, was a native of France, from the vicinity of the town of Saint-Gaudens, among the spurs of the Pyrenees.

U. S. A. 5 Dollar piece, 1907.

His mother, whose maiden name was Mary Guinness, was a native of Dublin. They settled in America while Augustus was an infant, and after remaining three months in Boston established themselves in New York. He attended school until he was thirteen, when in 1861 he went to work with a cameo-cutter named Avet, said to be the first stone cameo-cutter in the United States and served a three-years apprenticeship, "a time of miserable slavery", as he himself says, at the end of which time he found employment with a shell-cameo-cutter named Le Breton, with whom he remained for three years. During all the time that he was working at the wheel he studied drawing at night. The first four years he went to the Cooper Union; the last two were spent in the life classes of the National Academy of Design.

At the age of twenty he was already a master of low relief. He then went abroad and was at the Ecole des Beaux Arts, Paris, 1867-70. He married in Boston, 1877, Augusta F. Homer. He was in Rome, 1870-2, producing there, in 1871, his first figure. Among his works are "Diana" (on the tower of Madison Square Garden, New York), and numerous well-known statues in the larger cities of the Union; among the best known of these is the monument in Boston to Colonel Shaw and his regiment of coloured troops, executed in bronze. Some of his most charming work was done in low relief, in the form of medallions of his friends and fellow-artists, and occasionally of prominent men, for public memorials.

U. S. A. 20 Dollar piece, 1907.

He was a corresponding member of the Institute of France; officer of the Legion of Honour; received the medal of honour, Paris, 1900, and a special medal of honour at Buffalo, 1901.

"Augustus Saint Gaudens, a sculptor whose art follows but ennobles nature, confers fame and lasting remembrance, and does not count the mortal years it takes to mould immortal forms." Thus spoke President Eliot at the commencement of Harvard University in June 1897, when conferring upon the sculptor the degree of Master of Arts; and the years that have gone have not brought a worthier or more fitting tribute, one which now may well serve as an epitaph. He died at Cornish, N. H., Aug. 3, 1908, after an illness extending over several years. Greatest of all American sculptors and surpassed by few if any other sculptor in the world, his life story is a source of pride to every one of us. For he was an American through and through, and his work had America stamped indelibly upon it". (American Journal of Numismatics, 1907-8.)

While the reputation of this great artist will mainly rest upon his ability and success as a sculptor the numismatist will remember that there was another side to his genius and believes that his small medallions with portraits will some day later even rank higher, also his plaques and busts. Such are his low-relief portraits of R. L. Stevenson, the author; President Woolsey of Yale, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Watson Gilder, Schuyler van Rensselaer, and Mrs. C. C. Beaman; his busts of Bishop Phillips Brooks of Boston and William M. Evarts. Unfortunately he has done little for the medallic art, though the Columbus medal, the Franklin and the Washington are in part his design. Among his most noted medallic works are the Plaque and Medal of the Chicago Exhibition, 1894. In Art et Décoration, 1900, II, 40 is a reproduction of his medal entitled : "Ménage Dean", and a Portrait-medal of Dr. Asa Gray, Cambridge, Mass. is described in A. J. N. 1745.

St. Gaudens' work of sculpture is considerable and famous. His monuments of Lincoln and Sherman are considered as the finest pieces of sculpture in the American continent. At the time of his death he was just about exhibiting his statue of Parnell, which is said to be his masterpiece.

The latest U. S. A., gold currency, of which the 20 and 10 Dollar pieces are from St. Gaudens' models, have created a stir in the coin world, for their originality in conception and artistic workmanship. The first 20 Dollar pieces struck were on high relief, but were withdrawn from circulation, and the current coins, the low-relief pieces, have the same thickness as the old pieces, i. e. two millimeters. But a few thousand of the high relief pieces were struck and intended for collectors and for souvenirs. These high reliefs were struck on a medal press, and each piece was struck ten times and annealed between each impression.

The dies of both pieces were cut at about the same time. There are several minor points of difference between the two pieces, the date, the Capitol at Washington, the legs on the eagle, the sun rays on the Rev. &c.

The high relief pieces represent very closely Saint Gaudens' original design while the low relief ones show various modifications.

The high relief pieces will be rare, two days after they were out they brought a substantial premium, and to-day they bring from £ 6 to £ 8. These have been extensively traded on the Curb exchanges of the various cities, but are now gradually getting into collector's hands. The high relief piece is 3 mm. thick, all the pieces weigh the same, 516 grains. The high reliefs are alloyed with silver, while the low reliefs have the regular alloy of copper.

"It was during the winter of 1905 that plans for the new coins originated; the occasion was a dinner taken with President Roosevelt, during which the splendid execution and high relief of the old Greek coins were discussed. Each held a deep admiration for these pieces, and the President, in his characteristic way, decided that the mint should produce a "modern version" of the coins if Saint-Gaudens would furnish the designs.

The sculptor's original idea for the gold pieces was of a full-length winged figure of Liberty mounting a rock, bearing on her left arm a shield upon which was inscribed in two lines, LIBERTY—JUSTICE, and with her right holding aloft a lighted torch. This was later abandoned, and it was decided to use for the ten-dollar piece a head in profile, and a standing eagle for the reverse; for the twenty-dollar piece, a full-length figure of Liberty, without wings, holding the lighted torch, and an olive branch supplanting the shield: the reverse to bear the flying eagle.

Many alterations were made during the following year and a half, before Saint-Gaudens was satisfied with the results. The profile on the ten-dollar piece was from a second study head made for the Victory of the Sherman group, but which was later rejected in favour of the original study. This beautiful head was first modeled with an olive wreath, but at the President's urgent request a feather head-dress was substituted, certainly at a distinct loss. His son, Homer Saint-Gaudens, is authority for the statement that, contrary to the opinion held by many persons that the obverse bears the "Mary Cunningham" head, the so-called features of the Irish girl appear only on the full-length Liberty of the twenty-dollar coin, the figure of which was posed for by a Swede. Saint-Gaudens studiously avoided, in all his ideal sculpture, any hint of personality, and the designs for the gold coinage were no exception. As an example of the infinite care which he devoted to his work it may be noted that as many as seventy models were created for the standing eagle on the reverse".

Leur médaille, malgré le relief excessif des figures, tient cependant avec quelque honneur sa place parmi nos anciens monuments.”

The artist was entrusted in 1907 with the execution of a Plaque for the "Société française des Amis de la Médaille".

SAINT-URBAIN, CLAUDE AUGUSTIN DE (French). Son of Ferdinand de Saint-Urbain and Elisabeth Dominique Montenois, his wife; was born at Rome on 19. February 1703. He learned the art of medal-engraving with his father, and first settled at Nancy, where for some years he occupied the post of Engraver to the Mint, 1725-1737, and executed numerous medals and jetons, in conjunction with his father. In 1737 he settled at Vienna, where he died in 1761, at the age of 58. He held in the Austrian capital the title of "Directeur", and "Graveur en chef des Médailles."

To this artist we owe the medal of large size which begins the Medallion Series of Dukes and Duchesses of Lorraine, and also the portrait of his father (medal illustrated under Ferdinand de St. Urbain).

At the Mint, Claude de St. Urbain assisted his father in the execution of dies for the coinage, and he also engraved a number of Jetons for the city of Nancy.

The following coins and medals are given as works by this artist; the dies are preserved in the Vienna Mint Museum: Leopold, Lorraine Teston, 1727; — Masson (12 Sous), 1727; — Francis III., Lorraine, R. Demi-François d'argent, 1734; — Teston, 1734; —

30 Deniers, 1734; — Æ. Liard, 1734; — R. Demi-François, Teston, Half Teston, 1736; — A. François double, François and Demi-François, 1736; — R. Medal of Stanislaus I. Leczynski, Duke of Lorraine and Bar, 1737-1766; — Historical Medal with the arms of the Dukes of Lorraine (signed: AVGVSTINVS. S. VRBAIN); — Medallion series of Dukes and Duchesses of Lorraine (in collaboration with Ferdinand de St. Urbain); — Medallion Series of the Popes of Avignon (also in collaboration with his father); — Philip V. of Anjou, King of Spain; — Elizabeth Caroline, Countess Palatine, mother of the Duke of Orleans; — Philip, Duke of Orleans, Regent of France, 1715-1723 (sev. var.), undated, and 1715, 1716, 1717, 1720; — Marriage of Louis I., son of Philip V. of Spain, with Marie Louise of Orleans, 1721; — Christian III. of Pfalz-Zweibrücken (2 var.). All these were the joint work of both father and son.

Fiala, in Katalog der Münz- und Medaillen-Stempel Sammlung des K. K. Hauptmünzamt in Wien, IV, p. 1390 quotes in extenso a commission given to the artist at Vienna, under date 18. August 1738, and in which he is styled: Augustin Sant urbani Medagliere bey Ihre königl. Hoheit von Lothringen und Gross-Herzog zu Toscana etc.

SAINT-URBAIN, FERDINAND DE (French). One of the best known Medallists of the end of the seventeenth and first four decades of the eighteenth century; was born at Nancy on 30. June 1658, as the son of Claude Augustin Urbain, Goldsmith and Engraver, and Anne Lenoir. He studied drawing and painting, without apparent success at first. On the invasion of Lorraine by the foreign armies, he left his native country and for a time resided with an uncle at Munich. He then travelled through Germany and Italy, and began to practise the art of die-engraving, in which, although without a teacher, he made rapid progress, and soon obtained official recognition.

In 1673 he was appointed Mint-engraver at Bologna, and ten years later went to Rome, where Innocent XI. placed him at the head of the Papal coinage with the title of Chief-engraver and Architect. After a stay of over thirty years in Italy, he returned to Nancy, became attaché to the Mint there in 1704, in succession to Hardy, with a stipend of 1500 livres, and was appointed Engraver on 1. January 1707. In 1703 he prepared the plans for the construction of the primatial church of Nancy. He married at Rome Elisabeth Dominique Mantenois, by whom he had two daughters, and he died on 10. January 1738. After his return to his native place St. Urbain is said to have executed over 120 medals, which include a series of the Dukes and Duchesses of Lorraine, and an unfinished one of the Popes. These medals are usually signed : S. V.

Portrait-medal of St. Urbain, by his son.

As a Coin-engraver, St. Urbain's activity began at Bologna, where between 1673 and 1683 he executed most of the coin-dies, comprizing the series issued under the Mint-master Giovanni Carlo Gualcheri. In 1696, he was again appointed for a term of three years as Mint-engraver at Bologna, but was replaced in December 1697 by a French die-sinker, Thomas Bajard. Malaguzzi Valeri gives a list of the coins issued at Bologna during that period.

Obv. of Innocent XII. Scudo, by St. Urbain.

From 1683 to 1703 the artist worked almost exclusively for Popes Clement X., Innocent XI., Alexander VIII., Innocent XII., and Clement XI., some of whose coins bear his signature : F.D.S.V., or S. V., and also S. VRBA. OP., S. VR., FERD. DE S. V., etc. Among these I have noticed : Innocent XII., N. Doppia of An. VI; R. Noah's ark; R. Scudi of An. V.; The Pope presiding at a Consistorium; An VI (obv. only; illustrated), and others, of Anni V and VI, with R. PACEM LOQVETVR GENTIBVS, signed : FERD. DE S. V.; An VIII., signed on obv. S. VRBA OP. and R. S.V.OP. St. Peter blessing the people; Mezzi Scudi of years V (2), VI (3), VII (3), IX (2), etc. Clement XI., N. Doppia, 1700 (2 var.. both showing the closed Porta Santa; one illustrated); R. Scudo, 1700, of same type; Bolognese Double Giulio, undated; signed : S. V., etc. A number of other coins by St. Urbain are described by Beaupré (pp. 167-172) and Mory d'Elvange.

N. Doppia of Clement XI., 1700.

St. Urbain engraved most of the dies for the coinage of Duke Leopold of Lorraine, but only signed one, the Leopold d'argent of 1710. Mory d'Elvange states that all the coins struck at Nancy between 1703 and 1736 were engraved from designs or under the direction of St. Urbain. Among the most noteworthy are the Grands Leopolds of 1704 and 1705, the Testons of 1704, of two different dies, 1703, 1709 and 1711, Half Testons, 1706, Half Leopold d'argent, 1727, and subsidiary coins; also gold Leopolds of 1710, 1716-1719, 1722, 1724-1725; silver Ecus and subdivisions of 1716-1722, etc. The d'Aubonnes (coins issued by Regard d'Aubonne, to whom Duke Leopold conceded the right of coinage in 1724) of the years 1724 and 1725 are of very fine work. The Ducat d'or of Francis III., 1736, and Ecu d'argent of the same year are usually attributed to Augustin St. Urbain, who may have executed them after his father's drawings.

The list of medallic works by Ferdinand de St. Urbain I have been able to reconstitute fairly fully, from Lepage's indications.

From a memoir just published by Dr Eug. Demôle in Revue

suisse de Numismatique, t. XVI, 1910, entitled: "Les jetons représentant les Métamorphoses d'Ovide sont-ils l'œuvre de Jérôme Roussel, de Jean Dassier ou de Ferdinand de St. Urbain?" it results "that Jérôme Roussel is the author of this series of 50 jetons, which he caused to be struck at Geneva. The dies remained in that city, and may have been acquired by Jean Dassier. In 1717 and 1720 Barthélemy Favre and Jean Dassier formed an association in which Dassier was employed as Engraver. The latter cut three fresh dies, one of which he dedicated to the Duke of Orleans (it is signed: I. DASSIER F.), these to take the place of the three dedication pieces by Jérôme Roussel. It is extremely probable that Favre and Dassier used the three fresh dies with the forty-seven dies with subjects of Roussel. In 1729 Barthélemy Favre, who was then residing in Paris, had the dies sent to him, and soon after Saint-Urbain became the owner. The latter Medallist obtained permission from the Duke of Lorraine to use them, but Dr Demôle has come to the conclusion that so far nothing proves that he ever had any struck. "

I shall however summarily describe them :

To these 57 jetons illustrating subjects from the three first books of Ovid's Metamorphoses we must add two which are by Dassier: Semiramis building the walls of Babylon; — Pyramus and Thisbe; — and a Dedicatory piece to Philip, Duke of Orleans, making a total of 60 jetons forming a complete purse.

Beside these there is an unfinished die of 'Semele consumed by the darts of Jupiter'. The Paris Mint possesses a series of 18 unfinished dies with subjects from Ovid's Metamorphoses, probably by Roussel.

LIST OF JETONS. Charles V; — Prince Leopold Clement, 1714;

Francis III., Duke of Lorraine.

— Prince François Etienne, 1714; — Elizabeth Charlotte, Duchess of Lorraine, 1715; — Another, of 1737 (this may be, and probably is, by Claude Augustin de Saint-Urbain); — Jetons of the city of Nancy, 1708, 1723, 1729, and 1733 (4 varieties); — Others (10 other varieties, described by Beaupré, pp. 146-157); — Jeton with the arms of Bassompierre and Beauvau; — Arms of Custine and Nettancourt; — Arms of Du Chatelet; — Arms of Lenon-court ;— Arms of Lunati-Visconti ; — Arms of Richard ; — Arms of the Duke of Zweibrücken ; — Arms of the Duc and Duchesse de Deux-Ponts, 1734 ; — Arms of the town of Bar, 1736 ; — Arms of Poirot, 1736 ; — Arms of Corberne, 1730 ; — Rudolph of Habsburg and Anne von Hohenberg.

Beside the above works, Beaupré mentions a number of models in wax by the artist, some of which were evidently made for medals ; also seals, and copper engravings.

St. Urbain was a member of most of the Italian Academies and of many other European ones, and he had been decorated by Clement XII. with the Order of Christ.

Hedlinger (Vide Vol. II, 356) worked for some time under St.-Urbain at Nancy, 1716.

A street at Nancy is named after the artist.

Mory d'Elvange, in commenting on St. Urbain's medallic work says : "Un correct recherché dans le dessin, une précision flatteuse dans l'exécution, une fertilité, une variété charmante dans les détails, une expression pathétique dans les caractères. Le ton de vie, l'âme dans les figures, la légèreté, l'élégance dans les draperies, la netteté dans le burin, cette aisance, ce fini gracieux, qui séduisent l'œil avide de l'amateur. Tels sont les caractères distinctifs de la plus grande partie des têtes, mais surtout des révers des médailles de St.-Urbain."

She became also a Medallist of note, and followed, in the company of her brother, Duke Francis III. of Lorraine to Vienna, where she died at an advanced age. She married Charles Benoît Vaultrin, king's councillor in the bailliwick of Château-Salins.

From a pamphlet entitled : “ Recueil des ouvrages gravés en coins de médailles et modelés en cire par M<sup>me</sup> Vultrin, née de Saint-Urbain, pensionnaire de feu Sa Majesté Impériale François I. ”, I extract the following list of this lady-artist’s works, which range between 1742 and 1780, and are usually signed M. Marie Anne de St.-Urbain was especially noted as a Modeller in wax. By her are the followings wax medallions intended as reverses for medals commemorating the King of Poland’s fifteen endowments : Mission royale, 1742; — Frères de Saint-Jean-de-Dieu, 1750; — Frères des écoles chrétiennes; — Fondation des pauvres orphelins de l’un et l’autre sexe à l’hôpital Saint-Julien de Nancy; — Fondation pour les pauvres honteux; — Établissement des Cadets-gentilshommes; — Pensionnaires aux dames du Saint-Sacrement de Nancy; — Etablissement des magasins de blé; — Bourse des marchands; — Fondation pour les incendies; — Etablissement de l’Architecture; — Construction de la place d’Alliance de Nancy; — Etablissement de la Bibliothèque publique et des prix de l’Académie; — Etablissement de l’Académie royale, 1750; — Fondation de la Chambre royale des consultations. SALWART, SAMUEL VON FALKENBERG (Bohem.). Mint-master at Prague, appointed in the early part of 1609, but in office for only just over a year, being succeeded on 10. May 1610 by Benedikt Huebmer von Sonnleithen. His privy-mark was an open eagle's wing, which occurs on Ducats, Thalers, and Quarter Thalers of Rudolph II., 1610. There is a Counter with his arms on obv. (Doneb. 3727).

SALVESTRO DELL'AVACCHIA (Ital.). A Florentine Goldsmith (1449-† 1527), who chiefly worked at Rome for Pope Leo X. Vasari tells us that this artist excelled in all details of his work.

Milanesi has suggested the attribution to this goldsmith of Portrait-medals, signed S. D. A., of Cardinal Sclafenati (diam. : 58 mill.), and Filippo Sclafenati (diam. : 54). Vide S. D. A. infra.

Bolzenthall mentions a Master Salvestro, who was residing at Rome, circ. 1530, and very clever in mosaic work. The medallist Pietro Paolo Galeotti is said to have learned this branch of art under him, and possibly also received instruction in medal-engraving from him.

SALVIUS, ANTON (Ital.). This signature occurs on a cornelian in the Berlin Museum, representing Neptune with his trident in the left hand. This gem was copied by Tassie, and is described in Raspe's Catalogue, n° 2548.

SALWIRCK (also SALWIRCH, or SALVIRCH), JOSEPH (GIUSEPPE) (Swed.). Coin-engraver, and Medallist, born at Langen-Argen in Sweden, 1759; entered the Milanese Mint as apprentice on 29. April 1782, became Third Engraver on 14. March 1789, First Engraver on 30. March 1801, and Chief-Engraver on 4. June 1808. From 1798, he worked there in collaboration with Luigi Manfredini, and from 1808 to 1819, another of his fellow Engravers was Gerolamo Vassallo. According to official documents, Salwirck was only appointed Chief-engraver on 17. July 1819, after the death of Vassallo. He died himself in the following year, 11. December 1820, at the age of sixty-one.

This artist displayed uncommon talent, and his coin-, and medals certainly rank among the best of the period.

Unfortunately most of Salvirck's coin-dies are unsigned, and in the absence of official records, it is impossible to draw up a full list of his productions. I shall therefore limit myself to his best known and chief works: Venetian 10 Lire piece, 1797; — Scudo of 6 Lire, 1800, of the Cisalpine Republic (signed: SALVIRCH, illustrated); — Trenta Soldi, anno IX. (unsigned); — Patterns for coins of the Scudo of the Cisalpine Republic, 1800.

Italian Republic (1802-1805), none signed (described in Gnechi, Le Monete di Milano, pp. 203-207); — Milanese coins of Napoleon I., undated Patterns; — Reverses of Patterns for 1806 and 1807, 20 and 10 Lire gold, 5, 2, 1 Lire and 15, 10 and 5 Soldi silver, all bearing the monogram SG in the field; the obverses for all these are by Luigi Manfredini, whose signature LM in monogram occurs to the right of the date under Napoleon's head. The actual currency, 1808-1814, was struck from these 1807 types, and we may therefore conclude that all the reverse dies for Napoleon's Italian coinage were engraved by Salwirck (issued at the mints of Milan, Bologna, and Venice); — Francis II. of Austria, Venetian Zecchino (dies preserved at the Vienna Mint); — Seals of the Italian Republic.

Among Salwirck's medals I may mention: 1796. Bonaparte crossing over the Pô, Adda, and Mincio, 30. May 1796 (signed: I. S. F.; the dies of this medal were engraved direct into the steel by the artist); — 1797. Reverse of the Medal commemorating the Fête of the Confederation of the Cisalpine Republic, 9. July 1797; obv. ALL' ITALICO. Bust of General Bonaparte, by Vassallo; R. L'INSUBRIA LIBERA. The French Republic, accompanied by Peace placing the cap of Liberty on the figure of Insubria, which is led by a Genius, etc.; — French medal for the Police commissaries of Milan (Hennin, pl. 83, n° 831); — Verona to G. M. Brune, French general, an IX (1801); — Fall of Venice, 18. March 1797; obv. PRESA DEL PALAZZO DI BROLETTO. The storming of the Palace of Broletto; R. EPOCA DELLA LIBERTA BRESCIANA, etc. (Hist. mét. de Napol., 381), etc.

SAMBON, CAV. JULES (French). Fine Art Dealer, Archeologist and Numismatist, formerly residing in Milan, now in Paris. He edited some medals, amongst which I have noted one commemorating the Inauguration of a Monument to Garibaldi, at Vercelli, 1. June 1890. It was executed at Milan by the Engraver Donzelli, and bears on obv. the publisher's name: G. SAMBON ED.

Cav. Jules Sambon's famous "Theatrical Collection" was purchased en bloc by the Italian government for 600.000 Francs in May 1911.

SAMBSTAG, GEORG (Germ.). Mint-master at Kulmbach, Bavaria, 1622.

SAMPAIO, ELEUTRIO RIBEIRO (Brazil.). Engraver at the Mint of Rio-de-Janeiro, circa 1861. His initials E. R. S. occur on the R. of a Prize Medal of that date, the obv. of which was cut by Lüster.

SAMSON, JOHANN ULRICH (Swiss). Line-engraver and Medallist of the second half of the eighteenth century, born in 1729, died in 1796. He began as a Line-engraver, but later on studied medal-engraving at Geneva, inspiring himself from the works of Dassier and Hedlinger. To improve himself in the art, he undertook a journey to Italy, and on his return settled in business as a Die-sinker at Basle. Hedlinger favoured him with his advice and is said to have been favourably impressed by his achievements, especially by Samson's self portrait-medal. In 1781 Samson was City-councillor at Basle.

Among this artist's works we find : Undated Scholastic Prize Medal of Basle (1779), signed S ; — Portrait-medals of Johannes Bernouilli, the famous mathematician of Basle, 1710-†1790, 1767 (2 var. ; signed : SAMSON) ; — Johann Jakob Spreng, of Basle, poet and scholar, 1699-†1768, 1767 ; — Johann Rudolf Wettstein, a Basle statesman, and Swiss plenipotentiary at the Conference which led to the Peace of Westphalia 1648, 1770 (signed : SAMSON. 1770) ; — The artist's self Portrait (mentioned by Bolzenthall) ; — J. A. Justiniani, praefect of Bergamo, 1782, etc.

This artist's medallic productions are few so far, but they are characterised, says M. de Witte, by the distinguished and sober style which is so well-adapted to the medal. At the Paris Salon, 1901, he exhibited: — The Rhine at Basle, and The Rhine at Schaffhausen.

This artist designed the Portrait-medal of the famous painter, Arnold Boecklin of Basle, 1897 (struck by Huguenin frères, Le Locle).

SANGALLO, FRANCESCO DA (Ital.). Sculptor, Architect, and Medallist (1494-1576), son of Giuliano Giamberti da Sangallo, a famous Architect and Sculptor, and founder of the dynasty of artists of his name. Francesco was born on 1. March 1494, and spent the first ten years of his life at Florence. His father being appointed in 1504 Architect to the Vatican and St. Peter's by his old friend and protector, the Cardinal delle Rovere, who had ascended the pontifical throne under the name of Julius II., 1503. The family definitely settled at Rome in 1506.

In that same year young Francesco accompanied his father and Michel Angelo to view the remains of the famous antique group of the Laocöon, which had just been discovered in the ruins of the Thermae of Titus, and we learn that he drew the group to the satisfaction of his father. Like all the young artists of that time, Francesco studied painting, and became a pupil of Piero di Cosimo, whose portrait he is said to have painted. Andrea del Sarto, his intimate friend, greatly encouraged him to follow his inclination, but the artist soon turned to sculpture, in which art he was instructed by Andrea Contucci del Monte Sansovino, better known as Andrea Sansovino.

“ The sculptures of Francesco ”, remarks von Fabriczy, “ show nothing of the reserved conception, of the refined feeling of those of his father, who in the tombs of the Sassetti in S. Trinita has bequeathed to us two marble medallions of the giver of the commission, which in delicacy of execution might compete with medals ”. This artist is the author of the statue of Bonafedo, bishop of Cortona ; of a group of the Virgin and Child with St. Anne at Or San Michele ; and of the monuments of the bishop Angelo Marzi and Piero II. de’ Medici at Monte Cassino. One of his best works is the statue of Paul Jove, bishop of Nocera, in the cloister of San-Lorenzo. In 1530 he was employed on the fortifications of Florence.

The medals which are signed by him and the others which are ascribed to him offer quite distinct characteristics from those of his predecessors and contemporaries. “ He is faithful ”, again remarks the author above-named, "to the same downright naturalistic manner, which thinks by violently obtruding itself to impose upon the beholder".

Giovanni de' Medici delle Bandenere.

Lorenzo II. de' Medici, Duke of Urbino.

Pope Leo X.

Francesco da Sangallo died at Florence on 17. February 1576. His wife Elena di Cristofano Marsupini, whose portrait-medallion he made in 1551, gave him no heir, but he left a natural son, Clement, who died in 1586.

The following medals bear the artist's signature : 1. Paolo Giovio (1483-†1552), 1552, signed : FRANC. SANGALLIVS FACIEB ; diam : 95 mill. (illustrated) ; — 2. Giovanni de' Medici delle Bandenere (1498-†1526), 1522, signed : FRANC. SANGALLIVS FACIE ; diam. : 93 mill. (illustrated) ; — 3. Alessandro and Cosimo I. de' Medici, 1570, unsigned ; diam. : 90 mill. (illustrated) ; — 4. Giangiacomo de' Medici, Marquis of Marignano, 1555 ; signed on obv. : FRANC. SANGALLIVS FACIEBAT ; R. SENIS RECEPTIS. Wolf tied to a palm-tree within a wreath ; diam. : 91 mill. : — 5. Francesco da Sangallo ; R. DVRABO. Dog seated in front of a Term within a wreath of flowers and fruit ; diam. : 72 mill. ; — 6. Another ; R. OPVS MDLI. The Santa Croce Tower at Florence within a wreath ; diam. : 72 mill. ; — 7. Francesco da Sangallo and his wife, Helena Marsupini, 1551 ; diam. 97 mill. (illustrated). This medal has the same obv. as n° 5, with the legend : FRANCESCO DA SANGALLO SCVLTORE ET ARCHITETTO FIOREN. with the addition of FACIEB. on the truncation of the bust. "This medal", says von Fabriczy, "gives a characteristic example of the artist's strong relief and of the anything but attractive conception peculiar to him — alone among all Florentine medallists" ; — 8. Francesco da Sangallo ; obv. as n° 7 ; R. FACIEBAT — A. MDXXXXX. The Tower of Santa-Croce at Florence ; diam. : 97 mill.

To the artist most writers are agreed to ascribe two further medals ; although I do not think they have much in common with his authenticated works : — Lorenzo II. de' Medici ; obv. Bust to l. ; R. LAVRENTIVS. MEDICES. VRBINI. ETC. DVX within two laurel-branches ; diam. : 80 mill. (obv. illustrated) ; — and Pope Leo X. (Giovanni de' Medici), 1513-1521 ; obv. Bust to l. ; R. DE GLORIA. ET. HONORE. CORONASTI. EV. Pontifical arms of the Medici ; diam : 78 mill. (obv. illustrated). This medal is comparatively speaking the best of this Pope, whose portrait must not be omitted from the Italian celebrities in the medallic Temple of Fame. For it was this Epicurean on the Chair of Peter who evoked at his court the Golden Age for poets, literati, lute-players, and buffoons". (Italian Medals, p. 143). See Armand's notes on these two medals, t. III, p. 62.

Beside these medals, Gustave Clausse (Les San Gallo, t. III) adds another of Niccolo Martelli, a Florentine poet, 1544 (in the Bargello, at Florence), signed : FRACESCO SANTO GALLO AMICO SVO CARO

FACIE. The portrait is reproduced on p. 228 of the above work. The medal is uniface, and measures 94 mill. in diameter. Supino also describes this piece, and a Portrait-medallion, uniface, of a Lady, 119 mill., cast in bronze, and gilt; and Dr Bode ascribes to the same artist a Portrait-medallion of Pope Clement VII. (Simon Collection). Of the medallist, the learned German savant says: "Sehr leicht kenntlich ist Francesco da San Gallo, dessen derbe, klobige Porträts in hohem Relief einer gewissen Kraft und Lebenswahrheit nicht entbehren".

Supino in Il Medagliere Mediceo, p. 104, calls Francesco "un artista manierato, come lo dimostrano le sue stesse medaglie trattate in alto rilievo così esagerato da far loro perdere il carattere proprio a tal genere di produzioni".

Among the later medallists Francesco da Sangallo was almost alone in carrying on into the mid-sixteenth century the research for characteristic form which distinguished the work of the Quattrocento. The contrast between Sangallo's work and that of Benvenuto Cellini shows how rapid was the decline of the art after the first quarter of the Cinquecento. How little the characteristic has to do with likeness in the modern photographic sense may be seen by looking at the medals of Pastorino, almost the only Italian medallist who would be likely to have a fashionable success to-day. His are indeed speaking likenesses, but they are remarkable rather for their pretty superficiality than for any serious interpretation of character.

SANGERS, GERTRUDE (Belg.). Widow of Florent Florissone; acted as Mint-master at Antwerp, from 13. January 1580 to 26. January 1581, and again from 16. December 1585 to 30. August 1587.

SANQUIRICO, PAOLO (Ital.). Architect, Modeller in wax, and Medallist of the latter part of the sixteenth century and first three decades of the seventeenth. He was born at Parma in 1565 and died at Rome in 1630. He was a pupil of Camillo Mariani. His services were rewarded with a situation at the Papal court. Bolzenthall tells us that the medallic art was only a secondary employment with him, to which he appeared a stranger long before his death. His likenesses in coloured wax are deserving of notice, and some of his medals, especially those bearing the portrait of Paul V. are drawn to the life.

In the British Museum Collection are two Portrait-medals of Paul V., by this artist; the one, dated 1608, signed : P. SANQVIRIC. has a representation of St. Peter's on the R.; and the other, of 1609, signed : SANQVIRICVS shows a Fort (of Ferrara) on the R. There is another, of the same Pope, dated 1613.

This Medallist's signature occurs under various forms : P. SANQ.; — P. SANQVIRIC.; — P. SANQVIRIO; — PAUL SANQVIR.; — SANQVIRICVS, etc.

A French medal by Giovanni Paolo has been erroneously ascribed to this artist or also to Paolo Selvatico (Armand, III, p. 140).

SANSON, JUSTIN CHRYSOSTOME (French). Contemporary Sculptor, born at Nemours, pupil of Jouffroy, and Lequien. By him are several Portrait-medallions in bronze, amongst which I have noted : 1870. Dr Goupil des Pallières; — 1887. M. Sanson; — 1888. M. J. D***; — 1904. — M. Testard; — Paul Baudouin, etc.

SANSON (French). This signature occurs on a Portrait-medal of Dr Jules Le Baron.

SANSOVINO, JACOPO (Ital.). Architect and Sculptor, 1486-1570; pupil of Andrea Contucci. His parental name was Tatti. By him are numerous works in bronze, one of the first being a cast from the group of the Laocöon. The most important are all in Venice.

Dr Bode describes the following Relievi and Plaquettes by him, or in his style : The Ascension; 44 × 37 (illustrated); — Virgin and Child (several varieties); — Amor; — Virgin suckling Child (9, 3 × 7, 6); — Seated Madonna (2 var.; 8, 1 × 6, 3; and 10, 3 × 7, 6); — Madonna, half-length figure (circular : 7, 3; Molinier, Plaquettes, n° 753); — Madonna in Clouds (9, 8 × 7, 5; Mol. 755); — Virgin and Child with St. John (circular : 14, 6); — Another; 5, 8 × 6, 2; — Another; 14, 8 × 10, 5 (Mol. 430); — Madonna of Loreto; 13, 5 × 10, 3; — Virgin and Child with St. John; 13, 2 × 8, 6 (Mol. 431); — The Women lamenting over the body of Christ; 13, 2 × 8, 6; the composition is borrowed from a drawing by Michel Angelo (Mol. 756); — Coronation of Mary; 18, 1 × 12, 5 (Mol. 509); — Angel; 11, 2 × 5, 2 (Mol. 732); — Angel with trumpet; 11, 5 × 5, 5.

In the Victoria and Albert Museum, South Kensington, a bronze Plaque, in high relief, representing a full-length figure of Judith holding the head of Holofernes, has been attributed, without definite authority, to Jacopo Sansovino (Fortnum, op. cit., p. 64, 7431).

The Ascension. (High Relief by Jacopo Sansovino.)

Dr Bode describes also among Sansovino's works : Statuette of Weeping Cupid ; — Group, youth on dolphin's back (inkstand) ; — Allegory on the writing of History (inkstand).

“ The elaborately sculptured door of the sacristy at St Mark's, and other six relievos, overladen with subject, in the choir ; also the statuettes of the Four Evangelists on the balustrade of the choir are by this artist. Further, a St. John on a font in the Chapel of St. Peter at the Frari ; the bronze figure of St. Thomas of Ravenna over the door of San Giuliano ; the figures of Pallas, Apollo, Mercury, and Peace formerly in a Loggia at the foot of the Venetian Campanile, are all by him ”.

SANTA-CROCE, GIROLAMO (Ital.). Sculptor and Goldsmith, who resided at Naples ; born in 1498, died in 1533. By him is a Portrait-medal of the Neapolitan poet Jacopo Sannazaro, of which there are two varieties of reverses : obv. ACTIVS.SYNCERVS. Laureate bust to l. ; R. (a) No legend. The Virgin, Joseph and angels worshipping the Child Jesus (after Sannazaro's poem) ; (b). No legend. Half nude male figure (Sannazaro?) crowned by a female, in the presence of two other personages, in front of a temple ; diam. 35 mill.

The attribution of this medal to Santacroce results from a letter addressed in 1524 by the Neapolitan historian Summonzio to Marcantonio Michieli, and published by E. Cicogna.

SANTA-CROCE, PILIPPO surnamed PIPPO (Ital.). Gem-engraver of the sixteenth century, who was practising his art not only on gems, but also on cherry- and plum-stones, on which he engraved figures which were almost imperceptible to the naked eye. He was at first only a shepherd who amused himself in carving rustic toys, when Count Filippino Doria, having met him in the duchy of Urbino, took him to Rome, and then to Genoa, where henceforward Pippo, freed from the cares of need, was enabled to develop the talents with which nature had endowed him. His numerous children, the PIPPI, followed their father's career, and became likewise Engravers of mark towards the end of the sixteenth century, applying themselves especially, as was then the fashion, to copying antiques (Babelon, Pierres gravées, p. 257).

SANTARELLI, GIOVANNI ANTONIO (Ital.). Gem-engraver, Modeller in wax, and Medallist, born in 1769 in the Abruzzi, died at Florence in 1826, where he spent the greater part of his life, and was for many years Professor at the Academy.

This artist owed his success to his extraordinary natural abilities. His cut gems are of exceptional beauty, and his Portraits and Bas-reliefs in wax belong to the finest and most delicate productions of the art.

Santarelli worked for some time at the Milanese Mint, and from there was sent to Parma as Engraver to the Mint of that city. By him are said to be the dies for the coinage of Felix and Eliza for Lucca and Piombino (1805-1814) and Marie Louise for Parma, 1815 (after Manfredini's models), but the accuracy of this statement I cannot substantiate.

Among the numerous medallic productions of the Engraver I have seen descriptions of the following: Eliza Bonaparte, named Grand Eliza Bonaparte and Felix I.

Princes of Lucca and Piombino.

Duchess of Tuscany, 1809; obv. Bust of Felix, Prince of Lucca; R. Bust of Eliza, with the additional title of GRAN. DUCHESSA DI TOSC.; — Michel Angelo, 1812; Prize Medal of the Academy of Fine Arts of Florence; — Eliza and Felix, Princess of Lucca and Piombino; Prize Medal of the Academy of Lucca; (obv. illustrated); — Marie Louise, Grand Duchess of Parma; obv. executed after Manfredini's Scudo, which had found special favour in high quarters; various types of reverses, mostly engraved by his pupils, as that on the building of the Taro bridge; — Portrait-medal of C. Salicetti (Bon. Artium Patronus), signed A. S. F., and dedicated from Genoa to Vassalo, 1805.

The artist's signature occurs usually as SANTARELLI F., or A. S. F

He entered the Lisbon Mint as Assistant-engraver in 1799, and held this appointment until his death. To him we may probably ascribe many of the dies for the coinage of John VI. (1792-1826).

SART, FRANCIS DU (Germ.). According to Bolzenthall, a native of Hennegau, who distinguished himself in England as a Sculptor under Charles I., and II., and who is said to have executed medals, but I have been unable to trace any to him. Vide Bolzenthall, op. cit., p. 205.

He also was responsible for some of the issues of the Hohenzollern Rulers.

His signature CATOPNEINOY occurs on a sardonyx Portrait-cameo, in the Berlin Museum, representing a female bust (possibly that of Antonia, wife of Drusus). The inscription is incuse, in very tiny rounded letters which offer every guarantee of authenticity. The portrait is exceedingly well executed, and, says Furtwängler, its author is to be classed among the best artists of his time.

The Berlin Museum gem was originally in Caroline Murat's collection, and later in the Seguin. Stephani allows the work to be excellent, but thinks the drapery has been probably retouched.

King mentions another gem bearing the same inscription: The Portrait-cameo of Antonia (?)

Dioscuri (in the Thorwaldsen Museum), but adds that this inscription has nothing to do with the artist.

SCHÄFFER, FRIEDRICH SIEGMUND (Germ.). Medallist, Coin-engraver at Weilburg, 1749-1754; then Mint-master and Engraver at Eisenach, in the service of the Ducal court of Saxony, 1755-1776. He was a son of Wiegand Schäffer and was born at Düsseldorf in 1725. According to some sources he first collaborated for some years with his two brothers Anton and Joseph at the Mannheim mint.

SCHAEFER, HANS (Austr.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, born at Sternberg in Moravia, 13. February 1875, and apprenticed for four years to the engraver Matthäus Marschall, father of the medallist Rudolf Marschall, at Vienna. His first work of note, executed in that same year, is a Prize Medal for Running, which received due recognition.

The charm of Schaefer's medals and plaquettes lies in the realism with which he has depicted characteristic Viennese popular types. His style is original throughout, and he is very successful with portraits.

These medals and plaquettes and others (in all 29) the artist also exhibited at the Salon International de la Médaille, Brussels, 1910.

The strength of Hans Schäffer lies in depicting old Vienna types such as, alas, are only too fast disappearing. He succeeds in giving life-like portraits, which at the same time show a delicacy of manipulation and surety of delineation which prove that the artist possesses a true understanding of his subject. He is himself a typical Viennese, infected with their mirth and their sorrow, and it is thus that he is enabled to give expression to their characteristic temperament in his plastic work.

SCHAEFFER, JOSEPH (Germ.). Appointed Assistant Mint-master at Mannheim, 16. May 1764; died in 1766. He appears to have worked under his father Wiegand Schäffer as Engraver at the Mannheim mint, and I have seen it stated that he filled the post of Mint-master at Darmstadt, but I have not been able to verify the accuracy of this statement.

SCHAEFFER, MATTES (Austr.). Seal-engraver of Eger; he applied on 21. August 1644 to the Nuremberg Council for an appointment at the Mint, which he obtained after some negotiations in the same year.

Prince Elector Charles Theodore, 1743.

SCHÄFFER, WIEGAND (Germ.). Mint-engraver and Medallist at Mayence and Heidelberg 1716-1744; Mint-warden at Mannheim 1745-1758. He was born at Copenhagen in 1687 and died at Mannheim in 1758. Bolzenthall reckons him amongst the best artists of his time. His coin-dies of the Palatinate certainly deserve recognition for their artistic merit.

His signature (WS mon.; — W. SCHÆFER; — SCHAEFFER; — SCHÆFER; — SCHEFR) occurs, amongst others, on the following medals: Inauguration Fête of the Lodge zur Einigkeit, 1742; — Series of Portrait-medals of the Electors Palatine (30), continued by his son Anton; — Charles Philip, Prince Elector of Pfalz-Neuburg, 1734 (signed: W. SCHÆFER); — Recovery from measles of Prince Elector Charles Theodore, 1743; — Frankfort Coronation Medal of Francis I., 1745; — Medal on the Sede Vacante of Mayence, 1743 (signed: S), etc.

On a 1½ Thaler of Charles Philip, struck at Mannheim, 1740, the artist's signature is SCHEFR.

Mannheim One-and-a-half Thaler of the Elector Palatine Charles Philip, 1740.

Wiegand Schäffer's three sons, Anton, Frederick, and Joseph distinguished themselves in the medallic art.

SCHÄUFEL, JOSEPH IGNATZ (also SCHAEUFEL VON AHAMSTEIN) (Germ.). Medallist of the latter part of the eighteenth century and beginning of the nineteenth, circ. 1768-1804; died in 1812. He was born at Passau in 1733, and first worked as a belt-maker. Becoming acquainted with the medallist Schega, he owed to his patronage the appointment of Mint-engraver at Munich. He took a title of nobility, which was however not officially recognized.

As a Modeller in wax, this artist was distinctly successful, and his medallic works display certain qualities, without rising to the merit of Schega's productions.

Domanig (Die Deutsche Medaille, Pl. 72, n° 652) reproduces the artist's self Portrait-medal; obv. Bust to right; R. HVIC SEQVE SVVMQVE LABOREM DEDICAT. MDCCLXXX. Map of a portion of Bavaria; 41 mill.; and amongst other medals by this Engraver I may mention: John Sebastian Clais, director of the salt mines of Hall in Suabia, 1782; 50 mill. (illustrated). Clais became a burgher of Winterthur in Switzerland, where the family still resides; — Frobenius Forster, abbot of St. Emmeran, on his 50 years' Priestly Jubilee, 1783; — Building of the Military Hospital at Munich, 1778; — Portrait-medal of Maximilian Joseph, Elector of Bavaria, and his consort Marie Anne, 1775; — Accession of Charles Theodore, 1777; — First Prize for Eloquence, 1778; — Second Prize for Eloquence, 1778; — I., II., and III. Few of Schäufel's coins are signed. I have come across the following: Conventions Thaler of Charles Theodore, 1778 (signed: I. SCH.), 1779, 1781, 1782, 1783, 1784, 1786-1794.

SCHAFER, MATHÄUS (Germ.). Probably two Engravers of that name, Junior and Senior, were working at Nuremberg as Die-sinkers; the Elder, circ. 1629-1655 (Ammon gives the date of his burial as 1654), and the Younger, circ. 1680. Hauschild has ascribed erroneously to the Elder Schäffer the medals described by Erman under the Master M.S. (Vide Vol. IV, p. 184) and which all belong to the sixteenth century. The author of Die Medaillen und Münzen des Gesamthauses Wittelsbach suggests the attribution to this artist of a Portrait-medal of Duke Ernest of Bavaria, undated (signed: M. S. F.) and in the Wunderly Catalogue a Thaler of Alwig VII., count of Sulz, 1622 (signed: M. S.) is also tentatively ascribed to him. Kull however thinks that the Engraver M. S. of the Thalers and Double Thalers of Heidelberg, 1627, with bust of Maximilian I., was MATHIAS STEIN of Coblenz, the author of the  $\frac{3}{4}$  Thalerklippe and Half Thalers of Philipp Christoph von Sötern, archbishop of Treves, and Thalers of Frederick V. of Baden, etc. (J. V. Kull, Aus bayerischen Archiven, Mitth. d. bayer. Num. Gesellschaft, 1900, p. 40, note 1).

SCHALENBERGER, MICHAEL (Germ.). Appointed in June 1622 Kippermünzmeister at Nuremberg (one of the five officials who were again dismissed in July). He appears to have left the city, and on 11. November 1626 his workshop was sold.

SCHALER (or SCHALLER), MARQUARD (Germ.). Mint-warden at Augsburg, circ. 1641-1650.

SCHAMMER, WILLEM (Dutch). Assistant Mint-engraver at Utrecht and contemporary Medallist. Among his medallic productions I may mention: Visit of Queen Wilhelmina and Queen Emma to Amsterdam, 1891 (obv. by I. P. M. Menger); — Life-saving Medal; 50 mill.; — Prize medal for Carrier-pigeons, 1891; — 250th Anniversary of the Foundation of Utrecht University, 1886; — Prize medal of the Amsterdam Exhibition of Decorative Arts, 1881; — Medal of the University Students' Corps, 1882; — Agricultural Show at Amsterdam, 1882; — Inauguration of a Monument at Utrecht to Jan van Nassau, 1883; — Rev. H. D. Guyot, Groningen, 1890; — Dr F. C. Donders, Utrecht, 1888, etc.

SCHAMPAN, HANS (Germ.). Mint-master at Stettin, 1612-1619. His initials H. S. or S., or monogram [HS] occur on coins issued by him.

SCHAPER, F. (Germ.). Contemporary Sculptor, residing at Berlin. His signature: F. SCHAPER SC. occurs on a commemorative medal of the Centenary of the Berlin Academy Art Exhibition, 1886.

SCHAPIRA, J. (Austr.). A commemorative medal of the visit of the Emperor Francis Joseph I to Galicia in 1880 is thus signed (Mitth. des Klubs, &c., 1892, p. 253, 156).

SCHAPP (Dutch). An unsigned Portrait-medal of Dr Pieter Camper, Leyden, is ascribed to this Engraver by Dr H. R. Storer (A. J. N. 1539).

SCHARFF, ANTON (Austr.). One of the most celebrated Medallists of modern times, son of the Vienna Mint-Medallist Michael Scharff, was born at Vienna on 10. June 1845. He was early instructed in drawing and modelling, and in 1860 entered the Academy of decorative Arts. Two years later he was admitted as a pupil at the 'Graveur-Akademie' attached to the Vienna mint, and studied there under David Boehm. In 1866 he was appointed Assistant-engraver at the Mint, and Engraver in 1868. In 1881 he became Director of the 'Graveur-Akademie'. The distinction of Court-medallist was conferred upon him in 1887. He died on 6. July 1903 at Brunn.

Scharff was a Knight of the Order of the Iron Crown and of the Order of Francis Joseph; Knight of the Bavarian Order of St. Michael; Knight of the Toscan Civil Merit Order; Commander of the Servian St. Sava Order; Knight of the Order of the Star of Roumania. The Emperor of Austria further bestowed upon him the golden Cross of Merit with crown, and the Prince of Bulgaria awarded to him the Order of Merit of Bulgaria. The artist also took a number of prizes: the Karl Ludwig medal; the Reichel Prize 1890; the large gold medals at the Fine Arts Exhibitions of Munich and Berlin; the Grand Prix at the Paris Universal Exhibition in 1900; gold medals at Dresden and Antwerp, etc.

Scharff's medallic works are very numerous and have placed him at the head of the Austrian school of medallists. He was a fine draughtsman, modelled well, and depicted the familiar aspects of nature with remarkable delicacy of sentiment. Compared to the French school, his style is perhaps lacking in softness and over minute and delicate, which is the only criticism that one can offer. His portraits are vigorous; every figure has been studied from the life with a rare truthfulness and appreciation, the general type and the individual character being equally well represented.

1867. Franz Gaul, medallist; 34 mill.; — Johann Hassenbauer on 11. November 1809, and died in Vienna on 22. May 1855. His family came originally from Germany, but his wife, née Sedlak, was a Viennese, although the daughter of a Bohemian.

Joh. M. Scharff was apprenticed at the Vienna Mint Engraving Academy, and as early as 28. June 1832, became a salaried assistant; 8. April 1834 he obtained a special grant of 300 florins; 13. February 1836, a Prize of 225 florins; 30. October 1840, another Prize of 100 Florins for a medal with bust of Archduke Franz Carl; 14. December 1840, a rise of 10 florins monthly. In 1842 the government sent him to Rome for two years to perfect himself in the art. On 31. January he was appointed provisionally Assistant-engraver at the Vienna mint, and on 7. March 1855, this appointment was made permanent.

Most of Scharff's productions concern Viennese events or notabilities: Field Marshal Alfred Prince Windischgrätz, 1854; —

The last official work by this engraver was the Wedding Double Gulden of Francis Joseph I., 1854, the dies for which he did not complete.

Scharff was also a clever Gem-engraver. There is a fine Portrait-intaglio of Francis Joseph I. by him, which is preserved in the Vienna Imperial Museum, and Portrait-cameos of Ferdinand I.; — Frau Sedlak; — Count Radetzky, &c.

There is a Portrait-medal of J. M. Scharff by his son Anton, executed in commission for the "Club der Münz und Medaillenfreunde in Wien".

Boyen, Prussian minister of war, 1844; — Christening of Princess Amalie Victoria von Ratibor, 1846, &c.

SCHILLING, LORENZ (Germ.). Medallist and Coin-engraver, born circ. 1575 at Nieder-Wesel, died at Frankfort-on-Main, 19. November 1637. He married on 7. June 1601 Juliane Baumann at Bornheim, and on 11. February 1602 obtained the citizenship of Frankfort, for which he had to pay 3 Gulden. He had six children, two sons and four daughters. As early as 1610 and possibly before that date his services as an Engraver of coin- and seal-dies had been secured by the Frankfort Mint. His name first occurs in Joseph u. Fellner as the Engraver of the dies for the Frankfort Double and Single Thalers and Half Thalers of 1610, as well as of medals of that date. M. Lejeune suggests that all the dies for the larger coinage of that city, from 1610 to 1626, were engraved by Schilling, and especially those issued under the Mint-master Kaspar Ayser, who was installed in 1618. He did not work only for Frankfort, but also for Erbach, Hanau, Isenburg (1617-18), Friedberg, Stolberg, Mayence, as well as Hesse-Darmstadt, 1623, and Löwenstein-Wertheim. He is even supposed to be the author of the Bremen Thalers of 1624, and Solms Half Thaler, 1623. Among his most interesting coin-dies are the Ducats, Thalers and Half Thalers commemorating the Foundation of the Castle of Aschaffenburg, and the later Thalers, etc. of Mayence, 1627-30.

Schilling's medals, although they do not display very great skill, are nevertheless praiseworthy productions, considering the time of decadence when they were executed. The best known are: Large medal of 1611 struck in honour of the city of the Frankfort Schultheiss Johann von Martorff, the 12 Sheriffs and 3 Syndics (2 or 3 varieties); — Plaque with view of Frankfort, 1612; — Giessen University medal; — Portrait-medal of Ferdinand II., 1619; — Medallion Thaler, 1625; — Medallion Thaler, 1626, with view of Frankfort; — The so-called "Glückhennen" Medals; — Gustavus Adolphus, Memorial medal (circ. 1631); — Undated Medallion Thaler (female figure standing on a rock in the sea; two sizes); — 'Christmas' Medals (undated, circ. 1618); — The so-called 'Comet' medals, 1618, &c.

Herr Lejeune surmises that the medals commemorating Frankfort's fortitude in the 'Thirty years' War, and those of the Plague of 1635 and 1636 are most likely by Schilling. He usually signed : L. S.; — LORENTZ SCHILLING F.; — L. S.

The Frankfort Double Thaler of 1610 appears to be one of the earliest productions of the Engraver, and well-known are also his Coronation medals of Matthias II., 1612.

SCHRADER, PETER (Germ.). Mint-master at Königssee, 1621 (for Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt); Cöthen, 1622; Magdeburg and Archiepiscopal Thaler of Magdeburg, 1640.

Halle, 1627-1645. Dr Bahrfeldt states that Schrader officiated from 1623-1630 as Mint-master to the city of Magdeburg; 1635-38 as Mint-master to the Archiepiscopate, and from 1639 to 1661 again as Mint-master to the city. The Thaler of Augustus, 1640, reproduced above shows that Schrader, whose signature it bears, was in office at the archiepiscopal mint in 1640. Whether he cut coin dies himself, or was only responsible for the issue of the coinage, I cannot ascertain.

SCHRECK, KONRAD or KURT (Germ.). Bolzenthall writes in the following terms of this North German artist of the second half of the sixteenth century: "A highly esteemed goldsmith who produced many works of art under the Electors of Brandenburg, Joachim I. and II. There is an important testimony in his favour in the diary of the Court preacher Cölestin, where it is stated that Joachim II. gave Schreck a commission to make a medal to be worn on a chain, in the following words: "Schreck, thou wilt make for Dr Georg Cölestino, our Court preacher, our gold coin and likeness at our expense and present it to him. He shall wear it for our sake. This is our will. Given at Copernik, 28th July 1566. Joachim Elector." The Royal Collection at Berlin is especially rich in native medals of the kind; it possesses one of the reign of Joachim II. done by an able hand, and having the bust of the Margrave Frederick, who was a son of the Elector. We however find no work which can undoubtedly be traced to Schreck as the one ordered for Dr Cölestin."

According to Nicolai, K. Schreck was appointed Mint-master and Engraver at Berlin for one year, 1572, and died in 1580.

In the Berlin Collection is a Portrait-medalet of Conrad Schreck and his wife Anna, by the same hand, as that of Mathias Spon, 1561 (Möhsen II, Pl. I, 2). Erman does not think that these two medals are by our artist. The Conrad Schreck medal is reproduced on Pl. VIII, 6 of Erman, Deutsche Medailleure, 1884.

TO on R.; another, exhibiting fine work, is signed: HANS + SCHVLTES + ZV + NVRENBERG + Dr Freudenthal had a specimen, dated 1574, with the inscription : HANS : SCHVLTES : GEMACH. In Blätter für Münzfreunde, 1904, 3201, is a description of a counter by this engraver, bearing on obv. a bust variously identified as that of Duke Albrecht of Prussia (1525-69) or Duke Friedrich of Liegnitz (1495-1547). A counter described by Dr Erbstein (Bl. für Münzfr., 1828) shows on one side the whole alphabet accompanied by the signature : HANS SCHV (wrongly interpreted by Dr Voigt as Hans Schulmeister). Hans Schultes also signed his counters H. S.; — HANS. S.; — and HANS SCHV.

Beside the Schultes the principal Nuremberg counter makers in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries were : Damian Krauwinkel (1550-1570); and his successors Egidius (1571) and Hans Krauwinkel (1580-1610), Kilian Koch (1580-1600), Hans Laufer or Lauffer (1607, Mint-master 1620, † 1632), Wolf Laufer, Mathaeus Laufer (Mint-master 1622), Conrad and Cornelius Laufer, to whom succeeded towards the end of the seventeenth century, Lazarus Gottlieb Läufer. SCHULTZ, OTTO (Germ.). Contemporary Mint-engraver and Medallists at Berlin; born 16. December 1848 at Berlin; pupil of the Medallists Wittigs; and W. Kullrich, died on 13. August 1911. He was employed for some time at the "Berliner Medaillen-Münze von L. Ostermann, vorm. G. Loos", and spent some years in London, in the employ of Wyon, under whom he collaborated in the cutting of the great State Seal of Queen Victoria. Towards the end of 1881 he returned to Germany, and worked for some years with Kullrich, G. Loos, and others. In May 1889 he was appointed Second Medallist at the Royal Mint, Berlin, and on Weygand's resignation, First Medallist on 1. April 1902.

Among his productions I have noted: Prize medal of the Wittstock Exhibition, 1885, with bust of Princess Marie Anna of Prussia (issued by G. Otto Schultz is responsible for the engraving of the dies of the German Thalers since 1882, and many of the dies for the German Imperial Coinage are his work. He also prepared dies for the following coins: Marriage Five and Two Mark pieces, 1903, of Grand Duke Wilhelm Ernst of Saxony and Grand Duchess Caroline of Reuss (24,000 Five and 40,000 Two Marks issued); — Lippe-Detmold, Two-mark pieces, 1906 (20,000 issued); — Pattern Thaler, with bust of William II., 1908; — Thaler, 1908, with same bust (issue of 5 million pieces).

In 1892 Schultz was entrusted with the cutting of dies for the Transvaal coinage of President Kruger, consisting of the Pond and  $\frac{1}{2}$  Pond in gold, 5, 2  $\frac{1}{2}$ , 2 and 1 Shillings, 6 and 3 Pences in silver, and Penny in copper. The first type of Pond, Half Pond, and Five Shillings were recalled on account of a curious mistake of the die-sinker, who represented on the reverse instead of the "Disseboom" (or waggon with a single pole) a van with two poles or double shaft. President Kruger further took exception to the initials O.S. of the Engraver being placed on the truncation of his bust, those letters in Dutch signifying an "ox".

The first issue only of these coins were minted at Berlin.

The following coin-dies executed between 1895 and 1904 are by Otto Schultz: — Hesse-Darmstadt, 5 and 2 Markpieces 1895 (after a model by the sculptor Uhlmann); — Schwarzburg-Sondershausen, Doppelkronen 1896; — Anhalt-Dessau, Doppelkronen and Kronen 1896; — Saxe-Weimar, Doppelkronen 1896; — Hesse-Darmstadt, SCHWANTHALER, LUDWIG MICHAEL (Germ.). Sculptor of the nineteenth century, and author of the colossal monument representing Bavaria at Munich. His portrait occurs on a medal by Birnböck, 1850, commemorating the unveiling of the monument.

Born 26. August 1802 at Munich; died there 15. November 1848.

SCHWARGEN Vide SCHWAIGER, CHRISTOPH supra.

SCHWARTZ, HANS (Germ.). Medallist of the first half of the sixteenth century, born at Augsburg circ. 1492 or 1493, date of death unknown. The period of his activity is comprised between 1516 and 1527.

Schwartz was one of the greatest artists of his day in his particular branch, and stands out conspicuously from amongst his contemporaries because of his marked individuality. He does not appear to have been influenced, as Dr Habich remarks, either by the Italian or German schools; his style is always original though his productions vary in artistic merit.

Prof. Adolf Erman, who had only Neudörffer's notice of the artist to go by, was the first to draw attention to Hans Schwartz and to compile a tentative list of his medals (Deutsche Medailleure, 1884, pp. 20-27). He detected in the Felix collection the medal reproduced below, showing the Medallist's self portrait, and by comparing this piece with others presenting the same characteristics of style and treatment he was able to group them together as works of the Master. To the fifty medals ascribed to Hans Schwartz by Erman, Dr Habich has now added another fifty, and the list is probably by no means complete.

Monograms of Hans Schwartz.

Very little is known of the artist's life. Neudörffer calls him a son of Ulrich Schwartz, and states that he was apprenticed to Stephan Schwartz, and also that he was presented as an apprentice in 1506 to the guild of painters, goldsmiths, sculptors, etc. He served four years' apprenticeship, and another six as journeyman, so at least we may conclude, as the youth's first signed work is dated 1516. No mention exists of his obtaining the Mastership, but had been invited by the Provost of St. Sebald, Melchior Pfinzing, whose portrait he had modelled in 1518. Here he became intimately acquainted with his famous contemporaries, Ludwig Krug, and especially Albrecht Dürer, who gave him a sitting for his medal. In March 1520, he was requested to leave the city on account of his dealings with the imperial city bailiff, Tilman von Bremen, and other citizens. In September of the same year he was again at Augsburg, and in the following spring we find him at Heidelberg, Worms, Speier, etc. Returning through Swabia, he was allowed to again take up his residence at Nuremberg in 1525. His last signed medal is dated 1527 and depicts a citizen of Augsburg. Afterwards all trace of the artist is lost, unless he may be identified with the Hans Schwartz of Oettingen, who in 1540 married the widow of Hans Schäufelin.

Hans Schwartz's earliest signed and dated work is an 'Entombment', carved in wood (1516), which Dr Habich styles "a Donatello in a Burgkmaier shrine", a true Renaissance production savouring of the Quattro Cento. Four medallions in boxwood, executed about the same period, show a close connection with Italian prototypes. Two are in the Kaiser Friedrich Museum, Berlin: 'Anne blessing the Child Jesus', and 'Lamentations over the body of Christ' (both illustrated), and the other two: 'The Judgment of Paris', and 'Death with a nude female' belong to Dr Figdor of Vienna. In the Louvre are a statuette of Eve and an 'Ecce Homo', neither signed, by this Master.

The actual series of Schwartz's medals begins in 1517 with a Portrait-medallion of Konrad Peutinger. I have compiled the following list from Erman and Dr Habich's indications:

Erman has had the good fortune to recognize as works of Hans Schwartz the drawings (numbering 124 so far) so-called : "Dürer profile Heads", which are preserved in Berlin, Bamberg, Weimar and elsewhere. Many of these drawings have been identified as sketches for medals; Erman gives 35 and Dr Habich 14 more. They were drawn from life.

The portrait of Matthew Lang on the currency of this archbishop of Salzburg is taken from Schwartz's medal (Habich, fig. 29), and likewise that of bishop Bernhard von Cles on the currency of Trient (Habich, fig. 31, 32). Even the Thalers of George of Saxony show the artist's medallic portrait of the Duke (Habich, fig. 27).

The medallic portrait gallery of early sixteenth century German celebrities by Hans Schwartz is a remarkable one. Let it suffice to men-ornament", and above all Albrecht Dürer, whose sympathetic figure the artist depicted carved in wood and sunk in metal. The medals of Charles V., executed during the Emperor's residence at Heilbronn, soon after his coronation, are very realistic in portraiture.

Schwartz' medals are the productions of a Portrait-carver, and stand in contrast with those of Daucher, which exhibit the noble art of relief plastic in stone. He is an impressionist. His style is vigorous and bold. He sacrifices details for expression. Dr Habich resumes his masterly critique of the artist by saying "Unserem modernen plastischen Empfinden steht Schwartz zweifellos näher als irgendein anderer deutscher Medailleur. An Einfachheit der Haltung und Energie der Charakteristik kann einzig er den Meistern der italienischen Quattrocentomedaille verglichen werden. Aber erst wenn im Geschmack des kunstfreundlichen Publikums die gegenwärtig so beliebte "Kunstmedaille", dieses französische Salonprodukt, durch ein echtes Gebilde der Plastik ersetzt ist, wird für Hans Schwarz die Stunde kommen und seiner lang verkannten Kunst ihr Recht werden."

Dr Domanig in Deutsche Medaille suggests after Dr Habich, that it is not always possible to discriminate quite absolutely between the works of Hans Schwarz and Hans Daucher.

Prof. Stephan Schwartz was entrusted by the Servian government in 1904 to cut the dies for the coinage of Peter I.

Montenegro, 20 Perpera, 1910.

In 1909 he engraved a 5 Kronen piece of Francis Joseph I. and subsidiary currency. The 5 Kronen piece was withdrawn on account of the artists’ full signature ST. SCHWARTZ appearing under the bust.

This engraver is also responsible for the new Montenegrin gold coinage, consisting of 100, 20 and 10 Perpera pieces. The Silver, Nickel and Bronze Coinage of this State was struck at the Paris Mint, 1909.

Prof. Schwartz has made a great number of pieces in bronze and marble, many medals and small moulded pieces. "Gaucklertag", Munich ; — Prize Medal of the 'Handwerkskammer' Augsburg ; — Jubilee medal of the Royal Lyceum "Albertus Magnus" (2 sizes) ; — Silvia Kalm, of Ratisbon ; — St. Christophorus, 1910, etc.

SCHWEIDLIG, MARKUS of Olmütz (Germ.). Administrator of the Mint at Breslau, 1624, 1625-1627, and again in 1629.

SCHWEIGER, HANS (Germ.). Seal-engraver at Augsburg, 1600.

SCHWEIGER, JACOB (Germ.). Mint-master at Emden, 1648-1650. Schlickeysen and Pallmann take him to be the same person as JAKOB SCHWIEGELT (q. v.), who was acting as Mint-master at Glückstadt between 1644 and 1660.

SCHWEIGER. The name of a distinguished family of Engravers of Basle, who for three generations in the sixteenth century were entrusted with the preparing of coin-dies for that city and neighbouring towns.

The first Die-sinker of that name was : —

SCHWEIGER, GEORG (JORG) (Swiss). Goldsmith of Basle; a native of Augsburg. The first mention of him at Basle dates from 1507. In a contemporary document dated 1533, he is named "Jorg Schweiger, goldtschmidt, burger zu Basel". In that year he entered into an agreement to cut coin-dies for Basle, Freiburg in Brisgau, Colmar, Breisach, and Thann, &c. The Batzen of 1533 are the first modern currency of the 'Rappenbund', which was intended for wide circulation not only inside but also outside the Union. The Union was obliged to withdraw this coinage in 1536 in consequence of the opposition of king Ferdinand and other ruling Princes.

D<sup>r</sup> Cahn suggests that the fine Basle Dicken of 1521 and 1522 are by Jorg Schweizer, whose death must have taken place some time previous to 1542.

Dicken of Basle, 1521.

Schweiger died circ. 1534. Ambrosius Holbein painted his portrait. He was also acquainted with Urs Graf, who gave him a drawing in 1523 (D. Burckhardt, Schweiz. Künstler-Lexikon, III, 96).

SCHWEIGER, HANS (Swiss). Son of the preceding, and also a clever Die-engraver, whose name first occurs in 1542. The five cities of the "Rappenbund" were granted in that year the right of issuing large silver currency, on the condition of their subscribing to the war fund against the Turks. In consequence Basle, Freiburg in

B., Colmar, Breisach and Thann coined Thalers, Half Thalers and subsidiary currency from 1542 to 1554 in fairly large quantity, the dies for which were cut by Hans Schweiger, who is responsible also for a very rare Pattern Half-Thaler of Basle, 1542, with a representation of L. Munatius Plancus, the founder of the city, Half Thalers and Zehner for Basle, Freiburg i. B., Colmar, and Guldenthaler of Basle, 1564.

Breisach, which coinage was continued with slight variations in the types for some years. From 1566 Freiburg and Breisach were to place on their coins the effigy and titles of the reigning archduke Ferdinand. The coins of 1564 show artistic superiority over those of 1542.

SCHWEIGER, SIEGMUND (Swiss). Son of Hans S., and his successor as Engraver to the Mint of Basle. We find him in office in 1579, and working for various Princes. In 1580 Archduke Ferdinand forbade the sale of silver and in 1554 erected a mint of his own at Ensisheim, in consequence of which the services of the Basle Engraver were no longer required except for autonomous currency. We hear nothing more of Siegmund S. after that date.

SCHWEIGER, ULRICH and his brothers, CHRISTOPH, CLEMENS and GEORG (Germ.). Goldsmiths, Seal-engravers, &c. at Augsburg, about 1550.

SCHWEIGGER, GEORG (Germ.). Sculptor, Gem-engraver and Medallist of Nuremberg, born 6. April 1613, died there 13. June 1690. He was a pupil of his father EMMANUEL S. and of Christian Ritter.

Bolzenthall mentions as his work three Portrait-medallions of Pirckheymer, Melanchthon, and Theophrastus Paracelsus. One of Luther is described in the Gutekunst Catalogue of medals, and a specimen of this was formerly in Dr F. P. Weber's collection ; which is now in the British Museum. Domanig attributes to the same artist a uniface Portrait-medallion in honestone of Ferdinand III., undated (Porträtmedaillen, &c., n° 190).

Babelon states that Georg Schweigger engraved in 1643 a fine portrait of Ferdinand III. in precious stone, and that by him are also various religious subjects, one of his works having been sold for 60.000 florins to Russia (Arneth, Die cinque-cento Cameen, p. 80).

SCHWEINBERGER, ANTON and FRANZ (Germ.). Seal-engravers at Augsburg, circ. 1600.

SCHWENCKER (or SCHWENNCK), LEONHARD (Germ.). Mint-master at Würzburg, circ. 1524.

SCHWENDER, HANS (Germ.). Mint-engraver at Prague, 1563; he was a native of Joachimsthal, for which Mint he also worked, from about 1563.

SCHWENDIMANN, KASPAR JOSEPH (Swiss). Medallist, Gem-, and Coin-engraver, Modeller and Line-engraver, born at Ebikon (near Lucerne), 6. December 1721, died at Rome in November 1786. He was one of the most esteemed artists of his time in Rome, but had a very chequered early life. His father was a joiner, who was unable to provide the youth with the necessary means to learn the profession of draughtsman and line-engraver. Young Schwendimann was sent to Rome, then to Augsburg, where he suffered many privations, and even hunger. Later he worked for six months at Zoug as amanuensis to the engraver Hiltensperger. Many were the difficulties he had to encounter until he was able to dedicate himself entirely to the art of his predilection. It was not until he met the famous Hedlinger at Schwytz that his success was assured. The great artist took him under his protection, noticing his clever dispositions, and offering him the instruction he was still in need of. After a few years, he made himself a name at Lucerne, won the patronage of two distinguished statesmen Amrhin and Balthasar, and was even entrusted with the engraving of the State seals and official stamps. In 1772 he went to Rome, where he studied the antique, and attained a high degree of perfection as a medallist. He lived there for fourteen years, but his career was cut short by the hand of an assassin; he was stabbed 24 times with a knife in his own house, and died eight days later, on 1. December 1786. The artist's right hand especially was severely mutilated, and to the friends around him who sought to instil into him hopes of recovery, he exclaimed: "Vedete mia mano e lasciate mi morir.". He was buried in Rome. A monument, bearing the following inscription, was raised to his memory:

HIC JACET JOSEPHUS SCHWENDIMANN

HELVETIUS LUCERNENSIS

IN INCIDENTIS NUMISMATIBUS NULLI SECUNDUS.

Schwendimann's signature occurs as follows: I. SCHWENDIMANN FECIT; — I. SCHWENDIMAN F.; — I. SCHWENDIMAN; — I. S.; — IOS. SCHWENDIMAN F.; — IOS. SCHWENDIMANN F.; — IOS. SCHWENDIMANN. HELVET. F.; — I. S. F.;

The following list of the artist's medallic productions is taken from Inwyler's monograph (Bull. de la Société suisse de numismatique, 1883, pp. 49-61): Prize Medal of the Painters' Academy of San Luca in Rome, 1775; 45 mill. (the reverse die of this medal was used by G. Girometti in 1846 for a Roman Scholastic Prize medal for Art); — Pope Pius VI., 1776; 55 mill.; — Memorial medal of Pope Clement XIV., 1775; — Prize medal of Pius VI., 1779; Collegio Romano; 37 mill.; — Charles Theodore's election as Prince Elector of the Bavarian Palatinate, 1777; 51 mill.; (Æ and Æ); — Union of the Palatinate with Bavaria, 1777; 72 mill.; — Renewal at Soleure of the Treaty concluded between the French Crown and the Helvetic Confederation, 1777 (two varieties), 54 mill. (Cardinal Gonzaga was the artist's great patron at Rome); — Portrait-medal of Antonio Raphael Mengs, painter; 37 mill. (one of the engraver's best works); — Commemorative medal of the Battle of Sempach (undated, but executed in 1780; one specimen struck in gold from the Emme river); 34 mill. The reverse of this medal was used in connection with Jonas Thiébaud's obverse of the Lucerne 4 Ducat piece for a medal issued in 1815 and intended to commemorate Lucerne's participation in the Allies' Campaign against Napoleon I.; — Third Centenary of the Stanz Compromise, with bust of Nikolaus von der Flüe, 1781; 30 mill.; — Joseph Laber (circ. 1783; only known from plaster casts, and lead impressions of the obverse); 38 mill.; — Ducats of Pius VI. for Bologna, 1782; — Scholastic Prize Medal of Zoug, undated; with figure of St. Oswald; 33 mill.; — Portrait-medal of Gustavus III., King of Sweden, 1784 (two varieties: one with R<sup>z</sup> legend: SVECIA SERVATA. both 64 mill.); — Cardinal Marco Castelli, Roman prelate, 1784 (two varieties: (a) Façade of the Church at Ravenna; (b) Pius VI. receiving from the kneeling prelate a plan of a Church; both 60 mill.); — Prize Medal of the University of Bologna, 1785; 53 mill.; — Pisan Scudo of the Grand Duchy of Tuscany, 1784; — Portrait-medal of Duke Petër of Curland, undated; 64 mill.

All these medals exist in the Lucerne "Bürgerbibliothek"

Schwendimann was in the act of engraving an official medal for the State of Lucerne when he fell a victim under the murderer's steel (24. November or 1. December 1786).

By him are also a large number of copper plates, armorial bearings, seals, gems, rings, etc.

The peculiarity of his talent is evident in the works which relate to the Renewal of the Treaty between France and Switzerland, Cardinal Al. Val. Gonzaga, Chevalier Mengs, and Union of the Palatinate with Bavaria. He was a worthy disciple of Hedlinger. Meyer of Hamburg in his "Reise in Italien" states that "Schwendimann was for a long time the great artist in Rome ", and Fuesslin is equally eulogious.

SCHWENZER, KARL (Germ.). Medallist and Coin-engraver, born at Löwenstein in Württemberg, 26. February 1843, died at Stuttgart, 29. November 1904. He was the second son of a turner, and already manifested in his school days a taste and ability for engraving, in which he received instruction from his elder brother Ludwig. At the age of 14 he was placed as an apprentice with the engraver Schiller at Stuttgart, from 1861 to 1864 he visited the Stuttgart art schools, and from 1864 to 1867 studied under Kröhling at Nuremberg. Here it was that he obtained his first official orders, consisting of a Portrait-medal of Kepler for the University of Tübingen, and a Prize Medal for Trade and Industries of the Württemberg commercial centre. In 1867 and 1868 he worked in Paris for the medallist Paulin Tasset, and later until 1872 he was with Wyon in London.

The Vienna Universal Exhibition brought Schwenger's name to the front. Among the competitive designs sent in for the five official Prize medals, two of his obtained a first prize, and he was entrusted with the cutting of the dies for these in 1875. During his three years' residence in Vienna, from 1872 to 1875, the artist engraved a variety of medals. In 1875 he returned to Stuttgart, where he lived until his death, with the exception of a stay in Berlin from 1883 to 1885.

Switzerland and Bulgaria are indebted to Schwenger for various patterns of Coins. A pattern 20 Centimes of Switzerland, 1881, is described in Bull. de la Société suisse de numismatique, 1882, p. 76, n° 4. He cut the dies for the nickel coinage from 1879. In 1883 he prepared the dies for the 20 Franc piece, which was coined until 1895, when Landry's type was adopted. Also the dies of the 5 Franc pieces, 1888-1895, are by him.

Among his medals, the following may be mentioned : Freiherr Franz Karl von Hauch zu Haunsheim, on the birth of his daughter Irma, 17. August 1873 ; — Fifth German Federal Rifle Meeting, 1875 ; — Vienna Exhibition of Photography, 1875 ; — Jubilee (4. Schwenzer was elected in 1874 honorary member of the Academy of Vienna, and the King of Württemberg and Grand Duke of Baden both bestowed orders upon him for his services to Art. As a man, he was a noble character, true and straight in all his dealings. King Charles had appointed him Court-medallist.

SCHWERDT, A. (Germ.). Die-sinker and Medallist of Stuttgart, by whom I have noticed the following medals : Centennial of Homeopathy, with bust of Hahnemann, 1890 (signed : SCHWERDT STUTTG.); — First International Congress of the Homeopathic Society, at Hamburg, 1895; — Fifth General German Gymnastic Fête at Frankfort-on-M., 1880 (signed : A. SCHWERT STUTTGART); — Federal Choral Festival of Basle, 1893; — Federal Fête of Gymnastics at Lugano, 1894, &c.

SCHWERDTNER, KARL MARIA (Austr.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, residing at Vienna; pupil of his father Johann Schwerdtner and Professor Helmer.

By this talented artist are a number of cast Portrait-medallions and Plaquettes; amongst which one of his father (illustrated), which he presented to him on 14. July 1903, on the occasion of the 70th anniversary of his birth. Further works by him are : Prize Medal of the Horticultural Show at Vienna, 1901 (with bust of the Archduke Franz Ferdinand); — Hedwig and Norbert Reichert; — Gretl Benk; — Von Billisch; — Ferdinand von Saar, on his 70th birthday; — Inauguration of the Unveiling of the 'Deutschmeister' Monument at Vienna, 1906 (signed : CARL MARIA SCHWERDTNER JUNIOR); — Burgomaster Dr Carl Lueger, 1907; — Ludwig Gabillon, 1900; — Dr Wilhelm Winternitz, of Vienna (signed : C. M. S.); — Inauguration of the Monument to German Art in Vienna (Deutschmeister Denkmal); — Dr Franz Berger; plaquette; — Archduke Franz Ferdinand; — Ferdinand von Saar, a Viennese poet.

C. M. Schwerdtner, a young man of marked individuality, he naturally seeks for those traits which lie beyond the outward expression of those whose features he is moulding. Herein lies the secret of his success. His first intention was to devote himself to sculpture — to create some large work in which he could show the world a vigorous and daring treatment. A visit to Charpentier in Paris was to be decisive for him. The great artist took no pupils, but he did more than teach young Schwerdtner, for during the six months he was in Paris, Charpentier not only allowed him to visit him in his studio, but corrected his work, and, what is more, explained his own development by means of illustrations and models of his own work. The knowledge of technique thus gained proved invaluable to Schwerdtner.

The desire to portray is inborn in Schwerdtner, and his "portraits" are portraits in the larger and deeper sense of the word. That of Captain Weyprecht, the North Pole explorer and joint discoverer of Franz Josef's Land with Payer, is wonderfully true. There is an air of nobility and dignity worthy the man whom the medal represents, and the Ministry of War did well in commissioning Schwerdtner to design the Memorial at Pola, which is carried out in pure white marble.

Schwerdtner's Portrait-plaquettes of the artist's father and the sculptor Professor Benk are both full of strength and vigour, while that of the professor's daughter, Frau Urban, shows that the artist can also mould other types : here he has caught the delicate expression of his subject, a true Viennese. In none of his plastic productions does he seek to overweight one characteristic at the expense of another, but makes it his aim to harmonise and blend them all in due proportion.

nik; — H. E. Burgsmaster Lueger; — Deutschmeister Monument; — Prof. Winternitz; — Prof. Freud; — Union Fechtclub; — Prof. Laurenz Müller; — Johann Schwerdtner.

SCHWERDTNER, JOHANN (Austr.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, born at Vienna on 14. July 1834, died in 1909; pupil of J. Fischer, and Wenzel Seidan, and the Academy of Arts of Vienna. At the age of 20 he entered the K. K. Military-geographical Institute as pupil in line-engraving, where he remained until 1864, in which year he founded the Works which he directed until his death. Since 1869 he was a member of the Society of Sculptors of Vienna, and since 1873 a member of the Jury at Viennese Arts and Crafts Exhibitions. In 1874 he founded the Independent Society of Viennese Engravers ". On the occasion of his professional Jubilee in 1897 Schwerdtner was presented with the large gold Salvator medal by burgomaster Dr Karl Lueger in the name of the city of Vienna.

Although some of his medallic productions are clever and skilful, the artist does not rank with the great masters of the Austrian school of medallists, headed by Scharff, and Tautenhayn. Among his numerous works, I may mention the following of which I have seen descriptions: 1868. Third German Federal Rifle Meeting at Vienna, 1868 (obv. only); — 1871. Heads of Geo. III., Geo IV., and William IV., in profile to left; — Medal of the Royal Caledonian Club, instituted in 1838 (signed: SCLATER SC.) (Cochran Patrick, Scottish Medals, 1884).

SCOPAS (Greek). This inscription ΣΚΟΠΑΣ occurs on a fine hyacinth intaglio of the Leipzig Library, representing a beardless male head. M. Babelon adds, in his description of the gem, that it is unlikely that the Engraver is the same person as the famous sculptor of the bas-reliefs of the Mausoleum.

Scopas was an artist of pre-imperial times.

The signature ΣΚΟΠΑΣ on gems purporting to be ancient is undoubtedly modern.

The signature has been added in modern times on various gems: Oedipus and the Sphinx; signed: ΣΚΟΠΑ·ΕΠ· (Stosch); — Bust of Apollo Citharedus (Sellari); — Head of Epicurus, sard (Count Butterlin); — Young woman at her toilet (Caylus).

SCOTHEM, JAN VAN (Dutch). Mint-master at Middleburg, appointed 19. October 1355, under Willem V.

SCOTT, MAJOR then LIEUT. COL. B. (Brit.). Officiating Mint-master at Calcutta, appointed on 22. September 1891, and in office until 1st March 1892; 23. November 1897 to 6. July 1900; 1. October 1900 to 30. November of the same year; and again from 1. November 1902 to 22. April 1904. He also officiated at Bombay, 1895-1897.

SCOTT, B. (Brit.). Engraver of coins and Medallist to the empresses of Russia, Elizabeth and Catherine the Great, 1754-1762. Iversen states that his initials B.S. occur on Roubles of the years 1754 to 1757, and on two small Memorial medals of Elizabeth, and I have further noticed it on a Portrait-medal of Catherine II., 1761, and on a commemorative medal of the Battle of Poltawa (signed: B. SCOTT F.).

SCOTT, J. D. (Brit.). Engraver of a St. Patrick's Total Abstinence Society medal of Montreal, 1841 (Leroux, Médailleur du Canada, p. III).

SCOTT, R. (Brit.). This signature occurs on a Prize medal of the Glasgow East End Exhibition, 1890. The engraver is a local Die-sinker and Seal-engraver.

SCOTT, ROBERT (Amer.). First Engraver of the United States Mint at Philadelphia, appointed on 23. November 1793, and apparently in office until January 1824. Evans states that "information is wanting as to the nativity of Scott, but at the time of his appointment he seems to have been turning the down-hill of life. He is remembered as rather under size, and as an honourable and agreeable gentleman".

The first official coinage of the United States dates from 1793 and consists only of Cents and Half Cents. In the following year, silver Dollars, Half Dollars, and Half Dimes were also issued, and in 1795 the Eagles and Half Eagles were first struck.

Dollar of the United States of America, 1795.

The earliest coins issued by the United States Government were Half Dimes. This issue, which took place in October 1792, is thus described by Washington in his message to Congress, 6. November 1792: "There has been a small beginning in the coinage of Half-dimes; the want of small coins in circulation, calling the first attention to them".

On these early coins, the portrait of Martha Washington is said to have been used for the personification of the head of Liberty; —

R. UNI. STATES OF AMERICA. Eagle flying to l.; beneath, HALF | DISME | * 10, 5 mill. — 21 grains.

Half Disme of 1792.

Of these Half-dismes only 100 dollars' worth were struck and placed in circulation. They are now very scarce and sought after by collectors.

The same portrait of Martha Washington occurs also on a Pattern Disme of the same year.

Disme of 1792.

To these coins may be added a Pattern Cent, also of 1792, with the same portrait.

Pattern Cent. Obv. LIBERTY PARENT OF SCIENCE & INDUSTRY. Head of Liberty to right with flowing hair; on truncation: BIRCH; beneath, 1792.

R. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA. Within laurel-wreath tied below with a ribbon, the inscription: ONE CENT; under the wreath:  $\frac{4}{100}$ . Edge inscribed: TO BE ESTEEMED \* BE USEFUL. 21 mill. — 217—286 grains.

Although the last piece only bears the engraver's name, it is most probable that Birch cut the dies for all three coins.

The head of Liberty on the United States silver currency (Dollars, Half Dollars, Quarters, Dimes, and Half Dimes) continued for several years to be a modified type of the portrait of Martha Washington.

SCUDDER, JANET (Amer.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, born in Terre Haute, Indiana, on 27th October 1874, a daughter of William Hollingshead and Mary Sparks Scudder, a descendant from Thomas Scudder of London, who with his wife Mary emigrated to Salem, Mass. in 1635. Miss Scudder was educated at the High School in Terre Haute, began to study sculpture at the Cincinnati Art Academy under Louis J. Rebisso, and continued at the Art Institute, Chicago, under Lorado Taft. Later she entered the Académie Vitti and Collarossi in Paris, finally becoming the pupil of Frederick Mc Monnies.

While studying in Chicago Miss Scudder was given orders for two figures for the Columbian Exposition, one for the Illinois Building, and another for the Indiana Building. She was awarded a Bronze medal at the Chicago World's Fair, and also at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, St. Louis. In 1901 five Portrait-medallions by her were acquired by the French State for the Luxembourg Museum.

Miss Scudder's principal works are : Seal for the Bar Association of New York ; — Cinerary Urn for Daniel Mather Walbridge, Woodlawn Cemetery, New York ; — Fountains for Archbold Cottage, Bar Harbor, Maine ; — Other Fountains for Mrs. E. Howard Child, Westwood, Mass ; Chas Platt, N. Y. ; James Burge, Southampton, L. I. ; Richmond Art Association ; — Statue of "Japanese Art" for the Brooklyn Art Museum ; — Marble sun-dial for Mrs. Warner M. Leeds, Port Washington, L.I. ; — Bronze Memorial Tablets to Arthur Middleton Reeves, Richmond, Indiana ; — Marble Memorial to Bishop Hare, Sioux Falls, Iowa ; — “Frog Fountain” and Collection of 8 silver Medallions, purchased by the Metropolitan

Miss Mildred Barnes.

Miss Scudder is a Member of the American National Sculpture Society, and National Society of Arts.

Her principal Portrait-medallions are the following :

1900. Mrs. Michael van Buren ; — Mrs. Warner M. Geeds ; — Miss Leslie Emmett ; — Miss Alice Jones ; — 1902. Bishop Hare ; — Percy Chubb Esq. ; — Miss Margheretta Mac Veagh ; — 1903. Portrait of a Gentleman (illustrated) ; — 1904. A. J. Parsons Esq. ;

Miss Janet Scudder has been very successful so far, thanks to her real talent and keen artistic perception. Her work is delicate, but does not lack in boldness and originality.

Articles treating of this artist's work have appeared in the "Studio".

At the International Medallion Exhibition of the American Numismatic Society at New York, March 1910, she exhibited a dozen of her works ; also a selection of thirteen of her best medallion productions at the Brussels Salon de la Médaille, 1910.

SCULTET VON SCHOLTISHEIM, SALOMON (Bohem.). Mint-engraver at Prague, 1636-1656. Beside coin-dies, he cut Religious medals, some dies of which are still preserved at the Vienna mint.

SCYLAX (Greek). Gem-engraver of the Alexandrine period, by whom only two absolutely authentic gems are known. One signed CKYAAΞ is an intaglio representing a young Satyr dancing (Furtwängler, o. c., p. 49-50) ; and the other, purchased for 2500 frs. by the Bibliothèque nationale, Paris, at a sale of Dr. Sambon's in March 1902, is a Portrait-intaglio (illustrated). Youthful male bust in profile to right ; behind the head, CKYAAΞ. The work is charmingly delicate and of exquisite style. This gem was found at Brindisi.

Portrait-intaglio, by Scylax.

Referring to the first of these two works of Scylax, the youthful Satyr dancing, Prof. Furtwängler says : "Die Arbeit des Steines ist eine ganz vorzügliche ; trotz der zierlichen Ausführung des Details herrscht doch eine so feine Mässigung, eine so ächt antike Frische im Ganzen, ein solcher Gegensatz zu allem Weichlichen und Unsichern, dass ich die Gemme nur für antik halten kann. Wie schön und klar sind die Formen des Körpers, wie einfach derb das stumpfnäsige Satyrgeſicht, und wie zart geſchmackvoll iſt das Pantherfell behandelt. ”

Among the dubious gems, whether antique with a ſignature added in modern times, or entirely modern, I may mention the following bearing the inſcription of Scylax : — Cameo repreſenting Hercules Muſarum (formerly in Baron Roger de Sivry’s collection). This gem is conſidered as original by M. Babelon (Daremberg & Saglio’s Dict., art. Gemmae II, 1479); — Eagle’s head, ſard (formerly in the collection of Lord A. Percy, and now in the Hermitage, St. Petersburg; probably borrowed from the Blacas gem, inſcribed CKYAA). An imitation of this gem, from the Caſtellani collection, exiſts in the Britiſh Muſeum, with the inſcription CKIAAK; — Head of Pan, full face, amethyſt (Blacas); — Head of C. Antius Reſtio, ſard (formerly in the Marlborough Collection); — Male portrait, ſard (ibid.); — Head of a bald man, garnet (formerly in Baron Roger de Sivry’s cabinet); — Man ſtanding, holding a bow, ſard (ibid.); — Mask of Satyr, front face (ibid.); — Combat between a giant and griffin, ſard (St. Petersburg), etc.

Pichler imitated ſome of theſe.

In the Poniatowski collection were the following eighteenth century gems, inſcribed Scylax : Bacchus bringing Semele from Hades, oriental cornelian; — The centaur Phobus pouring out wine for his gueſt Hercules, oriental cornelian; — Hercules in the act of ſtriking Telamon, who, to appeaſe him, points to the altar he is conſtructing in his honour, oriental cornelian; — Thetis inquiring of Achilles the cauſe of his affliction, cornelian.

SCYMNUS, CKYMNOC (Greek). The only authentic gem known with this ſignature CKYMNOY was formerly in the Kibaltchich Collection (St. Petersburg). In his catalogue of the collection, Dr Sambon deſcribes this gem thus :

Intaglio, by Scymnus.

“ Jeune Faune courant vers la droite ; il agite de la main gauche

le thyrses et verse, de la main droite élevée, le contenu d'une coupe. Il regarde en courant une panthère qui gambade à ses côtés. Derrière, se lit la signature du graveur CKYMNOY (d'une authenticité incontestable). Intaille sur cornaline orientale. Travail hellénistique d'une grande finesse. Conservation irréprochable. Pièce d'élite.

"C'est la seule pièce connue avec cette signature."

This signature occurs also on another gem, which is modern, and described by King as representing Bacchus followed by a panther.

S. D. A. (Ital.). According to Milanese and Armand these initials may be the signature of a Florentine Goldsmith SALVESTRO DELL'AVACCHIA, who worked for some time at Rome for Pope Leo X. Vasari states that this goldsmith excelled in all the branches of his art.

The initials S. D. A. occur on a medal of Cardinal Giangiacomo Sciafenati, undated; 58 mill.; — and on another of Filippo Sciafenati; 54 mill.

SEATON, CHRISTOPHER (Brit.). A Scotsman, pupil of the Danish Gem-engraver Christian Reisen, was in 1750, says King, "at the head of his profession in London." He endeavoured to give an extreme finish to his gems: hence they are weak, cold, and without spirit. His chief works are portraits of Pope, Inigo Jones, and Sir John Newton, for the last of which he was paid 25 guineas" (p. 273). Raspe describes further by him a Head of Psyche, in white cornelian, and a Portrait of Charles I., in the character of the 'Ecce Homo'.

Seaton engraved the Great seal of George III. and also, in the opinion of Mr. Frank Bowcher, one of those for use in Ireland under the same reign.

SEBALD, MARTIN (Germ.). Sculptor and Medallist of the nineteenth century, died in the early part of 1888 at Augsburg. He worked for the DRENTWETT Die-sinking establishment for many years (circ. 1875-1887) as Modeller of the medals they issued. The firm was founded in 1842 at Augsburg by Gottfried Drentwett († 2. May 1871), and continued by his son Carl Drentwett (born 9. April 1848-† 24. March 1878), who made the business over in 1869 to the lithographer Heinrich Schmidt, the present owner.

Schlickeysen-Pallmann (p. 380) led me in error when I mentioned (Vol. I, p. 614) the name of Sebald Drentwett as that of the founder of the Drentwett private mint. For a list of some of Sebald's productions, confer my article on Drentwett (Vol. I, NE, pp. 614-616).

By Sebald are also a number of Portrait-medals of German celebrities, as Goethe, Schiller, Prince Bismarck, Count Moltke, etc.

SEBASTIANI, HEINRICH JUSTUS (Germ.). Mint-warden, 1692-1694, and later Mint-master, 1694-1702 at Steuerwald. His initials H. S. or also H. I. S. occur on the coins.

SECCHI, LUIGI (Ital.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, residing at Milan, from whom I have been unable to obtain any information as to his artistic career.

At the Brussels "Salon de la Médaille" 1910, he exhibited a Portrait-medal of Camillo Boito, 1905, and at the New York International Medallic Exhibition, March 1910: Prof. Carlo Baravelle; — Senator Francesco Brioschi; — Portrait of a young Lady; — Virile portraits; — Senator Giuseppe Colombo; — Comm. Camillo Boito; — Cav. Prof. Luigi Brianzi; — Senator Luca Beltrami; — Senator Luca Beltrami's mother.

SIBILLE, M<sup>me</sup> JULIETTE (French). Contemporary Sculptor, born at Paris; pupil of Chapu, and P. Dubois. At the Salon of 1892 this artist exhibited a Portrait-medallion of a young Lady.

SECOND, JEAN, surname of JEAN EVERARDI or NICOLAÏ (Flem.). Poet, and Medallist of Malines, born at The Hague, 14. November 1511, died at the early age of 25 on 27. September 1536. His life has been told by Pinchart, Picqué, Raymond Serrure, and again more recently by Dr Simonis, in his L'Art du Médailleur en Belgique, 1900 (pp. 35-92).

The artist's father, Nicolas Everaers, was born at Gruysperke, near Middelburg, and from humble circumstances he rose to become President of the Council of Holland. The mother, Elisa Bladelle, was a native of Malines. The youth's first teachers were Jacques Wolcard, of Berg-op-Zoom, and Stenenmeulen, of Malines. Nothing is known of his childhood, but in 1527 he settled at Malines, where he became a favourite in the brilliant circle of dignitaries of the court of Margaret of Austria. At the age of seventeen, he modelled his first medal, a portrait of his father. In 1532, he went to Bourges to study law, and after a year obtained the degree of doctor-in-laws. In 1534, we find him filling the post of secretary to the Cardinal of Toledo in Spain. His stay there was of short duration. The Emperor Charles V., to whose ears the fame of the delightful poet had reached, appointed him his private secretary and panegyrist. As such, Second accompanied the Emperor in his expedition to Tunis in 1535. The African climate proved injurious to his health, and he was obliged to return to Spain, where however he did not recover his strength. Returning to Tournay, he was taken ill with fever, and died on 27. September 1536.

Kits, who found in 1838 a Portrait medal in lead of Second's mistress Julia, was the first to draw attention to the medallic work of the poet. Picqué in 1873 published his medal of Nicolas Grudius and Anna Cobella. Cumont in 1894 gave a list of eight of his productions, to which Dr Simonis has been adding ten more, at least tentatively.

List of Medals. 1. Nicolas Everaers, the artist's father, with the legend : NICOLAO EVERARDI PATRI IOAN. FILIVS. F. ♂ (only known from a later casting); — 2. Another, with the legend : IO. SE. F. MDXXXI (in the collection of M. Mayer-van den Bergh, of Antwerp); — 3. Joachim Ringelbergh, of Antwerp (Trésor, Med. all., Pl. IX, 9); 4. Lucius Brassicanus, poet; — 5. Johannes Dantiscus, bishop of Culm, undated (Simonis, Pl. III, 3; diam. 55 mill.); — 6. Aegidius Buslidius (Gilles Busleiden), poet, undated; — 7. Julia, the artist's first mistress, of Malines (lead portrait-medal). In a letter, dated 8. May 1533, to Jan van Schoorl, a painter of Utrecht, Second mentions that he has just modelled a medal, and that he has already done that of Julia; his terms are very explicit : Rogo sincere iudices, vix enim inducor, ut credam iudicium quod de Juliae imagine proferebas, fuisse incorruptum; — 8. Franciscus Craneveld, 1533; honestone; 48 mill. (Hague Museum); — 9. Nicolas Grudius, brother of Second; — 10. Anna Cobella, first wife of Grudius; — 11. Neera, second mistress of Second, whom he met in Spain; — 12. Jean Carondelet, archbishop of Palermo, provost of Saint Donat at Bruges; — 13. Charles V.; R. The Pillars of Hercules; modelled in honestone, and bronze (Trésor, Med. all., p. 38, n° 2). This was executed in various sizes; — 14. André Alciat, lawyer of Bourges, Count Palatine; ℞. ΑΝΔΡΟΣ ΔΙΚΑΙΟΥ ΚΑΡΠΟΣ ΟΥΚ ΑΠΟΛΛΥΤΑΙ Caduceus between two cornucopiae, undated (1533); — 15. Nicolas Grudius and Anna Cobella (two specimens in the Brussels Museum); — 16. Nicolas Perrenot, cardinal Granvella, minister of Charles V.; — 17. Johann Danielis, secretary of Charles V.; — 18. Erasmus of Rotterdam; formerly ascribed to Quentin Metsys, but given to Second by Dr Simonis (op. cit., p. 80-88).

Portrait-medal of Erasmus of Rotterdam.

Second probably modelled his portraits in wax, or honestone, after the fashion of his German contemporaries, and only some specimens were cast in bronze. Most of the known pieces in bronze exist only in later casts of the seventeenth century.

The artist's most famous poetical works are Les Baisers and his Elegies. He has been called the Flemish Tibullus, and indeed he ranks very high.

dates of foundation of the various colleges arranged around arms of

King George V. and Queen Mary, June 1911.

SEEL, or SÖLL. Two Die-cutters of that name, PETER, and PAVL S. were employed at the mint of Salzburg, ca. 1632-1665, and 1660-1695 resp. They descended from a family of Salzburg officials, the name of one George Seel occurring as early as 1506-1509 as Justice of the peace at Tittmoning.

Herr Gustav Zeller has published a very full monograph on the work of these Engravers: Die Familie Seel und ihre Medaillen, Mitth. des Klubs, &c., 1893.

SEEL, PAUL (Austr.). Son of Peter Seel; Medallist, and Mintengraver at Salzburg, circ. 1660-† 1695. He learned the art of die-cutting with his father, and worked also as a Line-Engraver. From 1660 to 1665 he assisted his father at the Salzburg mint; from 1665

John Ernest Count Thun, archbishop of Salzburg.

until his death, he filled the office of Chief-engraver; his successor was Ignaz Portenschlager (1695-1715).

Thun (1654-1668), Maximilian Gandolfo Count Khuenburg (1668-1687), and Johann Ernest Count Thun (1687-1709).

Amongst his most noteworthy productions are : Large gold coins (multiples of the Ducat) with the arms of Max Gandolfo and the Patron Saints Rupert and Virgil, dated 1668; — Thaler commemorating the Eleventh centenary of the Archiepiscopate under Max Gandolfo, 1682; — Silver Portrait-medal of Max Gandolfo, 1686; — Oval Portrait-medal of Johann Ernst Count Thun, 1687 (illustrated); — Large gold coins (multiples of the Ducat) with arms of Johann Ernest, dated 1687.

Paul Seel's reputation must have been considerable. He cut a vast number of so-called "Pilgrim's Badges" and "Monastic Medals" (generally in yellow brass), which range from Westphalia and Switzerland to Hungary, and from Saxony and Silesia to the coast of the Adriatic. The probable date of their production is comprised mainly between 1680 and 1690.

The artist signed his medals PS, and less frequently SP; his full name occurs only on the round Portrait-medal of Archbishop Max Gandolf Count Khuenburg, 1686, and on the oval one of Archbishop Johann Ernest Count Thun, 1687; but the great majority of the works of the two Seels are unsigned. The initials SL no doubt also represent Seel.

Count Karl Liechtenstein, bishop of Olmütz.

Prof. Domanig suggests the attribution to Paul Seel of an oval Portrait-medal of Count Karl Lichtenstein, bishop of Olmütz (illustrated), which in treatment and style bears strong analogy with the artist's authenticated productions, and he reproduces on Pl. 85, n° 74 (Die Deutsche Medaille) a Pilgrim's Badge, undated, signed : P. S., with the Adoration of the Shepherds on obv. and on R<sup>x</sup>. The three Kings worshipping the Infant Christ.

By Paul Seel are further : Oval medal on the Capture of Budapest, 1686 (signed : P. S.) (2 var.); — Oval medals of the Priory of Chiemsee (Upper Bavaria), with bust of Pope Sixtus II. (signed : P. S.) (2 var.); — Oval Plague Amulet of Munich; — Oval medals, Academy of the Militia angel. St Thomas ab Aquinus, Salzburg, founded in 1669 (4 var.); — 11th Centenary of the Benedictine Nunnery of Nonnberg, 1682; — 11th Centenary of the Benedictine Monastery of St. Peter at Salzburg, 1682 (signed : P. S.); — 5th Centenary of the Abbey of Windberg at Sossau, near Straubing, 1677 (heart-shaped); — Oval medal on the Relief of Vienna, 1683; — Sixth Centenary of the Foundation of the Shrine of Mariazell, 1687 (2 var.; one signed P. S.); — Erection of the Column of the Holy Trinity in Vienna, etc.

SEEL, PETER (Austr.). Medallist, and Mint-engraver at Salzburg, circ. 1632-1665. His name first occurs in contemporary records in 1632 as archiepiscopal Seal- and Coin-engraver at the Salzburg mint, and for a period of 33 years he held his office, which only old age compelled him to give up. His colleague at the Mint from 1630-1655 was the Tyrolese Engraver König (otherwise Mathias Khuenig von Baumbhausen) of Hall, and after that period he was assisted by his son Paul.

Peter Seel's productions for the archiepiscopal mint consist mostly of dies for the Salzburg currency, from the Thaler downwards, including the Ducat, of archbishops Paris Count Lodron, and Guidobaldus Count Thun. By him are also the two gold medals with a representation of the façade of Salzburg Cathedral, dated 1654 and 1655. We may note that this Engraver did not cut any Portrait-medals of the Salzburg archbishops, and that his work is inferior to his son's.

That the artist accepted commissions outside the Salzburg mint is apparent, as by him are, for instance, the medal commemorating the Breaking out of the Plague at Munich in 1634; — Fourth Centenary of Fraukirchen, 1640; — Transfer of the image of the Holy Child from Cloister Dieftendorf in Bavaria to Salzburg, 1650 (3 var.); — and Seventh Centenary of the Battle of Lechfeld near Augsburg against the Huns, 1655.

He is probably responsible also for a number of Pilgrims' Badges and Monastic medals, in which his son Paul is said to have made a special mark, circ. 1680-1690. Prof. Domanig describes one of these Badges in his recent work (Die Deutsche Medaille) under the name of Peter Seel, but admits that it is impossible to discriminate between the works of father and son. The appended list, compiled by Zeller, from Beierlein's descriptions, comprises productions of Peter and Paul Seel and other related engravers, for the following shrines and holy places: — Adelwany (Upper Austria) (8 var.); — Altötting (Bavaria), Pilgrims' Badges, Rosenkranz medals, Badges of the Jesuits College, &c. (25 var.); — Andechs (Hl. The post of Engraver at the Salzburg mint does not appear, from the mint archives, to have been a very remunerative one; the Die-cutter was paid for piece work only, receiving a fixed salary (Wartegeld) of 30-60 Gulden, and one can hardly wonder that the Seels sought to extend the field of their activity outside their place of residence.

“Die Seelschen Medaillen sind Kleinkunststücke, sind Werke eines echt deutschen Meisters, sie sind ein getreues Abbild deutschen Kunstlebens. Ebenso stolz wie die Italiener auf ihren Abondio und Hamerani, dürfen wir Deutsche auf unseren Seel sein, den Begründer einer neuen Schule. Seel ist für das siebzehnte Jahrhundert das gewesen, was für unsere Zeit der Wiener Meister Anton Scharff war” (Pachinger, loc. cit., 1).

SEELÄNDER, NICOLAUS (Germ.). A noted Line-engraver of the first half of the eighteenth century, appointed Engraver to the Ducal Library at Hanover in 1716, in which office he remained until his death in 1744. He was born at Erfurt, and apprenticed to a locksmith, but early devoted himself to Line-engraving and Die-sinking. His first known medallic production is a Portrait-piece of Count Philipp Wilhelm von Boineburg, Statthalter of Erfurt. In 1715 he executed a large Coronation medal of George I. of Great Britain (of a silver weight of 16 oz.; fully described in Medallic Illustrations, II,  $\frac{420}{15}$ ; signed on obv. N. SEELÄNDER. FECIT)<sup>1</sup>. Dr Bodemann, in his short monograph of the artist, published in 1890, relates that Seeländer came over to England in 1715, in order to present personally his Coronation medal to the King. Although armed with a letter of introduction from Leibnitz to the Princess of Wales, he had to wait many weary months before his work could be brought to the notice of the sovereign, who after keeping it sometime caused it to be returned with a message that the medal pleased him very well, and that the Engraver was at liberty to strike replicas for sale. In the mean time the poor artist appears to have spent his all and to have been in straitened circumstances, as he complains in a letter to Leibnitz, dated 13. February 1716. In the famous philosopher, Seeländer had found a patron and friend, and to him he owed the appointment in that same year of Line-engraver to the Hanover Library, with a monthly salary of 20 Thaler 30 Mariengroschen. In that capacity he engraved the fine copper-plates (of seals, coins, monuments, relics, landscapes, etc.) of the Origines Guelficae, published after Leibnitz's death by his successors.

Seeländer cut the engravings of Treuer's Geschlechtshistorie der v. Münchhausen, and in 1743 he published: Zehen Schriften von Teutschen Müntzen mittlerer Zeiten; mit einigen historischen Erläuterungen erklärt und in dreyzehn Kupfer-Platten vorgestellt. Hannover, 1743, 4°. But his most important numismatic treatise is the Numophylacium Brunsvico-Luneburgicum sive Thesaurus numorum iconicorum et uncialium, quae Serenissimi Principes ac Duces Brunsv.-Luneb. ab initio seculi XVI. ad annum MDCCXXXVII cudi jusserunt, aeri impressa per Nicolaum Seeländer. This folio work contains engravings of 1383 coins and medals of members of the Ducal house of Brunswick-Lüneburg from the beginning of the sixteenth century to the middle of the eighteenth. Seeländer further engraved the 147 copper-plates of the catalogue of the numismatic collection of Gerhard Walter Molanus, abbot of Loccum, the well-known friend of Leibnitz, Catalogus nummorum, quos seu Ducum seu Ducissarum seu civitatum rariores colligere studio curaeque habuit Gerardus, Abbas Luccensis. The greater part of this collection was purchased by George II. and now forms part of the Duke of Cumberland's cabinet. By order of George II. 20 copies of the Seeländer copper plates were pulled off for presentation in 1754, and 30 more in 1853 by order of George V.

The compilers of Medallic Illustrations state that Seeländer filled the post of Mint-engraver at Hanover (p. 739), but this is apparently an error. Unfortunately however it is a well-known fact now that this Engraver cut a large number of dies for spurious mediaeval coins, chiefly bracteates. His forgeries number not far short of 300; some are imitations from originals, others are concoctions. In the Berlin Cabinet eight drawers full of these false bracteates exist, and they are represented also in the Cassel, Donaueschingen, Leipzig, and other official and private collections. They are distinguished by the bluish tint of the silver. Dr Buchenau states that they were chiefly produced by the repoussé process.

In Göttweih monastery are beside bracteates also Carolingian Deniers, which are undoubtedly the work of Seeländer.

Seeländer published his own forgeries amongst original coins in his "Numophylacium Brunsvico-Luneburgicum", and these remained undetected until about fifty years ago. Even Schlumberger has reproduced some of this Engraver's spurious coins as originals in his standard work: "Des Bractéates d'Allemagne", Paris, 1873 (Pl. II, 21?; VI, 67; VIII, 101, etc.). A number of Seeländer's forgeries have been described by Dr E. Bahrfeldt, Dr H. Buchenau, Leitzmann, C. F. von Posern-Klett, and other writers.

Nagler mentions a medal by Seeländer commemorating the Inauguration of the Numismatic Cabinet of the Duke of Gotha, with a bust of Frederick II., and an allegorical representation on the R.

In 1841 Seidan obtained a scholarship and again in 1842. In 1844 he is styled "Privatgraveur" and allowed to have a medal struck at the Mint of Baron von Kübeck. He then visited Italy to complete his artistic studies, returning by way of Paris in 1847. In that year he cut dies for the medals of Cornelius and Overbeck, for which he was rewarded with a prize of 1000 florins by Emperor Ferdinand I. and the large Prize medal for Art by King Frederick William IV. of Prussia. In 1848 the Engraver applied for the office of Mint-engraver at Prague, and in 1850 removed to Vienna.

R. of Medal on the Constitution of 15. March 1848.

Between 1852 and 1869 he had a large number of medals struck at the Vienna Mint. In 1866 he put his name forward as a candidate for the Directorship of the Imperial "Graveurakademie".

SEIDENSTÜCKER, ENGELHARD DANIEL (Germ.). Mint-warden to the district of Lower Saxony, circ. 1737.

SEIDLITZ, JOHANN GEORG (Germ.). Gem-engraver, and Medallist, born at Koblenz towards the end of the seventeenth century, who settled at Vienna, where in the first half of the eighteenth century he was working as Die-cutter to the Vienna medal-manufacturer Johann Förber, who owned an imperial grant to strike medals, and had branches at Ratisbon, Nuremberg, and Vienna. Nagler states that the period of his greatest activity at Vienna is comprised between 1699 and 1711, and that he was still living in 1730. He left many works, which are usually signed with his initials, or his name in full, Seidlitz.

One of this artist's best productions is the commemorative medal of the Capture of the Fortress of Landau by the Roman King in 1702 (Num. hist., 190), and Portrait-medals of the Roman Queen Amalia Wilhelmina, 1705 (on her Coronation); — Charles III., King of Spain, undated (1705) (illustrated); — Lille taken and

This Engraver signed with the initials I. G. S. dies for Thalers struck at Pressburg (Schulthess 2538, 2542). Mariette mentions his name as an Engraver of gems also.

Philipp Christoph Becker was a pupil of Seidlitz.

(or Seitz), whose period of activity is comprised in the first half of the seventeenth century.

V. Seiz's signature occurs on Thalers of Passau, 1703-1706. A large gold medal with facing bust of Max Gandolph, archbishop of Salzburg, 1668, is signed : SEIZ F., which signature occurs also on a Portrait-thaler of Johann Philip, Count Lamberg, bishop of Passau, 1703.

SELD, GEORG (Germ.). Goldsmith at Augsburg, circ. 1492-1500.

SELD HANS (or JOHANN) (Germ.). Medallist at Augsburg, who in 1521 obtained from Emperor Charles V. a permission to manufacture medals. His signature occurs on Augsburg Goldgulden and silver Batzen, and he was probably Die-cutter to the mint. His productions, says Bolzenthall, hardly place him in the rank of artists.

SELER, KASPAR (Germ.). Mint-master at Würzburg, 1556, Nördlingen, 1556, and Augsburg, 1570.

SELEUCOS (Greek). Gem-engraver of the hellenistic period, fourth century B. C. or later. The signature occurs on an amethyst intaglio of the former Carlisle collection, representing Philoctetes. M. Babelon mentions this gem, after Murray (Handbook of Greek Archaeology, p. 172), Furtwängler, and Brunn, as a genuine antique work.

A Head of Silenus, cornelian intaglio, signed CEAEYK, formerly in the Cerretani collection at Florence, is described in Stosch (p. 220, n° 1358), but the original appears to have been lost. The British Museum, and Hague Museum replicas are modern. Brunn did not admit the name as that of an artist, and even the inscription is suspected by Furtwängler, while Stephani declares the whole to be modern. A paste, in the former Stosch collection, showing a Portrait of an unknown person, and of very fine work, bears the same signature.

succeeded by the present Chief-engraver, Bartolomé Maura y Montaner.

Besides engraving dies for the regular coinage of Spain, Sellan also executed a number of commemorative and artistic medals. The coins are signed G. S., except some Pattern pieces of both Kings, which bear the signature G. SELLAN. On the occasion of the Visit of Alfonso XII. to the Madrid mint, 28. June 1875, a medal in gold, struck from the obv. die of a 100 Peseta piece, and with an inscription on the R., was issued in commemoration of the event.

The first coinage of Alfonso XIII. is dated 1888; the dies are by Sellan, and were in use until 1893, when the second coinage by Maura was issued. The following denominations exist of the 1888 coinage, either as Patterns, or Official coins: — N. 100, 20 Pesetas; R. 5, 2, 1 Peseta, 50 and 20 Centimos; Æ. 10, 5, 2 and 1 Centimos.

Among G. Sellan's medals I will only mention: Portrait-medal of King Amadeo I., The Mediterranean fleet, 1870; — Marriage Medal of Alfonso XII. and Marie de Mercedes, 1878, etc.

SELLENT (Span.). Medallist of Barcelona, early part of the nineteenth century, by whom I have seen a medal on Charles IV's visit to Barcelona, 1802.

SELLER, KASPAR (Germ.). Coining engineer at Augsburg, where he introduced in 1555 a new press and a process of his invention to mill the edges of coins. At the diet of 1559 Ferdinand I. allowed him an advance of 6000 fl. towards his expenses in the pursuit of his minting improvements.

SELLIGUE (French). Engineer, and inventor of a coining-press. A Pattern 5 Franc piece, 1833, was issued from his press, bearing on R. G. TORREZ 1833 within an oval surrounded by rays and a representation of Selligue's press on obv. (Dewamieu, Pl. LVII, 1).

SELLIUS, HEINRICH WILHELM (Germ.). Mint-master at Elbing, 1761. His issues are usually signed H.W.S.

SELLIUS, ONESIMUS C. (Roman). "Flatuarius de via sacra", probably a Coin-engraver of Roman times.

SELTHER, JOHANN (Germ.). Medallist and Coin-engraver, in the service of the Counts Palatine at Mannheim, circ. 1705-1716. Many coins and medals by this Engraver are described in Exter's Sammlung Churpf. Münzen, p. 324, 335, &c. 351, &c. 365, 373, &c. 381, &c. 386, &c. 405, 417.

SELTMANN, JOHANN CHRIST. (Germ.). Die-sinker of the early part of the nineteenth century, who worked in various towns of Southern Germany, circ. 1800-1815, and finally settled at Dresden.

SELVATICO, LUDOVICO (Ital.). Mint-master and Engraver (?) at Modena 1612-1613, Pesaro 1621, and Parma 1629. The coins struck by him for Cesare d'Este are attributed to the Engraver Giulio Fiammingo.

SELVATICO, PAOLO (Ital.). Sculptor of the second half of the sixteenth century, about whom Bolzenthall makes the following comment : "Tiraboschi hardly considers Paolo Selvatico as worthy of mention, and speaks of him as a mere official in the Mints of Modena and Parma, but this is unjust. Selvatico was long in the service of Alfonso II. d'Este at Modena; he followed later Cesare d'Este to Ferrara, and ended his life in the employment of Ranuccio I. Farnese at Parma in 1606. The beautiful dies for coins which were preserved in the Mint at Milan and Royal Cabinet, and now the property of the Estes in Modena, give him a place among the great masters of the art. He also applied himself assiduously to the study of ancient coins, and his works therefore resemble the antique in many respects. Cicognara, by reason of these dies, ascribes to him a medal of Giovanni de' Medici, the reverse of which is copied from the 'Decursio' sestertius of Nero, and bears the legend : PROPVGNATORI ITALIAE. In the portrait of Giovanni de' Medici Selvatico has given such a spirited expression, and also so much softness, that one wonders at his genius. According to Zani, Selvatico was born at Florence in 1547 and died in 1606." (Bolzenthal, p. 158).

Modern critics ignore however the name of Selvatico altogether, and no reliance can be placed on Cicognara and many of the old writers' attributions. The dies of coins, ascribed to Selvatico, are productions by other artists, under whose names they will be found enumerated.

SELVI, ANTONIO (Ital.). One of the most prolific Medallists of the first half of the eighteenth century, was born at Venice, but flourished at Florence, where he died in 1755. He was a pupil of Massimiliano Soldani-Benzi. He spent most of his life in the service of the Ducal Court of Tuscany, and executed a large number of Portrait-medals of the Grand Dukes. He is said to have visited England, and to have resided some time in this country. Cicognara (Stor. II, 414) states that he let a considerable number of medallic productions go under his name in the making of which he had no part. His medals are always cast and of poor workmanship.

Among Selvi's best known Portrait-medals I may mention : John Molesworth, 1712 (signed : A. SELVI. F.); — Richard Molesworth, 1712 (unsigned); — Sir Andrew Fountaine, 1715 (signed : A. SELVI. F.); — Professor Francis Hutcheson, undated (1694-1746); — William III. and Mary (unsigned : Med. Ill., I, <sup>689</sup>/<sub>76</sub>); — Galileo Galilei; — Count Giuseppe Prospero Giannini; — Gius. M. S. Bertini; — Ant. Cocchi (1695-† 1758), 1745; — Giov. Batt. Fagioli; — Manfredo Malaspina; — A. Vallisniesi, of Padua, 1707; — Empress Maria Theresia, undated; on her Accession (signed : A. SELVI. F.); — Francis I., 1745; on his Coronation (signed : A. S. F.); — Marc Antonio Mozzi; — Count Lor. Magalotti; — Large Portrait-medallion of the Carmelite preacher, Pater Marcus a sancto Francisco, 1748; — A. Vallinieri, Padua, 1713; — P. Valcarengi, Padua, 1752; — Large Portrait-medallion of Michael Angelo; — R. Allegorical figures of Painting, Sculpture and Architecture; — Pantaleone Dolera, undated (1710; signed A. F. SELVI. SEMAN, BARTHOLOMEW (Brit.). Gold-beater, usually called BARTHOLOMEW GOLDBETER was 'Master of the King's Mints, 10th year of Henry V., until 11th year of Henry VI., within the Tower of London, and in the town of Calais. He died in 1430, and was buried in the Church of St. John Zachary.

The indenture appointing Goldbeter as Mint-master is dated 13th February 1422. Henry V. died 31st August in that year. On that event Goldbeter was charged to hold his office as before. He petitioned the Parliament which met in November for more remuneration, speaking of his already "great and insupportable loss". That Parliament accordingly added the profit of the exchange to his office; and on the petition of the northern commons ordained that he should have a mint at York as well as at London and Calais, for gold and silver. On the 16th February, 1423, his old indenture was endorsed with a memorandum extending the renewal thereof to York and Bristol. No Bristol money of this period is known. As to York, Goldbeter worked the mint there, and retired. Complaints were made to the Parliament held at Westminster on 20th October of the same year, that Goldbeter, after having been at Noble of Henry VI., 'Annulet' Coinage.

York, and set up his mint there, had since retired, and praying that he might be compelled to return, he was ordered back.

Gold coins exist of Henry V., issued by Goldbeter, and engraved by Gilbert Vanbranburgh: they are the Noble, Half-noble, and Quarter noble of the 'annulet' type, with pierced cross mint-mark. The noble is only known by a unique specimen in the British Museum. The same denominations were issued under Henry VI., with fleur-de-lys instead of pierced cross.

The silver annulet money attributable to Henry V., with his special pierced cross, is found in every denomination, Groat, Half Groat, Penny, and Halfpenny (except perhaps, the Farthing) from both the London and Calais Mints. The Calais coins are very scarce. After the accession of Henry VI. these are common. Goldbeter was responsible for the London, Calais, and York issues of Henry VI., struck under his Mint-mastership.

‘The annulet coins with the pierced cross  of following type are found of both London and Calais, but are less common of Calais than of London. Mr. Walters attributes these coins to Henry V. and believes that they were those first struck by Bartholomew Goldbeter under the authority of the enactment of the second Parliament of the year 1421 (the 9th year of Henry V.), which met at Westminster on December 1st, and of the subsequent indenture dated February 13th, 1422. Henry V. died on the 31st of August of the same year, but there was time before his death to do a good deal, and probably no time was lost owing to the urgent need of remedying the great scarcity and bad condition of the currency, which was at that time causing much trouble and discontent among the people. Goldbeter would naturally place the Tower mint in working order before proceeding to Calais; and it would have been active longer than the latter mint at the death of Henry V., thus accounting for the London groats at least being more common than those of Calais, which are not very easy to obtain.

“As the authority conferred by the original indenture would lapse with the death of Henry V., and was not renewed by the Regency until the 16th of February following, an interval of nearly six months, it is probable that work at both the London and Calais mints ceased during this time.

“With the renewal of his authority and with its extension to York and Bristol, Goldbeter would appear to have made a new departure with fresh dies, which, while resembling very closely (although not exactly) those of the last issue, have all the pierced cross of the following type  as a mint-mark, which Mr. Walters suggests as being the distinguishing mark of the earliest coins of the reign of Henry VI. We are practically certain that the York annulet groats and half-groats were struck by authority of the renewed indenture of the first of Henry VI., and all the known specimens, together with the corresponding penny and halfpenny, have the second type of pierced cross as mint-mark." (F. A. Walters, The silver coinage of the Reign of Henry VI., 1902, pp. 5, 7-9).

The inscription is delicately engraved, without depth and in perfect harmony with the subject. The signature does not draw the attention, as becomes an artist's signature, and there is no reason therefore to consider it as the name of the owner of the gem.

SERBALDI, PIER MARIA. Vide PIER MARIA DA PESCIA supra. Engraver of coins and gems, born at Pescia (Tuscany) circ. 1455, was still living in 1522. He was appointed on 24. August 1499 Die-cutter to the Roman Zecca, on the decease of Lorenzo Corbolini. The terms of the brief of Alexander VI. conferring upon him this office for life, with the option of taking a substitute, establish his preeminence over his contemporaries. Leo X. appointed both Engravers conjointly, Pier Maria, and Vittore Camelio, on 24. June 1515, to the post of "Intagliatori delle Zecca", both for life, and with the same emoluments. Traces of payments made to Pier Maria for work done are found of the dates 1516, 1520 and 1522, and also one of 1504, for Pius III. Armand does not ascribe any of the coins of Pope Alexander VI. to Pier Maria, and considers them to be the work of an inferior artist, probably Lorenzo Corbolini. The fine 2  $\frac{1}{2}$  Zecchini, Teston, and Grosso with portraits of Leo X. are no doubt by Pier Maria and Vittore Camelio in conjunction.

SEREGNI, LUIGI (Ital.). Medallist, and Coin-engraver, born at Milan in 1819, was employed at the Mint of Venice from 2. May 1849 to 6. May 1864, and later at Milan. In 1862 he engraved a fine Portrait-medal of Garibaldi, which is a presentation-piece from the Italian colony in Peru to Doctors Auguste Nelaton and Fernando Zanetti, in gratitude for their care over the famous vanquished hero of Aspromonte. The medal was struck at the Milanese mint, in 1864. By him are also: Prize Medal of the Urbino Exhibition, 1867; — Portrait-medal of Carlo Cattaneo; — Jules Favre, 1868, etc.

SERRE, JACQUES (French). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, residing at Aïn Tagrout (Algeria). At the Universal Exhibition, 1900, he exhibited Portrait-medallions.

Milanesi suggested the attribution to this artist of a medal signed C. S. of Sixtus V., on the R. of which is St. Francis of Assisi supporting a church crumbling down.

SESEMANN, GREGORIUS (according to Nagler, GOTTFRIED) (Germ.). Mint-master at Wismar, 30. January 1675 to 26. September 1680, and Copenhagen, in the service of King Christian V., 1680-1690. He died in the early months of 1691.

Sesemann was also a Medallist and Coin-engraver. For Wismar he cut dies, amongst others, of Ducats 1676, and Sechslinge, Dreilinge, etc. undated, signed G. S. He no doubt engraved coin-dies also for the Copenhagen mint. His signature occurs on a Portrait-medal of Christian V., with R. view of Castle Frederiksberg, 1682, and another, dated 1676, commemorating the Defeat of the Dutch and Return of Cayenne to Denmark (illustrated).

SESTIUS, C. This signature occurs on a gem of the former Stosch Collection, representing a Wild Boar passant (Raspe, Tassie Gems, n° 13006).

SESTO. A family of Goldsmiths and Engravers of Venice, who were employed at the Zecca there for over a century.

Numismatists, writes M. Babelon (Revue de l'art ancien et moderne, 1908, p. 296) know that from the time of Doge Andrea Contarini's government (1368-1382) the Venetian matapans bear, abbreviated, the signatures of the artists who engraved the dies, and that the archives furnish ample information on the Engravers of the Venetian currency. These documents show that towards the end of the fourteenth century, the office of Die-cutter was filled by members of a family of goldsmiths named SESTO, who succeeded each other from father to son in this position. The earliest we are acquainted with is BERNARDO SESTO. Then followed his two sons, LORENZO SESTO and MARCO SESTO, who in a document of 1394 are styled : Incisori ai conî dall'argento. Later, at the beginning of the fifteenth century, we meet with the names of GIACOMO and ALESSANDRO SESTO; and we hear of another member of the same family, GIROLAMO SESTO, who in 1447 was no longer living. Several of these artists, whose skill may be appreciated in examining the Venetian coins, did not content themselves with applying their talent to the execution of coin-dies, the necessary uniformity of which did not give them scope to alter conventional types, but more ingenious than others, and no doubt stimulated by the curiosity which Petrarch (who died in 1374) had encouraged, they imitated Roman coins, and like the artists in the pay of the seigneurs of Carrara, engraved medals, with subjects of their own invention and inspired from the antique. We thus possess Restitution coins, after the antique, signed by Lorenzo, Marco, and Alessandro Sesto.

“L'ancienne opinion à laquelle Alfred Armand paraît être demeuré fidèle, et qui faisait de ces pièces des médailles de restitution, attribuables à une époque très postérieure à la date qu'elles portent, n'est plus défendable aujourd'hui, en présence des documents d'archives auxquels nous avons fait allusion.

l'empereur Charles IV, en l'incitant à contempler les belles effigies dont elles sont ornées. Pétrarque enfin séjourne à la cour des seigneurs de Carrare qui, précisément dès 1390, ont des médailles à leur propre effigie, dans le goût romain. Les Sesto sont en rapports avec lui; il leur donne des conseils pour la direction de leurs tendances artistiques; il les gourmande en leur proposant des modèles et les pousse à imiter l'antique. Sans doute, Pétrarque était mort depuis seize ans lors de l'apparition, en 1390, des premières médailles datées que nous possédions. Mais n'y en eût-il pas d'autres, datées ou non, qui furent exécutées antérieurement, et du vivant même de Pétrarque? Il n'y aurait rien de bien surprenant, convenons-en, à ce qu'un avenir, prochain peut-être, réponde affirmativement à cette préoccupation de notre esprit, toujours curieux de sonder de plus en plus la genèse des choses.

Capture of Carrara by Francesco II.

C. von Fabriczy thus refers to the Sesti (Italian Medals, pp. 10, 11, 72): “Of the same period as the medals of the Carraras we also possess three medal-like struck proofs, so-called “essais” or “testoni” of die-engravers, the work of a Venetian family of die-engravers, the Sesti, with their names and dates (1393 and 1417). The obverses are direct copies of the imperial coins of Galba and of a Greek coin (Alexander the Great or Antiochus of Syria); on the reverse are a standing figure (Venetia?) and a mythological scene (the Rape of Persephone, or the Rescue of Andromeda). These are, to an even greater degree than the medals of the Carraras, direct and conscious imitations of Roman imperial medallions. Since they possess a general striking similarity of style to the Carrara medallions, these latter medals have lately been pronounced to be probably works of the Sesto family, perhaps of that same Marco who in 1393 produced the proof bearing the bust of Galba.”

Mr. G. F. Hill in a recent article contributed to the Burlington Magazine (February 1911) on “Classical Influence on the Italian Medal”, which subject he dealt with also in an admirable address before the ‘Royal Numismatic Society’ at the January 1911 meeting, also refers to the Carrara medals. He observes that “the obverses of these medals of the two members of the Carrara family (one is illustrated) are most distinctly inspired by Roman sestertii. Even the size of the original is adhered to. The reverse, however, is as old-fashioned as possible; obviously no attempt has been made to improve on the ordinary moneyer’s style. Nothing could illustrate better the struggle between classical and Gothic influence. That the date inscribed on these little pieces, commemorating the capture of Carrara by Francesco II, is the date about which they were made, is proved by a description of one of them in the Duc de Berry’s inventories.”

“These then, are the most remarkable among the precursors of the Renaissance medal proper. The Carrara pieces, like the coins of Frederick II, however, remained without influence on the development of the medal. Even in the purely external matter of technique they had no influence; nearly all the medals worth consideration for the next hundred years are cast, not struck from dies. That is to say, the medallist makes his model in wax instead of sinking his design with the graver in a metal die. Obviously the wax process gave to the medallic art in its infancy just that freedom from the old traditions of die-engraving which was necessary for its healthy development.”

SESTO, ALESSANDRO (Ital.). Die-cutter and Medallist at the Mint of Venice, in the early part of the fifteenth century. A medal by him is signed : ALESANDER SEXSTO INTAIATOR EN MONETA ME FECIT 1417, and bears on obv. a bust, in which some have recognized a portrait of Alexander the Great, and others, amongst them, Schlosser, that of Antiochus V. of Syria, copied from a tetradrachm.

SESTO, BERNARDO (Ital.). The first Engraver of the name whom we know as having been employed in the cutting of coin-dies at the Mint of Venice, in the latter part of the fourteenth century and beginning of the fifteenth. He is styled : Intagliatore dei conî dell' oro.

SESTO, BERNARDO (Ital.). Son of Luca S.; appointed Assistant-engraver at the Mint of Venice, 27. October 1483.

SESTO, GIROLAMO (Ital.). Die-cutter at the Mint of Venice; was no longer living in 1447.

SESTO, LORENZO (Ital.). Son of Bernardo Sesto, and Die-cutter at the Mint of Venice, towards the end of the fourteenth century and beginning of the fifteenth (from March 1394, and still in office in 1411). He also executed imitations of ancient coins; one of Galba bears the legend : LAVRENTI SESTO ME FECIT.

SESTO, LUCA (Ital.). Die-cutter at the Mint of Venice; appointed before 1447, and thirty years later, 1483, still in office, and requesting the Council of Ten to adjoin him his son Bernardo as assistant. In 1447 he was commissioned, in conjunction with Alessandro Leopardi, to execute the image of the Redeemer for the die of the Ducat. In 1485, on the accession of Marco Barbarigo, he was probably no longer living, and Camelio was Chief-engraver at the Zecca.

SESTO, MARCO (Ital.). Son of Bernardo, and brother of Lorenzo Sesto; also a Die-cutter at the Mint of Venice, towards the end of the fourteenth century and beginning of the fifteenth. He also engraved dies for medals and copies of antique coins. One of these, is thus described by M. Babelon :

+ MARCUS. SESTO ME. FECIT. V. (Marcus Sesto me fecit, Venetia). Bust of the Emperor Galba.

R. PAX. TIBI. VENETIA. Allegorical figure of Venice, standing, holding standard of St. Mark; at her feet, a wheel; in the field, the date 1393.

SETTELE, JOHANN MICHAEL (Austr.). Die-engraver at the Vienna Mint, 1765.

SETTELE, MATTHIAS (Austr.). Die-engraver ; born in 1746, died at Vienna on 16. September 1808. He was appointed at the Vienna Mint on 23. March 1764, first as an apprentice, and later as Engraver. On 30. September 1808, an entry in the Mint Records states that the first Assistant-engraver Matthias Settele was no longer living.

SETZER, KONRAD (Germ.). Contractor of the Mint at Ratisbon, 1357.

SEUD, P. (Ital.) Schlickeysen-Pallmann mention this signature as that of an Engraver at Rome, 1705. This is a misreading for F. SEVO.

SEVER, ANTON (Austr.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist. I have seen by him a Portrait-medal of the poet Preseren.

SEVERO DA RAVENNA (Ital.). Gem-engraver of the sixteenth century. Mariette mentions his name, after Pomponius Gauricus, who sets this artist above all others, and styles him sculptor, sculptor, caelator. King remarks : "Severo is probably the pupil of Marc-Antonio who engraved the copper plates with the monogram S.R."

The inscription SEVERUS, probably the owner's name, occurs on a gem in plasma, Hygiea offering a bowl to a serpent. According to Raspe the inscription is CELIC SEVERI on one stone, and on another H. CEYHPOY.

SEWARD, J. S. (Brit.). Engraver of the latter part of the eighteenth century, who resided at Lancaster. His signature occurs on a Medal commemorating the Building of the Manchester Infirmary and Lunatic Hospital, 1796, and on another on the Rebuilding of the Liverpool Royal Exchange, burned in 1798.

SEWELL (Amer.). Die-sinker of New York, of Irish origin, by whom is a Fenian Brotherhood Badge, 1866, struck for presentation to the members of the association.

The Fenian Brotherhood was an Irish political organisation having for its object the overthrow of English rule in Ireland and the establishment of a Republic there. The movement was initiated in the United States soon after the great famine in Ireland of 1846-47, which, together with the harsh exactions of the landlords, compelled many Irishmen to emigrate from their island with a deeply-rooted sense of injustice and hatred of the English. The Fenians organised themselves so far on the model of a republic, having a senate at the head, with a virtual president called the "head-centre", and various "circles" established in many parts of the U. S. They collected funds and engaged in military drill, and sent agents to Ireland and England. An invasion of Canada in 1866 and a rising at home in 1867 proved abortive, as also the attack on Clerkenwell prison in the same year. Another attempt on Canada in 1871 and the formation of the Skirmishing Fund for the use of the Dynamitards and the institution of the Clan-na-Gael leading to the "Invicibles", and the Phoenix Park murders (1882) are later manifestations of this movement. The Home Rule and Land League movements practically superseded the Fenian. The name is taken from an ancient military organisation called the Fionna Eirinn, said to have been instituted in Ireland in 300 B.C.

He entered the Treasury in 1867, and had a long period of service as private secretary to various distinguished personages, including "Bob" Lowe, Lord F. Cavendish, and Mr. Gladstone. The last-named made him a Commissioner of Customs. In 1890 he became Deputy Chairman of the Board, and in 1894 was transferred to the Mint.

He died on Wednesday, June 25th, 1902, and was buried at North Creak, Norfolk.

SEYNTLOWE, GILES (Brit.). Also SEYNCHLOWE. Comptroller of the Mint of Calais, appointed in 1437. In 1444 he resigned his patent into Chancery, and the King granted him a new one. He was again appointed in 1452.

SHAA (or SHAW), SIR EDMUND (Brit.). “ Son of John Shaa, of Dronkenfeld, Chester, Goldsmith and Engraver to the Royal Mint, London, in 1462. He was chosen Sheriff in 1474, and Lord Mayor 1482-3, Warden of the Company in 1474. At the Coronation of Richard III., which took place during his mayoralty, he attended as cup-bearer with great pomp, and his claim to this honour was formally allowed and put on record. He founded and endowed a free school at Stockport, in Cheshire, in the year 1487. His will contains a bequest to the goldsmiths to support this school. He also directs “ 16 rings of fine gold to be graven with the well of pitie, the well of mercie, and the well of everlasting life”, and to be given to his friends.

Noble of Edward IV.

Anno 2 of Edward IV. (1461) Edmund Shaa was appointed Engraver for life of the London and Calais Mints, with a salary of 20 l. per annum. In 1465 a writ directed to the warden of exchange and money in the Tower of London, and in Calais, dated in the fifth year of the king, recited to above appointment, and ordered seven shillings to be paid to Shaa, annually, for making and engraving one dozen of irons, to be made by him every year during his life. The writ of 1465 respecting Shaa was renewed in the last year of Edward IV. (1482 or 1483).

In all probability many of the dies for the London and Calais issues of Edward IV. were engraved by Edmund Shaw. The coinage of that reign comprises: A. I. Issue (1464 ?), Noble; — II. Issue (1465-1470), Rose Noble or Ryal, Half-Rose Noble, Quarter Rose Noble, and Angel; — III. Issue (1471-1483), Angel and Half Angel. — R. I. Issue (1461-1464), Groat, Half-Groat, Penny, Half-penny, and Farthing; heavy coinage; — II. Issue (1464-1483), same denominations; light coinage.

SHAA (or SHAW), SIR JOHN (Brit.). Goldsmith, Warden to the Mint 1492-97, of Wood street, Cheapside, Engraver to the Mint in 1483, was Mayor in 1501-2, probably the son of Sir Edmund. In the privy purse expenses of Henry VII. (1497) we find: "To Master Shaa for a George of Diamants iiij li iiij sh". Also "To John Shaa for iij rings of gold viij li". Sir John Shaw was knighted on the field at Bosworth. The first Lord Mayor's feast in the present Guildhall was given by Sir John Shaw. He was the first mayor who caused the Aldermen to accompany him on horseback to the water side to take barge for Westminster.

An entry in Ruding (p. 34) gives the names of John Shaa and Bartholomew Rede, Operarii Monete, anni 10-13 of Henri VII. Under Richard III., he is the only Engraver mentioned.

Angel of Henry VII.

The coinage of Richard III. for which Shaa was responsible consists of: A. Angel and Half-Angel; Æ. Groat, Half-Groat, Penny, and Halfpenny.

Shaa no doubt engraved also dies for Henry VII.'s coins.

In Plantagenet times, and probably later, dies were not engraved, as so many numismatists imagine, but produced by striking prepared punches, each representing a portion of the design, into the metal — a very simple and rapid process.

SHANNON, C. H. (Brit.). Contemporary Sculptor, and a former Member of the London Society of Medallists, at the Exhibition of which in 1901 he showed a number of drawings for medallions.

SHARINGTON (or SHERINGTON) SIR WILLIAM (Brit.) “Vice-treasurer of the Mint at Bristol, born about 1495, came of an old Norfolk family, and was the eldest son of Thomas Sherington († 1527?) and his wife Catherine, daughter of William Picton of Little Bentley, Essex (Blomefield, Norfolk, X, 201-3). He entered the service of Sir Francis Bryan, and subsequently became page of the king’s robes. In 1540 he bought the dissolved Lacock Abbey, Wiltshire, for 783 l., and on 3. May 1546 he became vice-treasurer of the mint at Bristol (Cal. State Papers, Dom. 1547-1581, p. 3). He was made knight of the Bath at the coronation of Edward VI. on 15. February 1546-7. His position at the mint he used to perpetrate extensive frauds. In April 1547 the council forbade the coining of any more ‘testons’ or shillings, two-thirds of which were alloy. Sharnington nevertheless bought up large quantities of church plate from the Somerset villagers, and during May, June, and July, coined it into testons. He also made over 4,000 l. in three years by shearing and clipping coins, and to conceal his frauds he made false copies of the books of the mint and destroyed the originals. Fearing discovery, he entered into the plots of Thomas Seymour, baron Seymour of Sudeley, who promised to protect him. Sharnington in return lent Seymour money and put the mint at Bristol at his disposal; he also undertook to coin 10,000 l. to be devoted to raising adherents for the admiral. With part of his ill-gotten fortune he purchased of the king Winterbourne, Aubrey, Charlton, and other manors, chiefly in Wiltshire, for 2,808 l. But his frauds and Seymour’s plots soon came to the knowledge of the government. On 6. January 1548-9 Lacock Abbey was searched by the council’s agents, and on 19. January Sharnington was arrested. He was examined several times in the Tower during January and February; at first he denied his frauds and all knowledge of Seymour’s designs, but made full confessions on 2., 11., and 16. February. A bill for his attainder passed all its stages in both houses of parliament between 11. February and 7. March. Seymour’s connivance at Sharnington’s frauds was made one of the counts in his indictment (Cobbett, State Trials, I, 501-2); but Sharnington, who threw himself on the king’s mercy, was pardoned, and an act restoring him in blood was passed, 30. December 1549 — 13. January 1550.

“In the following April he was again in employment, being commissioned to go to Calais and receive an instalment of the French purchase-money for Boulogne. He was also able to buy back his forfeited estates for 12,000 l.; he seems in addition to have made a voluntary restitution of some property to the king, and Latimer, in a sermon preached before the king in the same year, extolled his example and described him as ‘an honest gentleman and one that God loveth' (Frutefull Sermons, 1575, f. 115 b.). In 1552 he served as sheriff of Wiltshire. He died in 1553 (Acts of the Privy Council, 1552-4, p. 370). His portrait among the Holbein drawings in the royal library, Windsor Castle (Cat. Tudor Exhib., p. 148), has been engraved by Dalton (Bromley, p. 11). He married (1) Ursula, natural daughter of John Bouchier, second baron Berners ; (2) Eleanor, daughter of William Walsingham ; (3) Grace, daughter of one Farington of Devonshire, and widow of Robert Pager, alderman of London. He left no issue, and was succeeded in his estates by his brother Henry." (Lee, Dict. Nat. Biog., vol. LI, pp. 399-400).

HENRY VIII. A. Sovereign ; Æ. Groat, Half Groat (Third Coinage).

A. Sovereign ; Crown, Half-Crown ; Æ. Shilling, Groat (Fourth Coinage).

A. Sovereign, Crown, Half-Crown ; Æ. Groat (Fifth Coinage).
Irish. Æ. Sixpences of 37th and 38th years of reign.

The base money of Bristol is very plentiful.

EDWARD VI. A. Half-Sovereign, bearing his own portrait, but his father's name (First Coinage).

Bristol Sovereign of Henry VIII.

Chaffers, Gilda Aurifabrorum, p. 47, gives the following data : 1548-50. — Sir William Sharrington, of Durham House, Master of the Mint 3rd, 4th, and 5th Edward VI., and Vice-Treasurer of the Mint at Bristol, was indicted before the Lord Mayor, and convicted on his own confession of having counterfeited, in the Mint at Bristol, 12,000 pounds of coins resembling the Testoons, without any warrant from the King, and against his Royal prohibition ; also of having defrauded the King in clippings and shearing of the coins, making the same thereby too light, and converting the same to his own profit, to the amount of £4,000 at the least; and for falsifying the indentures and books. He was attained of treason, and all his lands, etc. forfeited. This counterfeiting of the money was supposed to have been done at the instigation of the King's uncle, the Protector, Sir Thomas Seymour, the Lord Admiral, to enable him to carry on his treacherous designs. Sharrington received a pardon under the great seal in 3rd Edward VI., and was afterwards restored in blood by an Act passed 3rd and 4th Edward VI. His house in Mark Lane, a stately mansion, was bestowed by the King on Henry, Earl of Arundel, who made it his residence'.

SHARPE, JOHN (Brit.). Die-engraver at the Royal Mint, London, anni 1-4, 1509-1514 (according to Ruding), 1509-1547 (according to Schlickeysen). Ruding gives a second Engraver, DEMAIRE, as having been employed at the Royal Mint under that reign. It is therefore difficult to ascertain the work of either artist.

The following denominations were issued under Henry VIII : Æ. Double Sovereign, Sovereign, Half-Sovereign, Crown, Rose Crown (3 specimens known), Half-Crown, Ryal or Rose Noble, Angel, Half-Angel, Quarter Angel, George Noble, and Half-George Noble (unique; illustrated). — ℞. Shilling or Teston, Groat, Half-Groat, Penny, Halfpenny, and Farthing.

Half-George Noble of Henry VIII.

The Half-George Noble which is now in Lieut.-Col. H. Leslie Ellis's Collection was thus described in the Murdoch Sale Catalogue, 1903 (lot 418). It brought £495 at the Sale.

HALF GEORGE NOBLE, mm. rose on both sides, obv. hENRIC'x D'G'R'AGL' Z + FRA'x DNS'x hYBE', type as the George Nobles with rose upon the ship's mast and h K at sides, but the gallery of the vessel is decorated with circular ornaments instead of the usual trellis pattern seen on the three preceding coins; ℞. x TALI'x DICA'x SIG' MES'x FLVCTVARI'x NEQT, St. George on horseback piercing the dragon, wt. 36 grs., in almost perfect preservation, unique.

* From the Shepherd (lot 211) and Montagu (lot 719, £ 275) collections. The following account of this remarkable coin is culled from the Montagu sale catalogue, p. 99 : “ This very interesting and unique coin was brought from Paris many years ago by Mr. Curt, the dealer, who sold it to the Rev. E. J. Shepherd for £ 70; at the latter’s sale it was purchased by Mr. Montagu for £ 255. It is evident from the style of lettering of the inscriptions, which are in Roman characters, that this coin belongs to a later date than the George Nobles. The letter K on the reverse is therefore probably the initial of Katherine Howard or Katheneri Parr, and not of Katherine of Aragon as on the Nobles. This would partly account for the great rarity of this coin, which may be a pattern ”.

The Rose Crown is another rarity of the reign of Henry VIII. A specimen was sold at Messrs. Sotheby Wilkinson & Hodge, June 5, 1907, and fetched £ 220. It was thus described in the Sale Catalogue : —

Obv. A shield crowned bearing the arms of England and France quarterly, all within two inner circles, the innermost one linear, the outer dotted, both pierced above by the ball and cross on top of the crown, mm. a rose, legend HENRIC’8 X DEI X GRA’ X REX X AGL’ X Z X FRA’; R. A full-blown single rose of five petals, surrounding it four fleurs-de-lys arranged crossways, between these a lion passant guardant and the letter h crowned, placed alternately, all within inner circles as on the obverse, mm. a rose, legend HENRIC’ RV TILANS X ROSA X SINE X SPINA, the letters on both sides in Roman characters, except the letter h, the numeral Arabic.

Henry VIII., Crown of the Rose.

* The coin is of the same general type and appearance as the contemporary French Crown of the Sun. It weighs 51 grains. The directions for making the coin and the reason of its issue, are given in Ruding, as well as the cause of its withdrawal. Money had been steadily removed from this country to the continent, in consequence of its superior value, and in spite of repeated requests made by Henry to various continental monarchs, till in 1526 matters had reached such a pass, that legislation was necessary. On July 24th a writ was issued to Wolsey "commanding him to carry into effect the king's design of reducing his money to the standard of foreign coins, and to determine the rate, value, fineness, lay, standard and print as by him and the Council should be thought requisite". On August 22nd following, a proclamation was made and it was ordained "that all persons should receive the Crown of Gold of the Sun, and all other crowns of the same weight and fineness for four shillings and sixpence being of full weight, etc. And whereas the Crown of the Sun was a strange coin, the King with the advice of his Council, thought fit that there should be a piece of gold of his own coin of like fineness, weight and goodness as the said Crown of the Sun to be called the Crown of the Rose, and to be current for four shillings and sixpence".

On the 5th of November in the same year, an additional value was placed upon the current coin by proclamation, and provision was made for the striking of the George Noble and Half George Noble.

Snelling, 1763, gives a picture of a Crown of the Rose with a lion mint-mark and some differences in the lettering. It was evidently copied from a picture, and not known as the Crown of the Rose, as Snelling's note says: We constantly meet with this coin in all the placarts publish'd in the Low-countries between anno 1546 and 1650, and yet we esteem it the rarest piece minted by this King, nor have we ever had the pleasure of seeing one of them". Ruding, 1841, copying Snelling's picture, notes this coin is not now known in any collection. Kenyon, 1888, says the Crown of the Rose mentioned in the Proclamation of the 22nd of August is not known, and was probably never struck.

Another interesting and rare coin of the reign of Henry VIII., is the Pattern crown in silver, a specimen of which brought £128 at the Murdoch Sale, 1903, lot 454, and £79 at the Wakley Sale, 1909, lot 1.

* This extraordinary pattern (whether coin or medal being a disputed point) is one of the rarest in the English series and the finest of the only two specimens which are known, the other being purchased at the Cuff sale (£ 140) for the British Museum. This is from the Thomas (lot 271, £ 130), Wigan (£ 165), Brice, Montagu (1888, lot 186, £ 106), and Moon (lot 104, £ 107) collections.

Specimens of this coin exist in the British Museum, St. Petersburg Museum, Bodleian Library (said to be the only genuine one); Lord Pembroke had one; and in our times the late R. A. Hoblyn, and J. E. T. Loveday possessed each a specimen (Vide Loveday, The Henry VIII. Medal or Pattern Crown, The British Numismatic Journal, I, pp. 137-147).

The late Mr. J. G. Murdoch also possessed Patterns of the Double Sovereign, first coinage (lot 452, £ 170) and Angel (lot 453, £ 39.10.0). Vide Sale Catalogue, March, 1903.

He issued Pennies of Richard III. for Durham, with an S on King's breast, and others also of Henry VII.

SHIELLEC, TOBIAS. Vide SCHIELLE or SCHILLE supra.

SHORE, GENERAL SIR JOHN (Brit.). 1751-1834. Governor-general of India, 1793-1798. He went to India in 1768, was created a baronet in 1792, and an Irish peer in 1798. His name occurs on the gold coin or medal illustrated in N.C. vol. IX col. 4395 and described fully by Mr. W. J. Webster.

This curious and interesting piece is in reality a "Nisar" or Presentation Coin struck at Moorshedabad for the retiring Governor-general Sir John Shore, Bart. (afterwards Lord Teignmouth) who vacated his high office in 1797. It is also assumed and perhaps with some reason to be a pattern piece for a suggested coinage of triple Muhrs, as its weight (576 grs.) is sufficiently close to that of three "old standard" Muhrs at 190 grs each, to justify this assumption.

However, whether this coinage was intended or not, at any rate it was not carried into effect by Sir John Shore's successor in the Governor-generalship.

SHORTHOUSE, E. (Brit.). A well-known Collector of Coins and Tokens of the British and United States of North America series, whose name is mentioned in Montagu's Copper Coins, &c. as the originator of restrikes of the 10 Cent piece of Marrian and Gausby's decimal coinage.

Mr. Shorthouse has kindly given me the following information concerning the restrikes issued by him, in a letter dated 1. January 1909: "Showing a member or two of the British Association, then meeting in Birmingham, round the city, I made the acquaintance of a well-known, highly respected die-sinker, the late Mr. Joseph Moore, a portrait of whom is in our City Museum. Taken round his place he mentioned having submitted to our Government certain designs for the 1860 bronze coinage. I asked, if amongst the stacks of old dies in his warehouse, these dies could be sought for. They were eventually found, excepting one, with the head of Victoria, crowned. They were fairly clean, but a flaw from rust always serves to distinguish the restrikes from the originals, which were struck in 1860, and of which a few (5 or 6) are in my "reserve" coin collection. I took my solicitor, the late Mr. E. C. Newey, to see the 9 pieces struck in (1) silver, (2) bronze, (3) copper, unbronzed, and (4) white metal. We then saw the dies placed on a grinding stone and destroyed, and they were then placed with Messrs Spink. Nine specimens of each, to my knowledge, alone exist. I only have 5 or 6 in my reserve collection. A set of the white medal specimens I gave Messrs Spink at a sale at Messrs Sotheby's, also another I presented to Mr. J. Verity.

"The second of the only two cases of "discovered dies" I have ever had to do with or know anything whatever about was shortly after the above. This was the discovery of the rusted spoilt dies of the Marrian and Gausby's Decimal Coinage. The 10 Cent was the only die possible to be used. The rest were utterly ruined. Again Mr. E. C. Newey the solicitor, and I, saw nine each struck of these 10 Cents, but on a very thick blank, so that they are at once distinguished from the originals. We had nine each struck in (1) silver, (2) bronze, and (3) copper, as before".

SHREVE & CO (Amer.). Jewellers and Die-sinkers of San Francisco. Their name occurs on the reverse of a Portrait-medal of Dr Enno Saunder, of St. Louis (Amer. Journ. Num., 1521).

In 1825 he went to Paris, when he was fortunate in obtaining employment with Roqueby, Engraver to King Charles X. He resided for two years in the French capital, and became an efficient craftsman, especially on the engraving of seals, stamps, reliefs for printing, etc.

SILVA, DOMINGOS JOSÉ DA (Portug.). Medallist of the end of the eighteenth century and early part of the nineteenth; he studied drawing and engraving first under his brother Simão Francisco dos Santos, and at the school of engraving of Arco do Cego (Lisbon). In 1804 he was working with Bartolozzi, the famous Florentine artist who was then domiciled in Lisbon. His speciality was line-engraving. On 6. March 1830 he was entrusted with the finishing of dies for a 7500 Reis piece, which his brother Simão Francisco dos Santos was prevented by death from completing. Thereupon he was appointed Engraver at a yearly salary of 240 Milreis, with the obligation of maintaining two assistant-engravers. Silva executed a number of dies for the coinage of D. Miguel (1828-1833), which shew a remarkable perfection in the design, and uncommon delicacy and fineness in the engraving. He resigned his office of Engraver at the Mint in 1833, and was named Professor of engraving at the Fine Arts Academy of Lisbon, in which city he died not many years later at a fairly advanced age.

He then obtained a grant from his government to complete his studies at Geneva (Switzerland) and entered the classes of sculpture of the Ecole des Arts Industriels of that city, where he was rewarded with the Diploma of that Institute. Among his professors I may mention Georges Hantz and Charles Richard. From Geneva he returned to Paris, was admitted at the Ecole des Beaux Arts, in the workshop of the master, J. C. Chaplain. During his two years' stay in the French capital he won the first distinctions each year and the special recommendation of the famous Medallist. In 1906 he returned to Lisbon, and has since devoted himself to the medallic art.

Most of the artist's productions are Portrait-medallions and Plaquettes, which not being in the market are little known. It is therefore difficult to compile a list of his works, but the medals reproduced here will give a good idea of his talent and versatility.

The portraits of M.A.F.S. de Salazar-Moscoso and his consort and that of M<sup>lle</sup> Maria José Arroyo are fine examples of his workmanship.

To João da Silva and Símões de Almeida Sobrinho belong the glory of having introduced into Portugal the modern art of the medal. They mark an epoch in the history of medallic art in Portugal.

SILVA, JOSÉ SERGIO DE CARVALHO E (Portug.). Contemporary Medallist and Engraver, born at Evora, 9. September 1856. He studied at the Lisbon Academy of Fine Arts from 1870 to 1873, and later worked for some time with his father, the ivory carver Francisco Ignacio das Neves e Silva. This particular branch of art not being any longer in much demand, he turned his attention to engraving steel-dies for decorations and took commissions from Joaquim Augusto da Costa. In 1886 he was admitted at the Lisbon Mint as student of medal-engraving. On the invitation of the famous French engraver Mouchon, who had recognized his ability, Silva accepted employment with him at Paris; but in 1898, the Portuguese engraver obtained a post at the Lisbon Mint.

Silva also worked for the Die-sinking establishment of Frederico Gaspar da Costa.

SIMON, ABRAHAM (Brit.). (1622?-1692?) Modeller in wax, and Medallist, born about 1622, brother of Thomas Simon, and one of the sons of Peter and Anne Simon. "He was educated" (states Portrait of Abraham Simon, by Stuart.

Wroth) "with a view to the church, but, being a skilful modeller in wax, he devoted himself to art. During a visit to Sweden

he made portraits in wax of several eminent persons, and was given a position at the court of Queen Christina, who employed him as her agent in procuring works of art, and presented him with a gold medal and chain. In his wax-model portrait of himself he appears wearing this decoration, and Horace Walpole said he was supposed to have been in love with the queen. He attended her on her visit to Louis XIII., and, on account of his odd appearance, was arrested as a suspicious person while trying to model the king from the gallery of the royal chapel. He subsequently worked for some time in Holland.

“He came to England in 1642 or later, and for several years was much employed in making medals and wax models of leading parliamentarians and others. He also made a large number of wax models (some now in the British Museum) for the portrait medals executed by his brother, Thomas Simon. His own medals are cast and chased, and are signed A. S. They are graceful and simple in treatment, but, being usually in low relief and of small module, seem occasionally deficient in vigour.

“After the Restoration, Simon modelled the portrait of Charles II. for the medal of the “Royal Oak” at the price of one hundred “broads”. The Duke of York afterwards had his portrait done by him, but only proposed to pay him fifty ‘broads’. Simon then took up the wax model, and in the duke’s presence deliberately defaced it by squeezing it together. By this conduct he lost favour at court, and other sitters complained of his impatience when they offered any criticism of his work. In the later years of his life he seems to have received no further commissions, and he died in obscurity, and perhaps in poverty, about 1692. He was married, and had two daughters named Anne and Judith.

“Simon’s portrait was painted by Sir Peter Lely and Sir Godfrey Kneller. Of Lely’s portrait there is a mezzotint by Blooteling. There is, in the British Museum, a portrait in wax of Simon by himself, and from this original a chased medal was made by Stuart cir. 1750. Simon was a little man, ‘of a primitive philosophic aspect’, and always wore his hair and beard long. His eccentric dress excited derision in the street, but he was an excellent artist, and a man of the same independent character as Benedetto Pistrucci. Evelyn (Diary, 8. June 1653) calls him ‘a virtuoso fantastical Simons (sic), who had the talent of embossing so to ye life’. (Warwick Wroth, Dict. Nat. Biog., LII, p. 264).

Abraham Simon’s principal Portrait-medals are the following : Earl of Loudoun, 1645 (Med. Ill., I, <sup>324</sup>/<sub>157</sub>); — William Pope, 1645 (*Med. “It is difficult” (says Miss Helen Farquhar) “to say exactly how much Thomas Simon was indebted to the eccentric and clever Abraham for the designs of some of his medals and coins; although the signature T. S. appears on pieces which may have been the joint work of the two brothers, this might be because of Thomas’s official position; that either was capable of working alone is abundantly proved, but it is said that Abraham often made the original wax sketch, Thomas the finished portrait from it, Abraham excelling in portraiture, Thomas above all men in die-sinking, engraving, and chasing. We know that Abraham was in the habit of carrying in his pocket a small piece of wax-covered glass, and whenever a face struck his fancy, he hastily modelled a sketch.” (Portraiture of the Stuarts on the Royalist Badges, Brit. Num. Journ., II, 285).

SIMON, DÉSIRÉ (French). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, born at Bar-le-Duc (Meuse); pupil of Claudius Marioton. He has exhibited at the Paris Salon: 1904. Bronze Plaque of St. John the Baptist; — 1907. Æ. gilt Portrait-medal of Jean Dubois, etc.

SIMON, F. (French). Line-engraver and Die-sinker of the second half of the nineteenth century. He engraved the ‘Bons’ of the Société générale of 1, 2 and 5 Francs, issued on 18. November 1871.

SIMON, JEAN HENRI (French). Gem-engraver and Medallist, born at Brussels, 28. October 1752, where he died, 12. March 1834. According to M. Babelon, he was a great-grandson of Thomas Simon. He was taught engraving by his father, Jacob Simon, who also did very good work. In 1767 we find the youthful artist already in the service of Prince Charles of Lorraine. Eight years later he visited Paris, where on the recommendation of his patron, Prince de Ligne, he obtained an appointment of gem-engraver to the Duke of Chartres, who later, as Duke of Orleans, continued to favour him, and granted him a yearly allowance of 1000 Francs.

Baron Breteuil having sold his cabinet of gems to the Czarina Catherine II. of Russia, it was found that a two-strata cameo, representing a Tiger reclining, was missing. Several engravers were consulted as to replacing this gem, but none would undertake to do the work in a less period than three months. Simon successfully completed it within three days, and so much enhanced his reputation thereby that Louis XVI. granted him the title of Engraver to the King, with apartments in the Louvre gallery.

In order to escape the troubles of the French Revolution he enlisted in the army under Dumouriez and did service as captain in the light infantry. He was wounded several times, and returned to Paris, later on crossing over to Spain, where he refused an offer of Ferdinand VII. to open a school of engraving with a yearly salary of 30.000 reals. On his return to France, he was appointed Professor of gem-engraving to the Institute for Deaf and Dumb. Napoleon favoured him with his patronage, and the Empress Josephine made him "Graveur du conseil du sceau des titres". In 1813, he was decorated with the Legion of Honour for an act of bravery.

In the early part of 1816 he went back to Brussels, and was appointed Engraver of gems and medals to the Royal College of the Low-Countries, and on 4. August 1817 Engraver to the King. The Academy of Fine Arts of Antwerp elected him a member in the following December.

On the outbreak of the 1830 Revolution at Brussels he took the command of a company of Civic guards.

Two years later, after a long and painful illness, borne with stoic resignation, he ended his career at the age of 82. He was buried with military honours, and the Chief Rabbi pronounced his funeral oration.

J. H. Simon's most important work is his Series of medals of illustrious men of the Low-Countries, "Galerie métallique des hommes qui ont illustré les Pays-Bas", on which he spent six years of arduous labour. This series consists of 100 medals.

It cannot be said that Simon acquired a great reputation as an artist, but he was certainly a clever gem-engraver, and is praised as such.

At the Salon of 1799, Chevalier Jean Henri Simon, who was then residing at the Palais-Egalité, n° 88, exhibited the following gems : Head of Demosthenes, in relief on agate-onyx ; — Female head, in relief on agate-onyx ; — Marine Love, in relief on sardonix ; — Intaglio in cornelian representing Apollo drawn in chariot by two horses ; — Heads of Aspasia and Pericles, in relief on chalcedony.

In 1800, the artist sent for exhibition at the Salon a Portrait of the First Consul, engraved in cornelian, and several other works, in 1801, 1810 and 1812. M. Babelon adds that Simon is no doubt the engraver of a fine Portrait-gem of Joseph II., signed S.

The Hague Museum preserves a Bust of Homer, in cornelian, and Portrait-cameos of King William I. of the Netherlands, and his

SIMON, JEAN MARIE AMABLE HENRI (French). Son of the last, Jean Henri S., and also a Gem-engraver, was born at Paris on 28. January 1788, and resided a very long time at Brussels. He was a chevalier of the Legion of Honour. Under the Restoration and Louis Philippe's reign, he was entrusted with numerous official orders. He thus engraved in cornelian the portraits of Charles X., Duke of Angoulême, Duke of Berry, Louis Philippe, and numerous Princes and Princesses of the French royal family. But, remarks M. Babelon, " he did not add to the artistic reputation of his ancestors, and although his work is careful and consciencious, it is difficult to meet with works of art so devoid of charm and life ".

This artist made the following exhibits at the Paris Salon: 1819. Louis XVIII., cornelian ; — Alexander I. of Russia, cornelian ; — Portrait of a Lady, cornelian ; — Bust of Aesculapius, cornelian ; — Cupid, cornelian ; — Arms of the Duke of Treviso, marshal of France, cornelian ; — 1822. Bust of Louis XVIII., wax ; — Duke and Duchess of Berry, and Duke of Bordeaux, gem ; — Duke of Berry, engraved stone ; — Duchess of Orleans, cornelian ; — Prince

SIMON, H. (French). This Engraver's signature occurs on the reverse of a medal commemorating the Epidemic of typhus at Maasluis, 1865.

SIMON, HIRSCH (Germ.). A Jew who under Frederick III. contracted for the working of the Mint of Breslau, 1779.

SIMON, JOSSE (French). Mint-master at Angers from 26. November 1331 to 1. December 1333. He officiated in conjunction with Poillevillain.

SIMON, MAYER (French). Better known as SIMON DE PARIS, a brother of Jean Henri Simon, son of Jacob, and great grandson of the famous British artist, Thomas S., was born at Brussels in 1746 and died at Paris on 17. March 1821. He was a pupil of his father, and of Jacques Guay, under whom he worked for some time. On the death of the latter, he appears to have bought the house in the Marais, rue Portefoin, n<sup>o</sup> 6, where the Master had lived and carried on his profession for so many years. That same house was left by Simon in his will to one of his pupils, Henri Beck, who in his turn bequeathed it to J. F. Leturcq, the author of a 'Life of Jacques Guay', to which I have had occasion to refer (Vol. II, p. 326).

Mayer Simon is the author of several Portrait-gems of Louis XVI., Bonaparte as First Consul, and other celebrities; by him are also a cameo, signed SIMON F. depicting Jupiter and Antiope, and an intaglio cut in amethyst representing a Nymph playing with a term of Priapus. Babelon further mentions figures of Lions, and a Cat, engraved by this artist, whose productions are unfortunately lacking in inspiration and originality, and too often hard and lifeless.

SIMON, THOMAS (Brit.). Medallist, Coin- and Seal-engraver, born circ. 1623; appointed joint-graver to the Royal Mint in 1645; Chief-engraver from 1649 to 1660; died of the plague in 1665. His fame as an Engraver of coin- and medal-dies stands unrivalled in the British series. It must be noted, however, that Thomas Simon usually worked from his brother Abraham's models.

I borrow the following details from Wroth's admirable notice of this artist, in Sidney Lee's Dictionary of National Biography, LII, pp. 265-267.

"Thomas Simon, medallist and seal-engraver, born about 1623, was one of the sons of Peter (or Pierre) Simon by his wife Anne, daughter of Gilles Germain of Guernsey. He was a younger brother of Abraham Simon (q. v.), the medallist. Peter Simon is described as a native of London, but he probably belonged to a Guernsey family named Simon. His marriage took place at the Wallson church in Threadneedle Street, London, on 12. September 1611.

Medallic Portrait of Thomas Simon, by Stuart.

Vertue records the tradition that Thomas Simon was born in Yorkshire, and that he there chanced to attract the notice of Nicholas Briot, the mint engraver. All that seems certain is that Simon was introduced (about 1635?) into the service of the London mint by Sir Edward Harley, and that he there received instruction from Briot. In 1639 he made the "Scottish Rebellion" medal, and Hawkins (Silver Coins) supposes that some of the Tower mint 'crowns' of Charles I. were his work. From about 1645 his productions as a medallist and seal-engraver become numerous. In official documents his name sometimes occurs as Simons and Simmonds.

“In 1645 Simon was appointed, with Edward Wade, joint chief graver of the stamps for coins, with authorization to engrave all the royal arms and seals. The salary was 30 l. shared with his colleague, together with the usual lodgings and perquisites. In 1648 he was authorized to engrave the great seal of the Commonwealth, and in 1649 was appointed sole chief graver to the mint and seals.

Battle of Dunbar, 1650.

“In September 1650 he was sent to Edinburgh to take the portrait of the lord-general for the ‘Dunbar’ medal. Cromwell, in the same year, recommended him for promotion at the mint, for ‘indeed the man is ingenious and worthy of encouragement’. In 1651 Simon made the great seal of England. On 20. March 1654 he was given a salary of 13 l. 6 s. 8 d. per annum for the sole making of all medals for his highness and for the public service; in addition to this he had 30 l. per annum as the salary attached to his post of sole chief graver of the mint and seals. On 16. March 1654 he was ordered to engrave the great seal, privy seal, and seal manual; and in 1655-6 he also made many seals for the public service, including the great seals for Scotland and for Ireland, and seals for the English, Scottish, and Irish councils, and for the English law courts and the Admiralty.

“Simon engraved the dies for Cromwell’s projected coinages of 1656 and 1658, probably the finest in the English series. Simon’s bust for the so-called ‘fifty-shilling piece’ (struck from the die of the Broad) is now in the Royal Mint, together with other punches and dies made by him. The frosting observable on these coins appears to have been introduced by Simon. The actual striking of the specimens was undertaken by Blondeau. On 14. January 1657-8 Simon laid before the council his account for making medals, badges, silver boxes for treaties, presses for seals, &c., amounting to 1,728 l. 5 s. 8 d., of which 700 l. had been paid in 1655. On 3. August 1658 he again petitioned the council to discharge the debt. ‘I beg you’ (he says) ‘to consider that I and my servants have wrought five years without recompense, and that the interest I have to pay for gold and silver eats up my profit’. Simon was employed to model the face of the effigy of Oliver, carried in the Protector’s funeral procession on 23. November 1658.

Simon’s Petition Crown, 1663.

“At the Restoration, Thomas Rawlins, the Royalist medallist, was reinstated as chief engraver, but Simon successfully petitioned for employment, and was actively occupied in making dies for the ‘hammered’ English coinage of 1660. On 31. May 1661 he obtained the grant of the office of one of the gravers of the king’s arms, shields, and stamps; and on 2. June 1661 was made by patent one of the king’s chief gravers of the mint and seals, with the salary of 50 l. “At this time he prepared the following seals: the great seal and privy seal, the great seal for Ireland, the great seal for Jamaica, and seals for the order of the Garter, the lord high admiral, the council of Wales, and the Royal Society.

“In January 1662 Simon and John Roettiers (q. v.) were ordered to engrave dies for the new ‘milled’ coinage, but, ‘by reason of a contest in art between them’, they could not be brought to an agreement. They were therefore each directed (7. February 1662) to engrave a trial-piece for a silver 'crown', to be submitted to the king. Charles decided in favour of Roettiers, and Simon's employment at the mint then practically ceased. In 1663 Simon produced as a sample of his abilities his famous pattern for a crown piece known as the 'Petition Crown', from the following petition engraved in minute letters on its edge: THOMAS SIMON MOST. HVMBLY. PRAYS. YOVR. MAJESTY TO. COMPARE. THIS. HIS. TRYALL. PIECE. WITH. THE. DVTCH (i. e. John Roettiers's crown) AND. IF. MORE. TRVLY. DRAWN & EMBOSSED. MORE. GRACE: FVLLY. ORDER'D. AND. MORE. ACCVRATELY. ENGRAVEN. TO. RELEIVE HIM (cf. Numismatic Chronicle, 1854, xvi. 135, where fifteen specimens of the petition crown are mentioned). In April and September 1664, Simon was employed in engraving seals for the king's service. He died in June 1665 of the plague, leaving directions in his will that he was to be buried in the church of St. Clement Danes, London, in which parish he had long resided.

"Simon married Elizabeth, daughter and sole heiress of Cardin Fautrart of Guernsey, and had by her several children. The will of Thomas Simon, citizen and goldsmith of London, was proved in the Consistory Court of Canterbury on 23. August 1665. He left his son Samuel his farm in Shorne, near Gravesend, Kent, and also his paintings, drawings, and medals. To his nephew William, son of his brother Nathaniel, deceased, he left his punches and graving tools. Simon's widow petitioned the king about 1669 for the sum of 2, 164 l., claimed by her as arrears of payment due to her husband.

"A portrait of Simon occurs on an oval medal, cast and chased by Stuart in the eighteenth century, from an unknown original probably executed by Abraham Simon circ. 1660. A seventeenth-century miniature, formerly in the possession of Sir A. W. Franks, has been identified as probably a portrait of T. Simon.

"In the preparation of many of his portrait medals Simon had the advantage of working from the admirable wax models of his brother Abraham, but his own work on coins and seals proves that he was an accomplished designer, endowed with a keen sense of what was appropriate for the circular 'flan' of the coin and the seal. His technical skill is triumphantly evinced by his Petition Crown, and, taken altogether, he must be pronounced the finest medallist who ever worked in England. His usual signature is T.S."

The following is a list of Simon's principal medallic works. Many of his medals are not struck, but cast and chased.

having cracked after a few specimens were struck. The Crown was also struck in gold, but only two examples are known. There are two imitations of this piece, one made by Tanner, the other in Holland and commonly called "the Dutch crown". They vary from Simon's crown in the modelling of the bust and in the shape of the letters" (Grueber, p. 126).

Broads and Half-Broads struck in copper and pewter are known of Simon's type.

The first issue of Maundy money, which is of Simon's third type, dates from 1661-2. The two most famous Pattern coins by Thomas Simon are his "Petition Crown" and the "Reddite Crown". The former I have already described above. Referring to this piece, Mr. Webster writes in his Catalogue of the Mint Collection (p. 77): "The famous contest in art between two such engravers as Simon and Roettiers, produced the finest pattern piece in the English series, but unfortunately it failed in obtaining any favour at the hands of a monarch who never possessed the artistic taste for which his father was so celebrated. Evelyn, in speaking of the contest remarks: "For the honour of our countrymen, I cannot here omit that ingenious trial of skill which a commendable emulation has produced in a medal performed with extraordinary accuracy by one who having been deservedly employed in the Mint at the Tower, was not willing to be supplanted by foreigners."

The "Reddite" Crown, by Simon.

The 'Reddite' is of the same type and bears the same legends as the 'Petition' crown, and is from the same dies, but the edge is inscribed REDDITE.QVÆ.CÆSARIS.CÆSARI, &c.

A most interesting paper was contributed by Mr. W. J. Hocking, Curator of the Mint Museum, to the Num. Chron., 1909, pp. 56-119, on Simon's Dies in the Royal Mint Museum, with some Notes on the early history of coinage by machinery. This paper describes twenty-six Cromwell dies, matrices and punches, nineteen of which were purchased by Mr., afterwards Sir, Isaac Newton, from the artist's successor, whilst seven dies were manufactured in the Mint at a later date (about the fourth decade of the eighteenth century) and attributed to Tanner. Beside these a set of dies for Half-broad, Shilling, and Sixpence were acquired by the Mint in 1900, which are not by Simon, and show unskilful work, emanating probably from the same source as the so-called "Dutch" crown, perhaps all done in Flanders.

Commonwealth Seal, by T. Simon.

"Thomas Simon was also, according to the universal rule of his times, a gem-engraver; this à priori conclusion is confirmed by Giulianelli who quotes, from Stosch's collection, pastes taken from his gem-portraits of Cromwell and Clarendon. In the Devonshire Cabinet is a cameo head of the Protector, in all probability his work; in fact his head on the coins are treated precisely in the style of cameo in flat relief, to which unusual mode of treatment much of their effect is due" (King, Antique Gems and Rings, 1872).

The two brothers Simon produced medals singly or together; in the case of a joint work, it seems that Abraham made the model, while Thomas, a more skilful engraver, did the after-chasing. The Simons appear to have first made their models in wax, and then to have cast the medals from models in sand.

SINGLETON (Brit.). Counterfeiter of ancient and modern coins and medals, circ. 1825-1840. The sketch reproduced below gives a humorous portrait of this sorry individual, who is described in the Sale Catalogue of a Clergyman, &c., Sotheby's, July 1839, p. 14, as "the now well-known dealer, whose sanctified appearance, and deceptive demeanour, have but too well enabled him to succeed in disposing of his forgeries as genuine, and by so doing injure the science of numismatics and defraud the unwary".

Singleton's forgeries are mostly casts, some from originals, others made up from ideal coins, which he hawked through the country, and took care to sell mixed up with genuine specimens, to collectors. His fabrications comprise imitations of the coins of Athens, Caulonia, Syracuse, Metapontum, &c., Denarii of Julius Caesar, Nero, Galba, Titus, and others, including rarities; Anglo-Saxon Pennies of Eadwald, Regnald, Vigmund, Eanbald, &c.; Halfpence of John, Edwards IV., etc.; Pennies of William I., Henry II., John, etc.; Half Groats of the Edwards and Henries; Groats of Henry VIII., Elizabeth, Charles I., and others; Shillings of Henry VII., Philip and Mary, Charles I., &c.; Halfcrowns of Elizabeth, Charles I. (two Siege pieces); Crowns of Edward VI., Charles I., various, one of Oxford with the City under the horse, also Half Crown of same type; Scottish Pennies and Groats, various; a Crown of Mary and Henry; a medal, purporting to be of gold, of David II. Forgeries by Singleton still turn up now and then. They may not all be his work, but his name is associated with them as the seller. He traded under the aliases of D<sup>r</sup> Edwards, Mr. James, &c.

SINISTRI, GIUSEPPE (Ital.). A famous Forger of ancient coins, who was residing at Rome during the second half of the eighteenth century. Caroni, Ragguaglio del viaggio compendioso di un dilettante antiquario condotto in Barberia (Milan, 1805, t. II, p. 183) mentions that this counterfeiter executed amongst others three imitations of a fragment of Aes rude, of rectangular form, with corners rounded, bearing on one side a sword scabbard with the inscription N ROMANOM, and on the other a sword, the pommel of which represents a ram's head, and with the guard bent in the form of an ∞ (Vide Babelon, Monnaies consulaires, I, pp. 8-9).

SIRIES, LOUIS (French). Gem-engraver of the eighteenth century, whose productions are dated between 1733 and 1760. He was a Frenchman, Goldsmith to Louis XV., but settled at Florence in 1740 where he held the appointment of Director of the Grand Ducal Gallery. Born about 1686, he died some time after 1766.

According to Giulianelli, he learnt, self-taught, the art of gem-engraving, in the space of seven years. Gori speaks in high praise of the artist, and St. Laurent wrote a special volume to eulogise his work.

The best known gems by Siries described by Raspe are : Saturn and the Zodiac, lapis lazuli ; — The twelve great divinities grouped in a circle around a nude figure of Venus, lapis lazuli ; — Gany-mede and the eagle (signed : L. S.) ; — Bust of Pallas, with the aegis, helmet ornamented with figure of Victory (signed : L. S.) ; — Another, the helmet adorned with a dragon (L. S.) ; — Others (Raspe, T. Raspe, describing this gem, says : “ Siries, who scorned the rules of antiquity, seems to have been desirous of outdoing the incomparable original, having thrown the centre of gravity upon the two knees, and placed the legs much more parallel than they are in the original.) ; — Bacchus crowned by Victory in car drawn by a goat and panther, preceded and followed by Fauns ; on the bezel, a Bacchanalian procession, cornelian (signed : L. S.) ; — A rural festival, cornelian (Raspe, n° 4374) ; — Triumphal Entry of Osiris into Egypt, lapis lazuli (signed : LOVIS SIRIES. 1734) ; — Bacchanalian Procession with Silenus in the middle, chalcedony (signed : LOVIS. Louis Siries was one of the most admired and renowned engravers of his day. His microscopic jewels were indeed remarkable performances; among them, a Gallic cock, so tiny, that it was hardly discernible to the naked eye, but yet perfect in every part when viewed with the lens; also a pair of scissors of gold a fifth of an inch long, which cut paper, and were so small, that one of the limbs of such a scissor was once lost under the nail of the person who was finishing it; he executed a number of little knick-knacks exceedingly small and fine; he carved some bas-reliefs in coloured steel, comparable, as Mariette says, to the finest miniatures; and in short, engraved very small figures on fine stones, which could not be seen distinctly without the help of a magnifier, and which nevertheless, according to Mariette, are executed with great precision. "His talent lay in achieving supposed impossibilities, and the perpetual aiming after originality; dreading nothing so much as the being thought an imitator of the ancients." In accordance with these principles, his works usually consist of numerous microscopic figures, which Natter unceremoniously styles mere scratches, although Raspe allows them to display considerable spirit when examined with the magnifier; though they fall infinitely short both in arrangement and finish, of the similar productions of P. M. da Pescia, whose 'forte' also lay in this department. Raspe therefore justly puts down in the category of "difficiles nugae" and the "labor ineptiarum" these highly vaunted nonpareils of the too original Gaul.

"Many of his works have found their way to England; some were in the Marlborough Collection, and all that I have seen fully justify Natter's sentence upon them. For the most part they are on thin disks of golden sard let into deep moulded frames of white agate, a combination designed to pass for a single stone, and which indeed, has completely imposed upon Gori, who talks with wonder of this frame work and the levelness of the field within as matters involving incredible difficulties in their execution, as certainly would be the case if attempted in a solid stone. But his heads are weak and devoid of expression, so are his figures, and his landscapes are in good sooth mere scratches." All are signed either L. S. or with the name in full.

The chief productions of L. Siries enumerated by Gori are his trial-piece, in 1747, on lapis-lazuli, in a border of the same — subject, the Crucifixion, in intaglio on both sides; in the same material, but in relief, "The wonders of Nature, the Arts, and Sciences;" cameo, the bust of Louis XV. encircled by the zodiac, on an onyx of three layers, and presented by him to the king; heads of Francis and Maria Theresia facing each other, in cameo;

The Austrian Imperial Family.

Sol in his car, in the centre of the zodiac; Hercules and Antaeus, the largest piece he attempted; the Fall of Phaeton; Diomedes, master of the Palladium; Hercules fully armed advancing to the combat; Pentheus cutting down the vines; Æsculapius leaning on his staff; Mercury carrying the infant Bacchus to the nymphs; Aurora and Cephalus; the young Hercules; two heads; the mourning

Achilles, seated. For Baron Stosch he engraved "the Discovery of Ancient Monuments" on a yellow sard; on a very minute gem the Sacrifice of a bull at an altar, with seven figures of attendants; Diogenes in his tub, conversing with Alexander (King, Antique Gems, p. 436).

Francescone of P. Leopoldo, 1771.

Portrait-medal of Duke Pietro Leopoldo.

The Empress Maria Theresia purchased all these cameos and many others for the Imperial collection. The largest of them, executed in commission for the Vienna Court, in 1756, when the artist was about 70 years of age, portrays Francis I. and his Queen surrounded by the whole Imperial family (14 portraits); it is signed : LVD. SIRIES SCALP.FIOR. He was paid 2681 florins for this work.

Siries was also employed as Die-engraver for the Mints of Florence and Pisa under Francesco III., and Pietro Leopoldo. In a letter dated in June 1766, addressed to a M. Verschot at Brussels (and now in the possession of the Belgian medallist, M. Franz Vermeylen), the latter mentions that he was at the time engaged on the engraving of the dies for the 10-Paoli piece, and also for that of a Portrait-medal of Grand Duke Pietro Leopoldo of Tuscany, who had given his approval of the sealing-wax impression.

Domanig, Porträtmedaillen des Erzhauses Oesterreich, illustrates two medals by L. Siries; the one reproduced above, undated, and signed : L. SIRIES; the other, dated 1766, probably the one mentioned in the letter referred to, has on R. REPARATIO FELICIVM TEMPORVM.

It appears quite certain that Louis Siries, whose early gems are dated 1733 and 1734, and whose age is given as about 70 by M. de France, Director of the Vienna Cabinet (Babelon, p. 290) in 1756, was still in office as Engraver to the Florentine Mint in 1766. But the engraver of the same name, or whose initials at least are the same, is a distinct person, possibly a son of Louis Siries. To the latter belong the dies of the later coinage of Pietro Leopoldo II., Ferdinand III., and Ludovico III., from some time after 1767 to 1803, and the medal, dated 1811, of the Crusca Academy at Florence, with bust of Napoleon I. on obv. (Trésor Num., 52, 12).

Nagler, Schlickeysen-Pallmann, and other writers are undoubtedly in error as to the period of activity of Louis Siries, when they mention 1747-1795 or 1803.

SIRLETTI, A. (Ital.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, residing at Naples. His signature occurs on the obv. of a medal of the Cernucchi Hospital, commemorating the cholera epidemic at Naples, 1884; also on others: Portrait-medal of J. B. de Rossi; — Benedetto Cairoli, 1889, etc.

SIRLETTI, FLAVIO (Ital.). Gem-engraver of the first four decades of the eighteenth century, a native of Ferrara, but who died at Rome on 15. August 1737.

“He surpassed”, says King “all modern artists, in the fineness of his touch, and approached the nearest of all to the antique style of the Greeks. This perfection he attained (according to his contemporary, Giulianelli) by reviving the use of that ancient instrument the diamond-point, fixed in the end of an iron tool. Gori states that it was Baron Stosch who suggested to him this idea, as the only possible means of engraving that emerald, a magnificent stone, upon which Clement XI., in 1715, desired to have his pontifical coat of arms cut for his private signet. As he flourished at the time when the zeal of the dilettanti was first directed by Andreini towards the supposed signatures of ancient artists upon gems, he inserted many upon old or retouched stones, and thus enormously enhanced their selling value. Köhler confidently asserts that Andreini's and Stosch's collections were indebted to Sirletti for their finest inscribed stones, and so was the famous cabinet of the Jew Medina at Livorno, purchased by Lord Bessborough, as a careful examination has convinced myself. The greater part of those intagli, of wonderful execution, are signed in lettering of incomparable fineness, which we now see are mainly due to his talent. He was in every respect far superior to Natter, who followed in his traces under the tuition of the same arch connoisseur. Sirletti excelled in portraits: his best was that of Carlo Maratta, done for Agostino Massaccio, a pupil of that painter. He reproduced on gems several of the finest statues and busts in the Roman galleries, amongst the last, that celebrated one of Caracalla. His intagli copies of the Hercules Farnese, the Apollo, the Giustiniani Mercury on the Ram, and the Laocoön, are excellent for their drawing and their finish. The last group "of amethyst, signed  $\Phi\Sigma$ , was bought by the Duke of Beaufort, not Lord Bessborough, as Mariette has it. Vettori possessed the last work done by him, a Laughing Faun, crowned with ivy. His signatures on his acknowledged works are  $\Phi.\Sigma$  and sometimes  $\Phi\Lambda\text{B}\text{I}\text{O}\Upsilon$ " (Antique Gems and Rings, pp. 432-433).

By the same artist may be also the following, which are only signed Sirletti: Head of Serapis Ammon, onyx; — Head of Pallas, onyx; — Venus seated on a rock fishing for Cupid (signed:  $\Sigma\text{I}\text{P}\text{A}\text{H}\text{T}.$ ); — Head of Juba, onyx; — Head of Plato, onyx; — Head of Augustus, cornelian; — Head of Tiberius, onyx; — Bust of Julia Titi, onyx; — Unknown head, cornelian, etc.

He also executed numerous Portrait-camei and intagli.

Flavio Sirletti's two sons, Francesco and Raimondo were also gem-engravers.

Immerzeel's information that the artist was born at Nimwegen and died in 1703 has been proved erroneous.

The date of Jan Smeltzing's activity is chiefly comprised between 1684 and 1693, although some of his works date from 1669. In 1690 he accepted employment at the Paris Mint, having been obliged to leave his native country on account of some satirical medals of which he was the author, but his stay in the French capital was of short duration.

The artist's usual signatures are : J. S.; — S. N. (Smeltzing of Nimwegen); — I. SMELTZING, etc.

"Smeltzing executed a large series of medals", says Mr. Grueber, "which on account of the excellence of their workmanship were much esteemed." The date of his birth is not known, but he died at Leyden and was buried on 17. February 1714 in St. Peter's Church there. He is said to have been a younger brother of Jan Smeltzing, but the latter may be the Die-sinker, and not the Medallist, of that name.

Martin Smeltzing flourished at Amsterdam; his work however is not of considerable merit.

In the inventory of his succession, dies are mentioned of nineteen medals. I have come across the description of 25 of his productions. Some of these portray William III. of England, Philip V. and Charles III. of Spain, Leopold I. of Germany, Augustus II. of Poland, and others.

The following appear to be his best known medallic productions:

He was succeeded in 1861 by James Pollock.

ΣΩ ΣΩΚ. These artists' (?) signatures occur on Tarentine coins. They had already been noticed by Raoul Rochette, who illustrated two on Pl. IV, of his Lettre, &c.

$\Sigma\Omega$  in cartouche. (Raoul Rochette, op. cit., Pl. IV, 39; Brit. Mus. Cat., Pl. XIV, 208). Apparently only three specimens are known of this interesting coin, of which one is in Berlin, and the other two, including the piece reproduced by Raoul Rochette in M. M. P. Vlasto's collection at Marseilles.

According to Sir A. J. Evans and M. Vlasto, the following Didrachm is by the same engraver, although signed  $\Sigma\Omega\kappa$ .

M. Vlasto has been able to decipher the inscription  $\kappa\alpha\lambda$  on the tablet of  $\mathcal{R}$ . instead of  $\Sigma\Omega\kappa$  as described by Sir A. J. Evans.  $\kappa\alpha\lambda$  (q. v.) thus signed a coin in an identical manner to Evaenetos.

"This remarkable piece", observes Sir A. J. Evans (p. 50), "exhibits on the reverse, beneath the design of the youthful Taras spearing a cuttle-fish, and again beneath the horseman on the obverse, the signature  $\Sigma\Omega\kappa$  engraved on an oblong tablet, which recalls an artistic device adopted by the great Syracusan engravers for disposing of their names on the field of a coin". And he adds in a note: "This is in all probability the same engraver whose signature appears as  $\Sigma\Omega$  on a small tessera on a diobol described by Raoul Rochette (Lettre à M. le duc de Luynes, &c., p. 45, pl. III, 39), who justly regarded it as an example of an artist's signature. Raoul Rochette being unacquainted with the didrachm described above, sought erroneously to identify the signature with that of the engraver, who, on a late didrachm of the reduced standard signs  $\Sigma\Omega$  in minute letters between the horns of a bucranium, and also with the Pyrrhic magistrate  $\Sigma\Omega\varsigma\tau\rho\alpha\tau\omicron\varsigma$ . The diobol above mentioned must be regarded as probably the earliest of those presenting the type of Taras on his dolphin, and which mostly belong to the period after 300 B. C. "

Carelli, Pl. CX, 129 with  $\mathcal{A}\Pi\iota\varsigma\tau\iota\Omega\mathcal{N}$ . — M. P. Vlasto Collection.)

Another specimen of this interesting Didrachm figured in a Sale Catalogue by Dr A. Sambon, March 1901, lot 303.

Raoul Rochette was evidently wrong in ascribing the above Didrachms to the Engraver of the Diobol, as they are at least a century later.

SOCHE, GODWIN (Brit.). Ruding mentions, under Henry I., a Mint-master of that name, at Winchester (British Topography, I, 389). Mr. Andrews gives, under Edward the Confessor, a Godwine Socche, chief moneyer and tenant of the Winchester mint. The moneyer Ceca, who signed pennies of the same reign LODPINE-CEOCA, may be the same as Godwin Socche. Hildebrand further states that the names Godwine Ce, Ceo, Ceoc, Ceoca occur on coins of the Winchester mint under Canute, Harold I., and Harthacanute. From this the inference may be drawn that several moneyers of the name of Godwine Socche held office at the Winchester mint in the eleventh and twelfth centuries, for a period of over one hundred years. It is evident that a Godwine Socche was Magister monetarius under Edward the Confessor.

The Anglo-Saxon word SOC means 'a franchise', 'a privilege'. The name SOCHE may signify that these particular Godwines were 'freemen'.

SOCHOS, LAZARE NICOLAS (Greek). Contemporary Sculptor, born in the island of Tenos; pupil of the Schools of Fine Arts in Athens and Paris, and of Antonin Mercié. The following exhibits have been made by him at the Paris Salon: 1892. Princess Alexandra; — M<sup>me</sup> F***; — 1894. The poet Souris; — M. G***; — 1896. M. D. SOCKH, A.; also SOCK, SOCKHER (Austr.). Die-cutter at Kremnitz, 1617, in which year he applied for a post of Engraver at either of the Mints of Prague or Kuttenberg. He may have also engraved a medal, signed A. S., the dies for which are preserved in the Vienna Mint Museum, and which commemorates the Election of Archduke Ferdinand as successor to the Emperor Mathias in Hungary, 1617.

SOCKH, MICHAEL; also SOCK, SOCKHER (Austr.). Die-cutter, and later Chief-engraver at the Mint of Kremnitz; died in 1615. He was the son of Thomas S. Sockh, who died in 1588, and possibly the father of A. Sockh.

The date of his appointment as Chief-engraver at Kremnitz is 3. June 1601. On the occasion of his marriage, 11. November 1607, the city authorities presented him with a silver cup.

By this Engraver are the Rudolf II. Kremnitz Thaler, 1601, and subdivisions (Half and Quarter Thaler; Four Groschen; Zehner; Denar), also of later dates; — Medal, signed M. S., dated 1601, on the Recapture of Gran by Archduke Matthias; — Religious Medal (Betpfenning), Bust of Christ; — Another, with instruments of torture; — Hungarian Coronation of Mathias II., 1608, with bust of King, and Arms on R.; signed : M. SOCOCLES (?) (Greek). Gem-engraver's signature on a chalcedonyx intaglio, with bust of Medusa (20×16 mill.), formerly in Cardinal Ottoboni's collection at Rome, later in the Rondanini, and Carlisle cabinets, and now in the British Museum. The signature is CCWCOCA and should be read Σωσος λε... The Engraver's name may have been Sosos. The gem which is perfectly genuine was already known at the beginning of the eighteenth century, at which time it was published by Stephanoni. Pichler considered it as superior to the Medusa by Solon. Vide SOSOCLES infra.

SOLARI, PHILIPPE (French). Sculptor of the second half of the nineteenth century, born at Aix (Bouches-du-Rhône); pupil of Jouffroy. By him are the following medallic productions recorded by Chavignerie et Auvray: 1869. Portrait-medallion of a Gentleman; — 1875. Another; — 1885. M. P. Solari; — 1890. M<sup>lle</sup> Laure Mansion; — M. Plautier; — 1894. Une Arlésienne, etc.

SOLDANI-BENZI, MASSIMILIANO (Ital.). Sculptor and Medallist, born at Florence in 1658, descended from a noble family (nobil fiorentino discendente per fil diretto da Benzi da Figline e da Lucolena, famiglia nobilissima), but not however from the famous Florentine house of Soldani, which became extinct with the death of Mgr. Filippo Soldani, bishop of Fiesole, at about this time. Heiss mentions that Masters of the Florentine Zecca, of that name, were in office circa 1340-1390. (Méd. Ren., IX, 266). He died at Montevarchi, near Florence, in 1740.

From his childhood Massimiliano manifested artistic taste, modelling figures in clay which he afterwards coloured. In his autobiography (Soldani's letter to Marmi, 18. Sept. 1718; MSS. Magliabecch., classe XVII, cod. II, inserto 53, Bibl. Nazionale, Florence) he states that he began to study drawing in 1678 under Baldassare Franceschini, but the first of his four medals of the naturalist Francesco Redi is dated 1677. An early attempt at an "Assumption of Mary" in bas-relief drew the attention of Giuseppe Anighi, and under the auspices of Cosmo III., Grand Duke of Tuscany, the youth was sent to Rome to complete his studies.

Soon after his arrival in Rome, he modelled Portrait-medals of his two teachers, the painter Ciro Ferri, and sculptor Ercole Ferrata. The latter introduced him to Queen Christina of Sweden, who was so pleased with his work that she wrote to Cosmo III. requesting him to allow Soldani to undertake a series of medals for her. The Grand Duke gave his consent, and the sculptor was commissioned a series of Portrait-medals of the Queen, of a diameter of 63 mill., and two medals of her friend, Cardinal Azzolino. These medals will be found described below. During his residence in Rome, Soldani further modelled Portrait-medals of Cardinal Flavio Chigi, Francesco Redi, the poet Vincenzo Filicaia, and a medallion without reverse of Cardinal Rospigliosi. Queen Christina intended the artist to execute a series of over one hundred medals which were to form her " Histoire Métallique ". She had planned and chosen the subjects, but Cosmo III. recalled Soldani to Florence, whither he returned after a stay of four years in the Eternal City. About that time he produced a fine Bas-relief representing the " Decollation of St. John the Baptist ".

Soon after, Soldani was sent to Paris, and modelled there a large medallion of Louis XIV. (with R legend: MUNDO SIC OTIA FECIT), Hercules resting after slaying the Lernean hydra. Ten months later, in 1686, we find him again in Florence where for the next fifty-four years of his life he was engaged in the execution of numerous medals, bas-reliefs, small figures in gold, silver and bronze, of exquisite workmanship. His last productions are the magnificent candelabras in bronze in the Church of the Annunciation at Florence, and the mausoleums of Marc Antonio Zondadari, and Manoel da Vilhena, grand masters of Malta, which he did in commission for Grand Duke Ferdinand.

Soldani's medals are generally of large size, and always cast. They are well executed and correctly drawn. The artist being essentially a sculptor, he was obliged to have recourse to an Engraver to cut dies for the struck medals. G. B. Guglielmada was Soldani's collaborator in connection with the medals of Queen Christina, many of which are unsigned; some however bear Guglielmada's signature, although the dies were made from Soldani's models. Baron de Bildt describes the following medals of the Swedish Queen by these artists : (a) R NEC·SINIT·ESSE·FEROS. Female figure, personifying the Queen, leading four lions; in ex : S. D. G. ; cast specimens are signed : SOLDANVS, or M. SOLDANVS, on obv. and M. S. F. on R. ; struck pieces have G. F. on obv. in headdress; (b) POSSIS·NIHIL·VRBE·ROMA·VISERE·MAIVS. Roma Victrix seated to left (cast and struck specimens); — (c) HIC AMOR HAEC PATRIA EST. Dea Roma, similar to last (cast and struck specimens); — (d) Four varieties of portraits, illustrated on Pl. XIII of Baron de Bildt's work, occurring with reverses bearing the letters G. D. (Gloria Deo); — FORTIS·ET·FELIX. Lion in constellation of eleven stars, &c.; — NEC FALSO NEC ALIENO. Sun in splendour; — VICTORIA MAXIMA. Victory standing on globe; — NE MI BISOGNA NE MI BASTA. Globe. Some of these medals are cast and signed by Soldani; others are struck, and engraved by Guglielmada, and other artists.

By Soldani are also Portrait-medals of Cardinal Azzolino, with two reverse types, cast by Soldani, engraved by Guglielmada; a third, known only from struck pieces bearing the initials P. B. for Peter Paul Borner, appears to be from a model by Soldani.

Further works by Soldani are: Paolo Falconieri, 1679; — Dr John Inglis, of Lewisham, 1703; signed: M. S. (Med. Ill., II. <sup>259</sup>/<sub>41</sub>); — Henry Newton, 1709 (Med. Ill., II. <sup>384</sup>/<sub>299</sub>); — Dr Francesco Redi of Arezzo, 1677, 1684, 1684 (illustrated) and 1685 (signed variously: M. SOLDANVS; M SOLD., or S. M.), etc.

Amongst Soldani's pupils, Antonio Selvi, Bartolomeo Vaggelli, and the two brothers Weber are the best known as Medallists.

SOLDI-COLBERT, ÉMILE (French). Sculptor, Medallist and Author, a Dane by birth but naturalized a Frenchman, was born at Paris on 29. May 1846, and died in Rome in 1906, at the age of sixty. His real name was SOLDYCK. He was a pupil of Farochon, Lequesne, and Dumont. Grand Prix de Rome in medal-engraving, and a Member of the Société des gens de lettres; Knight of the Legion of Honour in 1878.

Special mention is due to his series of publications on the sacred language, primitive symbolic writing, etc.; he also translated Hans Andersen's fairy tales into French, and wrote books on etymology and archaeology in collaboration with his mother. By him are also: 'Recueil et Mémoires pour l'Histoire et l'Art', and 'La Sculpture égyptienne'. For some time he worked as a bookbinder, and for many years he has exhibited medallions, busts, engravings, etc., at the Salon.

Chavignerie et Auvray give the following list of medallic and glyptic works by this artist: 1869. Fortune and the Child (after La Fontaine's fable); — 1873. Gallia, bronze medallion in high relief; — Actaeon, onyx cameo; — Medal to the memory of the Victims of the Invasion; — Souvenir of Venice, in pietra dura; — 1876. Homage to Beethoven; — Allegorical Medal on the Reconstruction of Paris Buildings; — 1876. To the Victims of the Invasion; — Memorial medal of the 'Mobiles' of Seine-Inférieure; — Duchess Colonna de Castiglione; — M. L. O. M***; — M<sup>lle</sup> Bernardina Gismondi, silver medal; — Henriette de Belfort, bronze medal; — M<sup>lle</sup> Bergolt, etc.

M. Roger Marx illustrates in Médailleurs contemporains, pl. xxx, a very fine medal by him, representing Charity.

For his colleagues of the Société des gens de lettres Soldi modelled a Jeton de présence which serves also as a Prize medal for the Lauréats of the 'cité Rougemont'. This Plaquette representing on obv. 'Thought animating the Universe' is particularly fine. Other good productions are his Plaquette to commemorate the 50th Anniversary of the Invention of Photography, 1889, and that of the Association française des Étudiants de Paris, 1892.

"Soldi", says M. Babelon, "fut à ses débuts, en 1869, grand prix de Rome pour la gravure en médailles et sur pierres fines; ses premiers travaux firent concevoir les plus belles espérances. Lui-même eut l'ambition, un moment, de faire renaître la gravure des gemmes, et son livre, "les Arts méconnus", renferme d'excellents chapitres sur la technique de cet art difficile. Malheureusement, dans les dernières années de sa carrière, Soldi voulut être à la fois érudit et artiste; il s'égara dans les recherches d'archéologie pour lesquelles il n'avait qu'une insuffisante préparation; la publication de gros livres, dans lesquels l'imagination touffue de l'artiste déborde au détriment de la science positive, l'absorba au point de lui faire négliger la pratique des arts pour lesquels il avait une réelle vocation. Ce fut dommage. Soldi était un tempérament d'artiste; la fougue, l'indépendance d'esprit, l'activité fébrile, le souci de l'originalité, le dédain du poncif et de la routine, voilà ce qui le caractérisait. Il meurt après avoir fanatiquement caressé de beaux rêves, et n'ayant réalisé qu'en partie les belles espérances que certaines de ses œuvres avaient fait naître." SOLLIER, PAUL LOUIS EUGÈNE (French). Contemporary Sculptor, born at Paris; pupil of M. Charles Cordier. By him are several Portrait-medallions, exhibited at the Salon from 1869 to 1889, in which latter year he had a portrait of Dr Clavierie.

SOLON (Greek). Ancient Gem-engraver, a contemporary of Dioscorides, who probably flourished during the early part of the first century of our era under Augustus. He is only known by his works; some of the subjects he has treated are the same as those of Dioscorides.

Winckelmann, Stosch and others have ascribed various gems to him, and although some critics have since disputed the existence of this Engraver, modern writers have rehabilitated him.

The following 'ancient' gems bear this artist's signature : Diomedes carrying off the Palladium,  $19 \times 17$  mill.; signed : COΛΩΝ ΕΠΟΙΕΙ. This gem is now lost; impressions were formerly in the Strozzi Cabinet at Rome; a bad modern copy exists at St. Petersburg; another is in Berlin. The original was undoubtedly ancient (Furtwängler, Jahrb., 1888, p. 308); — So-called Bust of Maecenas (formerly described as Solon, and now as Cicero); cornelian,  $18 \times 15$  mill.; signed : COΛΩΝΟC. Apparently only known now by four modern replicas at Naples, Vienna, Ludovisi-Piombino Coll<sup>n</sup> (Jahrb., pl. xi, 17), and Riccardi-Poniatowski (Stosch 62). The original was in 1570 in the Fulvio Orsini collection; — Head of Medusa; chalcedony,  $29 \times 25$  mill. (in the British Museum); signed : ΣΟΛΩΝΟC. This gem was found in Rome at the beginning of the eighteenth century, on the Caelius, near San Giovanni e Paolo. The signature may have been added by the dealer Sabbatini, who sold it to Leo Strozzi. It passed from the Blacas Collection to the British Museum. The Strozzi Medusa was copied several times; already in 1729 the Costanzi reproduced it for Cardinal Polignac. It is known that in 1730 Strozzi replaced several originals in his collection by reproductions, and it is possible therefore that the Blacas-British Museum gem is one of the latter. M<sup>me</sup> Preissler executed a good copy, in a smaller size; also Jouffroy, on an amethyst; and Giovanni Pichler, another, which is of considerable merit. — Cupid standing; cornelian, 12 × 9 mill. ; signed : COΛΩNOC. A suspicious gem, condemned by Furtwängler; — Bust of Bacchante; signed COΛΩN. The original is lost, and only known from a paste in the Berlin Museum. M. Babelon considers the type a copy of a Greek statue of the Vth century B.C. Furtwängler admits the authenticity of the original.

Amongst Poniatowski's gems, signed Solon, Prendeville's Catalogue describes : Apollo killing the serpent Python; oriental cornelian; — Diana, as Hecate, killing a Titan; oriental cornelian; — Echidna stealing the horses of Hercules; oriental cornelian; — Echidna receiving a bow from Hercules; oriental sardonyx; — Hercules extracting the arrow from the centaur Chiron; cornelian; — The Souls of the Guilty drinking the blood of the victim offered by Hercules; oriental cornelian; — Hercules and Omphale; oriental cornelian; — The punishment of Marsyas; oriental sardonyx; — The punishment of Phlegyas; oriental cornelian; — Minerva putting the bridle on Pegasus; amethyst; — Jupiter, Juno, and Vulcan; cornelian; — Menelaus defending the body of Patroclus; cornelian; — Hector engaging to reward the spy Dolon; cornelian; — Ulysses extracting the arrow from the foot of Diomedes; sardonyx; — Æolus, at the solicitation of Juno, letting loose the winds, to destroy the fleet of Aeneas; cornelian; — Venus laying down Ascanius when asleep; cornelian; — Laocoön hurling a spear at the wooden horse of Troy; cornelian; — Æneas meeting Andromache at the cenotaph of Hector; cornelian; — Venus entreating Neptune to favour the voyage of Aeneas after leaving Sicily; sardonyx; — Mezentius bathing his wound in the Tiber; cornelian.

SOSION ( $\Sigma\Omega\Sigma\text{I}$ $\Omega\text{N}$ ) (Sicil.). The two earliest Syracusan Coin-engravers whose signatures occur on coin-dies appear to be Eumenes and Sosion. Holm (III, p. 608) shows that  $\Sigma\Omega\Sigma\text{I}\Omega\text{N}$  probably flourished towards the middle of the fifth century B.C. A contemporary, if not a pupil of Eumenes, his types bear a strong analogy to those of the latter engraver, although they exhibit a varying finer execution.

suspended an ornament in form of a ram's head; on the ampyx, across front of head,  $\Sigma\Omega\Xi\Lambda$ ; around, four dolphins.

Syracusan Tetradrachm, by Sosion.

The Reverse of this coin is possibly by Eumenes.

The British Museum specimen reads only  $\Sigma\Omega\Xi$ , but that in the Berlin Cabinet bears the full signature  $\Sigma\Omega\Xi\Lambda\Omega\Lambda$ .

Slight varieties in the headdress are known. Some of these, although unsigned, may be by Sosion (cf. Evans Sale, 1898, pl. IV, n° 92).

SOSOCLES. The authentic signature  $\Sigma\Omega\Omega\Lambda$  (which was transcribed  $\Sigma\Omega\Omega\Lambda\epsilon$  by Picart) should be read  $\Sigma\omega\omega\epsilon\lambda\epsilon$ ... (Vide SOSOS infra). The inscription  $\Sigma\Omega\Omega\Lambda\Lambda$  which occurs on modern gems, and has been used by unscrupulous engravers or dealers of the eighteenth century, is possibly copied from that found on the statue of an Amazon in the Capitol Museum.

SOSOS (Greek). Signature of a Gem-engraver, who is supposed to have flourished in the period following that of Praxiteles. It occurs on a Medusa head, in chalcedony, formerly in Cardinal Ottoboni's collection at Rome, and later in possession of Rondanini, then Carlisle, and now in the British Museum. This gem was known from the beginning of the xviith century, when it was published by Stephanoni. It is perfectly genuine, as well as the signature  $\text{C}\omega\text{COA}$  which should read  $\Sigma\omega\sigma\sigma\epsilon\lambda\epsilon$ ... Pichler considered it superior to Solon's Medusa.

Prof. Furtwängler remarks :

$\text{C}\omega\text{COA}$  “ Die Inschrift des Künstlers befindet sich da wo es der freie Raum der Grundfläche verstattete, wiederum horizontal, mit kleinen im Abdrucke rechtsläufigen Buchstaben geschrieben  $\text{C}\omega\text{COA}$  (beistehend vergrößert). Auch die Schrift stimmt mit derjenigen der vorigen Steine überein; die Kugeln fehlen oder sind kaum bemerklich. Die länger gezogene erste Hasta des letzten Buchstabens erinnert an die Agathopus-Inschrift. Das Sigma ist auffallend gleich dem des Onesas. An der Aechtheit kann nicht der geringste Zweifel sein; die Schrift ist von derjenigen der Fälschungen des 16. und 17. Jahrhunderts völlig verschieden. Die Bedenken Köhler's sind nichtig und beruhen auf falscher Deutung der Inschrift, die Brunn zuerstrichtig erklärt hat, indem er bemerkte, man müsse von dem letzten Zeichen absehen, wo sich dann der völlig correcte Name  $\Sigma\omega\sigma\sigma\epsilon\lambda\epsilon$  ergäbe. Köhler las  $\Sigma\omega\sigma\sigma\epsilon\lambda$ , indem er annahm, der Schreiber hätte statt griechischem  $\sigma$  lateinisches  $\text{C}$  gesetzt; er stand damit unter dem Einflusse der von ihm selbst als falsch erkannten Lesung des Stosch, der  $\text{C}\omega\text{COKA}\epsilon$  als auf dem Steine stehend gab. Die Vorgänger von Stosch, Canini und Maffei hatten ganz richtig gelesen was da steht, aber es unerklärt gelassen, was Köhler auch in seiner Annahme der Fälschung hätte zweifelhaft machen müssen. — Was aber das Schliefszeichen der Inschrift bedeutet, vermag ich nicht zu sagen. Vielleicht ist der Rand des Steines abgeschliffen und es folgte ursprünglich noch mehr.” (Furtwängler, Jahrb., 1888, p. 214.

There is a copy of that gem by Natter, for Hemsterhuis : in the Hague Collection.

The inscription  $\text{C}\omega\text{COKA}$  on a sardonix bust of Junius Brutus proves to be a forgery.

SOSTHENES. Visconti proposed the signature Sosthenes as the correct reading of the inscription on the Medusa head, ascribed to Sosos. Köhler condemned the gem as “a stone never employed by the ancients; its origin too is betrayed by its uncommon harshness and the want of taste in the rendering of the hair; the blunders in the name could not have been made in ancient times.” (King, Handbook, p. 270.)

SOSTRATUS (Greek), Gem-engraver of the hellenistic period.

The inscription ΩΤΡΑΤΟΥ occurs on various gems, which are not all antique. Perhaps one of the best is an intaglio, depicting “Nike sacrificing a bull” (illustrated), formerly in the Carlisle collection. A replica, of exquisite and microscopic workmanship, on a golden sard, from the Morrison sale was sold by Messrs. Rollin and Feuardent in Paris (May 1905, lot 93). Pichler judged it a work of the sixteenth, and Stephani of the eighteenth century. Furtwängler considered it an eighteenth century production.

Similarly signed is a fragment of a cameo in agate, representing ‘Cupid taming two lionesses’ (Cardinal Ottoboni, Lord Carlisle, and now Brit. Mus.). The antiquity of the gem is beyond question, but the name is probably an addition.

Another cameo in agate, representing Meleager and Atalanta, bears the signature ΩΤΡΑΤΟΥ (sic). This gem is in the British Museum collection from the Ottoboni and Carlisle collections. The two heads have been restored, which points to the authenticity of the cameo, but the inscription is probably modern.

King and Babelon mention as a work by Sostratos a cameo, in the Naples Museum, signed ΩΤΡΑΤΟΥ, showing a winged female figure (Eos or Nike) in a biga galloping. This cameo once belonged to Lorenzo di’ Medici, who had his name engraved on it: LAVR MED. King mentions: “The work allowed antique by Köhler and Stephani, but the inscription pronounced an addition in the taste of the eighteenth century, being scratched in with small fine lines with dots at the ends; and placed over the horses because the proper place for them was already occupied by the name of Lorenzo. It is hard to see how such an addition could have been made, inasmuch as the cameo came into the Farnese Coll. through Margareta, widow of Alessandro de' Medici, and never subsequently passed through a dealer's hands; hence Stephani's theory cannot be admitted without further proof." Furtwängler considers the inscription as genuine.

None of the other gems, bearing the inscription ΩΩΤΡΑΤΟΥ, are antique. The best known are: Bellerophon watering Pegasos, sard (Raspe). A copy from the bas-relief of the Villa Spada; — Nereid riding upon a sea-serpent. Stephani styles the work insignificant, and King adds that the inscription is evidently from a modern hand; — Nereid on a hippocamp; cameo quoted by Winckelmann; — Venus Anadyomene; "a cameo sold by Casanova for 300 l. to a Dr Matti, " says King". As he had received it from his brother the painter, it was most likely done from a design of his, and the buyer what his name imports, i. e. a madman; — Seated Faun holding fast a Bacchante, ΟΩΤΡΑΤ above, quoted by Panofka, is altogether modern. Furtwängler however thinks the gem may be old.

"Stephani states that the Devonshire Victory (the gem reproduced above) was the starting-point, whence the forgers commenced with the employment of this name. This gem was in existence before 1723, though not published by Natter until 1754. Stephani thinks its style agrees with that of Natter's earliest works. Brunn however believes it taken from the Farnese gem" (King, Handbook, &c., p. 271).

There is still a good deal of divergence in the opinions of critics as to the authenticity of certain gems which figured in prominent eighteenth century collections, and it is in some cases almost impossible to decide.

The compilers of Medallic Illustrations call Spangenberg a Medallist, but I do not know whether he actually engraved dies. If so the Memorial Thaler,  $\frac{1}{2}$ ,  $\frac{1}{4}$  and  $\frac{1}{8}$  Thaler struck on the death of George I. 1727, bearing his initials C. P. Spangenberg was acting as Mint-master at Friedberg in 1747 (E. Lejeune, Die Münzen der reichsunmittelbaren Burg Friedberg i. d. Wetterau).

Several references to Spangenberg's activity as Director of the Clausthal mint occur in Frhr. v. Schrötter, Die hannöverschen Goldgulden, 1748-1756, Zeits. für Numismatik, 1904, p. 167.

SPENCE, WILLIAM (Brit.). Mint-warden at Edinburgh, 1690-1699.

SPENCER, WILLIAM W. (Amer.). Die-sinker and Engraver, recently deceased (1911), was in business in Cincinnati. He was born in Cork, Ireland, on December 30, 1839, and came to Cincinnati in 1849. After working in other lines he took a position with John Stanton in 1857 to learn the die-sinking and engraving business, and continued to work for him until Mr. Stanton went out of business in 1866, when he (Stanton) sold it out to Janus Murdoch Jr, and William W. Spencer, who succeeded him under the name of Murdoch and Spencer. This firm continued for about five years, when they dissolved partnership, each one continuing in the same line of business. Mr. Spencer was with Mr. Stanton during the 'war token' period of 1861-4, during which time he assisted in putting forth the innumerable examples of these little reminders of the "late unpleasantness". It is well known to collectors how frequently the mint-mark of "Murdoch and Spencer" is found on issues of all kinds during 1864, and continued until stopped by the United States government in 1867 (reproduced from 'The Numismatist', July 1911, p. 138).

SPENS, CHARLES (II) (French). . . . 1739-1749. Mint-engraver at Amiens.

SPERADEUS Vide SPERANDIO infra.

SPERANDIO OF MANTUA (Ital.) One of the most productive and clever Medallists of the Quattrocento, was born at Mantua about 1425, but as says Fabriczy, "the circumstances of his life are only fragmentarily known." Heiss states that there were artists of the name of Sperandio both at Mantua and Ferrara, and that they distinguished themselves as painters, goldsmiths, sculptors and architects. Fabriczy's account of the Medallist's career comprises all that is known at present, but fresh documents may turn up which will throw new light on the subject.

Francesco Sforza, Duke of Milan.

"Sperandio", says Fabriczy, "removed from Mantua in 1437 with his father the goldsmith Bartolomeo — a member of the Roman family of the Savelli — to Ferrara, where he fell under the influence of Pisano, Pasti, and Marescotti. About 1450 he appears at Mantua; after 1460 at Milan, where he produced his first medal of Duke Francesco Sforza, a somewhat dry, spiritless work, the reverse of which is a direct copy of the Malatesta temple on one of Pasti's medals. From 1463 to 1477 he dwelt at Ferrara, employed by the Este more as a sculptor than a medallist; only three of the twenty medals which he produced there being dedicated to the reigning family. Among the rest we may mention as conspicuous that of Jacopo Trotti, minister and envoy of Ercole I. (the reverse offers an appalling example of Sperandio's tasteless allegories); further, that of the ducal orator Antonio Sarzanella, with a reverse which is but little better (Prudence seated on a throne formed of two dogs); and especially that of Niccolo da Correggio (1450-1508.) The last was the son-in-law of Bartolomeo Colleoni, a no less celebrated military hero; he was, moreover, one of the earliest dramatic poets of Italy, and so accomplished a courtier that the highly cultured Marchioness Isabella Gonzaga was able to describe him as "più atilato et de rime et cortesie erudito cavagliere et barone che si retrovasse in Italia". Here for once the reverse shows a pleasing realism, and is a skilful circular composition; and its interpretation as an illustration of the biblical inscription round it (Ps. LXXXV, 13) is unconstrained.

“After a passing sojourn at Faenza we find Sperandio in 1478 at Bologna, which he did not leave again until 1495. Here he produced important works of sculpture (the Tomb of Alexander V., busts of Bentivoglio, Sanuti, Barbazza, decorations of the Church of La Santa); and the fact that from 1486-1488 he was obliged to depend for support on the public alms-box seems the more inexplicable. One of the earliest of the fifteen medals which he produced in Bologna (before 1482) is that of Federigo Montefeltro, Duke of Urbino, the model of an enlightened ruler, inspired with the noblest and highest ideals. It was this medal which chiefly betrayed Goethe into his exaggerated panegyric on the master. It is, indeed, one of

Sperandio's greatest achievements; unfortunately the equestrian figure on the reverse is badly proportioned and unsuccessfully adapted to the circular field. The portrait of the world-renowned Professor of Law, Andrea Barbazza (died 1480), is worthy of the master, although in the hand, half amputated by the truncation of the bust and hanging in the armhole of the gown, we notice the naturalistic degeneration of composition in relief. Irreproachable, however, is the portrait of the powerful adherent of the Bentivoglio, Count Carlo Grati; true, with the limitations already specified as regards the design of the reverse.

“Sperandio returned to his native Mantua an aged man in 1495, and on the occasion of the festival for the victory over Charles VIII. at Fornovo (July 6, 1495), in spite of his seventy years, produced three of his best medals, representing the leaders of the alliance against France: the Doge Agostino Barbarigo, the Marquis Gianfrancesco Gonzaga, and Giovanni Bentivoglio II., the last of whom stayed in Mantua on account of the victory”. (Fabriczy, Italian Medals, pp. 89-92).

PLAQUES. Scourging of Christ; signed : OPVS SPERANDEI;  $118 \times 132$  mill. (illustrated); — Resurrection of Christ; unsigned.

“Sperandio”, says Fabriczy, “is the most productive of the Quattrocento medallists; we possess forty-five pieces signed by him, Giulio Cesare Varanesis.

which bring before us a motley series of the celebrities of his time : scholars and poets, physicians and astrologers, military heroes and diplomatists, professors and senators, monks, bishops and cardinals, princes and tyrants. In the circles of the dilettanti his name is — so to speak — a collective designation : and the esteem in which his works are held has been beyond all question ever since the Weimar connoisseurs proclaimed their enthusiastic admiration, extolling far above the works of Pisano” his artistic skill in proportion and form as well as in the pictorial taste shown in the composition of the reverses. The more intimate knowledge of the art of the Quattrocento and the more acutely critical eye, with which we now regard it, do not indeed justify Goethe's verdict. Though some of his portraits are unusually life-like, and, in the rarely found good casts, are wrought with great artistic skill, still it would appear in general that too numerous commissions had betrayed him into hasty work and led to the mechanical exploitation of his talent. It can scarcely, therefore, be a matter for surprise if the greater number of his portraits display the same character, and that we fail to perceive any advance in the artistic development of their creator. Still less do the reverses approach those of Pisano. Instead of the magnificent designs inspired with life and monumental grandeur, Sperandio, gives us almost invariably abstruse or coarse allegories veiled in a pseudo-antique style, only in the rarest cases do we meet with realistic scenes taken from military life, such as (among others) in the Correggio, Bentivoglio, and Grati medals. See, too, with what lack of understanding and what clumsiness he combines Pisano's medals of Novello Malatesta and Gianfrancesco Gonzaga to produce the Grati medal; and in the Bentivoglio medal with what effrontery he reproduces in the contrary sense Pisano's medal of Lodovico Gonzaga! And if, not without reason, we throw the responsibility for the choice of his allegories on the taste of the time, more especially of the scholars, poets, and professors depicted, still the execution, for which the artist is alone responsible, is almost equally unpleasant, the drawing almost invariably devoid of spirit and delicacy, the modelling superficial (except where corrected by chasing, which is, however, usually dispensed with), the relief strong and rough, without finer transitions and, therefore, ineffective. Hence, on closer examination we restore to the earlier master his overwhelming right of priority and assign Sperandio a place in the series of medallists of the fifteenth century, not only after Pisano, but also after lesser masters, such as Pasti, Constantius, and Marescotti" (pp. 87-89).

Mr. G. F. Hill, in his recent work on Pisanello, adds the following comment on Sperandio (p. 232): "The fall in his position in the hierarchy of medallists cannot be due merely to the swing of the pendulum, which diverts the public taste now to the archaic, now to the classical, now to the decadent period. Our reasons for declining to place him beside Pisanello are based on his breach of certain fundamental principles of good art. He is often pretentious and vulgar, to a degree only surpassed by the Florentine Francesco da Sangallo in his medals; his work is careless, not only in sheer erroneous drawing but also in roughness of execution. Good castings are very rare, and there can be little doubt that, amid the pressure

"Sperandio", writes M. de Foville in a remarkable monograph (Le Musée, 1909) "fut le plus fécond des médailleurs du xv<sup>e</sup> siècle : c'est un titre de gloire. Mais quand bien même les trois quarts de son œuvre eussent disparu, son nom aurait mérité de survivre et son talent d'être étudié : non pas qu'il ait été un délicat, ni même un très grand artiste. Mais son don d'improvisation, parfois fougueuse, le réalisme naïf de sa vision et en même temps la naturelle subtilité de son imagination esthétique, sa personnalité sans distinction mais si vivante, — et caractéristique même dans le plagiat, — cet ensemble de qualités actives lui donnent une physionomie très distincte. D'ailleurs, en même temps que personnel, il est très représentatif : l'esprit du xv<sup>e</sup> siècle, où se mêlent si curieusement l'individualisme réaliste et le symbolisme le plus quintessencié, se reflète visiblement en lui. Il est de son temps par sa vie, par le tour de son esprit, par ses dons multiples et par l'extraordinaire variété de son œuvre. C'était du reste un pauvre hère : parfois favori des princes, il en fut souvent le serviteur obscur et oublié ; malgré son esprit pompeux, il avait des humilités d'ouvrier pauvre. Son œuvre même, en dépit de certains airs de bravoure, trahit sa modeste origine, une méthode de travail hâtive et parfois sans conscience, et une bonhomie naturelle, dont il ne se départit pas sans tomber aussitôt dans une affectation qui nous fait sourire. Tel qu'il est, il nous intéresse toujours, — même quand il ne réussit pas à nous émouvoir. — parce que, là même où son talent s'appesantit, il lui reste toujours la faconde et la vie : par là encore il est bien de sa race. S'il paraît fort plébeien à côté de Pisanello, il pourrait être le père de tous ces Italiens imaginatifs et improvisateurs qui ont peuplé leur pays d'architectures baroques et de statues gesticulantes. Mais son siècle lui a donné une originalité plus franche : il appartient au quattrocento et c'est une grâce secrète qui supplée à cent autres vertus. Cela seul le rendrait attachant s'il ne l'était déjà pas tant par lui-même.

"Fils d'orfèvre, il fut orfèvre, et de plus architecte, sculpteur, médailleur, fondeur, ingénieur militaire, etc. ! Mais il n'a survécu de lui que de rares sculptures et une cinquantaine de médailles. C'est donc comme médailleur qu'il nous est surtout connu : aussi, après avoir dit ce que nous savons de sa vie, et mentionné les bas-reliefs et les bustes qu'on lui attribue avec certitude, c'est à ses médailles que je m'attarderai plus spécialement."

mondo d'Este; — Francesco Gonzaga; — Galeazzo Marescotti (realized 12.300 Marks); — Federigo del Montefeltro (1550 Marks); — Bartolommeo della Rovere (12400 Marks); — Antonio Sarzanella; — Francesco Sforza, — which realized very high prices.

Mr. Hill has published recently (Burlington Magazine, June 1911, p. 138) a new medal by Sperandio, that of Giustiniano Cavitelli of Cremona, in the British Museum (illustrated); size : 86 mill.

SPERANZA, FILIPPO (Ital.). Medallist and Chief-engraver at the Mint of Rome, born at San Martino al Cimino in 1848, died at Rome on 7. December 1903. He went as a boy to Rome, and devoted himself to die-sinking, in which he was instructed by Paolo Mercuri. He was admitted at the Papal Mint, where he became acquainted with Zaccagnini, Bianchi, the Bavarian engraver Voigt, the Roman Moschetti, and other eminent artists. His first signed medal appears to be that conferred in 1867 by Pio IX. for services during the epidemics of 1866. In the same year his signature for the first time appears also on coins; viz. 2½ Lire, with bust of Pio IX. In 1869 Speranza engraved the official annual medal, showing on R. Christ asleep in the boat amongst his terrified apostles in tempestuous sea, accompanied by the motto : EXVRGE DOMINE ET IVDICA CAVSAM TVAM. This medal is one of his best. Soon after, on the Pope being deprived of his temporal power, the Papal Mint was transformed into a Royal Mint, and became the only currency-issuing Mint of the new kingdom of Italy. Speranza retained his appointment of Chief-engraver under Umberto I. and Vittorio Emmanuel III. until his death. In 1878 he was preparing dies for a new issue of 5 Lire pieces of Vittorio Emanuele II., to replace the type by Ferraris, when the founder of United Italy died at the Quirinal Palace. Bianchi remained in office as Medallist to the Pontifical See at the Vatican Mint.

Comm. A Comandini sums up in the following words his appreciation of Speranza's merit, and they seem to me to give an accurate estimate of the artist and of the man : " Speranza fu un continuatore diligente e coscienzioso di un indirizzo artistico che oramai era confinato nei limiti delle espressioni ufficiali ; l'arte non osava penetrare ancora nelle officine governative ; il giovine regno faceva medaglie con un testa convenzionale del sovrano nel diritto, e poche parole secondo i casi e le circostanze, nel rovescio ; i conii artistici costano e il bilancio dello Stato non permetteva larghezze, che, diciamolo pure, lo stesso indirizzo della pubblica opinione, fino a pochi anni addietro, non avrebbe, non che comprese, consentite. Così le inclinazioni artistiche dello Speranza non poterono estrinsecarsi; uscirono dalla zecca sotto i regni di Umberto I et di Vittorio Emanuele III le discusse monete che tutti conosciamo; mentre le medaglie annuali pontificie, rimaste allo studio d'incisione del Bianchi in Vaticano, continuavano ad eccellere col loro puro classicismo.

“Nell' evoluzione del gusto pubblico anche Speranza si sarebbe certamente esplicitato con nuove manifestazioni del suo bulino, ma la morte lo ha colpito improvvisamente, a soli 55 anni.

“L'opera sua fu, più che altro, l'espressione dei gusti ufficiali del suo tempo — epoca di transizione fra il tramonto del regime pontificio e la instaurazione in Roma del Governo Nazionale (pel quale Speranza ebbe sempre, fin da Giovane, sincerissime aspirazioni)”. (A. Comandini, Filipo Speranza, Riv. ital. di num., 1904, p. 477).

I can only enumerate a few of Speranza's productions, as many, I have no doubt, have escaped my notice:

SPICER-SIMSON, THEODORE (Brit.). Contemporary Sculptor and Medallist, born at Le Havre (France) in 1871, of English parents. He began his studies in Paris 1890, going through the Ecole des Beaux Arts for four years, as a pupil of Professors A. Millet, Thomas, and especially J. Dampf.

Theodore Spicer-Simson.

He first exhibited at the Old Salon, Paris, the Royal Academy, and the New Gallery in 1896. In 1901 and following years he exhibited at the New Salon, or Société Nationale des Beaux-Arts, of which he was elected an Associate in that year. In 1904 he was invited to participate in the Prague, and the Liverpool Autumn Exhibition. Since, he has exhibited his works at Frankfort-on-Main, Gotha, Munich, Brunswick, Brussels, Magdeburg, Weimar, Cassel, Leipzig, Dresden, The Hague, Bremen, Hamburg, Stuttgart, New-York, etc.

The museums of Dresden, Leipzig, Frankfort, Munich, etc., have bought several medallions of Mr Spicer-Simson, and Prof. Pick of Gotha was one of the first to add specimens of his works several years ago to the Ducal collection at Gotha.

The Victoria and Albert Museum, South Kensington, and National Portrait Gallery, London, the Art Gallery, Birmingham, the Dublin Museum, and other public and private collections in Great Britain have on exhibition medals by this talented artist.

At the Brussels Numismatic Congress 1910, where one day Mr. Spicer-Simson had the honour to preside over the "Section de la Médaille" a paper, in which he, with the help of Mr. Bosselt, the German Sculptor, had been requested to formulate their ideas, when read, formed the basis for almost continual discussion. Dr Habich, Director of the Münzkabinett, Munich, one of the greatest authorities in Germany on medals, voluntarily championed these artists' opinions. These gentlemen consider that a work of art is the expression of the Artist's personality, and that therefore the smaller the number of intermediary processes interposed between the artist and his work, the more expressive will be the character and the greater the beauty of a real work of Art. Medals may be made by stamping or by casting. The die of the struck medal can be made in two ways, by engraving directly in the metal or by the use of the reducing machine. To obtain the highest artistic result the die should therefore be engraved directly by the artist; as for those manufactured by the reducing machine, it is a sort of mechanical reproduction which any sculptor can fall back upon. To obtain the highest artistic result in cast medals, they should be modelled, or cut of the same size as the finished work; the medallist can either leave it as it comes out of the mould or chase it according to his personal taste and temperament. Mr. Spicer Simson proposed therefore that terms should be found to establish a clear distinction between the two kinds of struck and cast medals, and suggested to qualify them as direct and indirect.

Both at the Brussels Salon and at the New-York Medallic Exhibition he had very good exhibits of his principal medallic works. The medallions of G. F. Watts, Louise Strong Hammond, and Mrs. Margaret Spicer-Simson, 1906.

George Meredith are illustrated in the New York Catalogue. At Brussels he won the gold Medal (Diplôme de Première classe), the highest award given.

A representative collection of the artist's medals has just been acquired by the Luxembourg Museum, Paris.

A good notice of Mr. Spicer-Simson will be found in Mr. Bauman L. Belden's 'Catalogue of the International Medallic Exhibition at

New York', March 1910. Special articles on his work have appeared in the French art magazines, L'Art décoratif, and Art et Décoration, September 1903; also in the Studio, February 1903, May 1904, and September 1905, and in Putnam's Magazine for March 1897, etc.

The work of Spicer-Simson, the Medallist, is remarkable in various respects. He is a master in handling the material, and he has succeeded in assimilating to a high degree of perfection the style of the great Italian portraitists of the fifteenth century, whose chief characteristics are boldness of design, conceived in the spirit of the antique, and simple modelling, with neglect of superfluous detail.

Among his earlier works one of the most successful is the Portrait-medallion of George Frederick Watts R.A., which was modelled from life in April 1904, barely three months before the famous painter's death.

The Watts medallion, executed in the style of the early Renaissance school, is a bold piece of work, which reminds one of a portrait by Pastorino. The likeness is highly realistic and dignified, and might have been designed by Watts himself. The lofty forehead, the eyes in their deep sockets, the strong Roman nose, every feature expressive of keenness of mind, denote the great artist who holds such a high place in the estimation of his countrymen.

The artist writes : " The relief of the face in the " Louise Hammond " medallion was modelled purposely very low to give extremely delicate tones and shadows to the feature, which seems to me to be a means of expressing through art some of those mysterious and evanescent qualities of charm that certain young girls possess.

" If we examine the well known medallion by Pisano of ' Don Inigo de Avalos ', of about the same relief as my ' Louise Hammond ' we feel the same charm with an added quality of strength expressed through the high relief of the wonderful headdress and mantle. Because of the variety and strong character of the dresses and particularly the headdresses that were worn during the Renaissance, Pisano, like other artists of his time, had greater opportunities than the modern men to make something decorative as well as full of character.

“In the ‘Don Inigo’ it was possible to make the face seem so subtle by giving relief and boldness of touch to the head-dress and as it touched the mantle to make that also in higher relief.

G. F. Watts.

In the ‘Louise Hammond’ medallion, the head and dress being quite separate it would not be possible to do this without destroying the harmony of the whole, and in this case I would not have wished to make the relief higher, for part of the character of the person as well as the work was the simplicity in both. The hair however is relatively a little more in relief than the face to add some slight impression of strength.

“In the ‘Ella Mielziner’ medallion, the long veil high in relief gives strength and simplicity to a complicated subject. The pyramidical lines of the whole subject are arrested at a certain point by the parasol, centralising the interest and preventing these lines from wandering down out of the frame (in this case the outline of the medal). As with the parasol, the straight line of the hat governs the composition in the ‘Don Inigo’ medal, where one has but to compare the position of the first and last letters of the inscription to see that they are parallel with the line of the hat.”

Many of Mr. Spicer-Simson’s later medallions might be similarly studied in detail to show the principles which guided their elaboration.

The Elizabeth S. Hammond is one of the smallest and lowest relief medals the artist has ever made.

Mr. Spicer-Simson is always vigorous, without being insensitive to the charms of detailed definition. He has a remarkable faculty for catching the right moment and the right pose, which, coupled with a reserve in treatment and an absence of anything pertaining to mannerism makes his portraits still more interesting on closer observation.

Elizabeth S. Hammond.

Mr. Spicer-Simson is and will become more and more a leader amongst medallists in this country and America. He possesses in an exceptionally right proportion the qualities by which the independent artist is distinguished. His work bears the stamp of a dominating personality. The various sides of his art have been developed together; his skill of craftsmanship is guided by his aesthetic sentiment, based on the study of the art of the great masters of history. He is true to himself, and holds among our modern masters a place which but few artists can claim to share.

and states that he is the first Engraver (Ysengraber) whose name is known, of the "Rappen Münzbund", but that it is uncertain in which city he was working. The dies he engraved were for subsidiary currency, not over the size of the Plappart, except a few Dicken of the 1499 'Gothic' type, nor did he coin the quite small species, as the Rappen and Stäbler. It is not impossible however that the fine Goldgulden, which Basle alone struck outside the confederacy, were also productions of this Engraver.

By him are certainly Plapparts, with the B. Virgin and Child, Double Vierer, and Vierer (Vide Corraggioni, pl. xxvii, 10, 19 and 20).

SPINELLI, ANDREA (Ital.). Medallist and Mint-engraver at Venice, who flourished during the second and third quarters of the sixteenth century; he was a native of Parma, and died 24. May 1572. On 29. July 1535 he was appointed Assistant-engraver at the Zecca, and on the decease of the Chief-engraver, Pietro Benintendi, in 1540, he succeeded him in virtue of an order of the 24. May of that year. In May 1543 he started business, in partnership with his son, as a Bookseller and Dealer in engravings. His shop was situated in the San Giuliano district. Vincenzo Lazari ascribes to him the plates of coins of the famous Placard of 20. November 1554, showing the Venetian and foreign currency which had been withdrawn from currency.

It is thought that Giacomo Spinelli died some time before his father, who instituted his other son, Marcantonio, his successor.

Prof. Bode, Der Florentiner Medailleur Niccolo di Forzore Spinelli, 1904, has established the identity of this cinque-cento Medallist, whose supposed portrait after Hans Memling I reproduce here.

Niccolo was born at Florence in 1430. His father and grandfather were goldsmiths, and his great uncle was the well-known Giottesque painter, Spinello Aretino. Circ. 1468 he filled the office of Seal-cutter at the Court of Charles of Burgundy, and to this period undoubtedly belongs the fine Portrait-medal of Charles's natural brother, the so-called "Great Bastard of Burgundy" (unique, Berlin Cabinet (illustrated), which Friedländer and Bode have identified as a work of our artist. This medal has all the characteristics of Niccolò's signed works, and in treatment it bears much analogy with his Florentine medal of Petrus Maria, on the R. of which is Paris, and with a large medallion showing on obv. a Portrait of a young man wearing a cap, without inscription or reverse (Museo del Castello, Milan).

1. M. H. Stern in an article on 'Antonello da Messina' in Gazette des Beaux-Arts, 1909, p. 44, disputes the attribution of this portrait to Spinelli.

This portrait of Antony of Burgundy is Niccolo's earliest known medallion. The medals of Cardinal Giovanni de' Medici (later, Pope Leo X.), Francesco Lancillotto, and others were executed in the last years of his life, close before 1514. In intimate relation to the Burgundian medal stands that of Giovanni Gaddi, which Bode considers to be probably one of the earliest Florentine productions of the Master (circ. 1470-1475). About 1485-1486 he made a prolonged stay in Rome, where he modelled two Portrait-medals of Pope Innocent VIII., one of which is dated 1486, and others of Papal secretaries, protonotaries, relatives of the Pontiff, etc., as :

Antony, the " Great Bastard of Burgundy ".

Antonio Geraldini ; — Giovanni Mendoza ; — Teodorina Usamari-Cibo, the Pope's daughter ; — Peretta Usamari, daughter of Teodorina ; — Silvestro d'Uziari, bishop of Chioggia (dated 1485) ; — Cardinal Giangiacomo Sclafenati ; — Filippo Sclafenati, brother of Giangiacomo ; — Fabritio Marliani, bishop of Piacenza ; — John is adorned with a helmet (illustr., Vol. IV, p. 6). Two unique pieces, in the Berlin Cabinet, represent Giuliano and Giovanni, the brother and son of Lorenzo. The latter has already been mentioned as one of the artist's latest works. In the same group, we find portraits of members of the foremost Florentine families, which stood close to the Medici : Giovanni Tornabuoni ; — Lorenzo Tornabuoni and Giovanna Albizzi ; — Lorenzo Tornabuoni ; — Giovanna Albizzi (one illustr., Vol. II, p. 95) ; — Lodovica Tornabuoni, daughter of Giovanni Tornabuoni ; — Filippo Strozzi ; — Nonina Strozzi, one of the medals claimed for the “ Médailleur à l'Espérance ”, which Bode identifies as Fiorentino ; — Giovanni Gaddi ; — Bernardo Salviati ; — Leonora Altoviti ; — Maria de Morelli ; — Roberto Nasi ; — and other members of the Sassetta, Federighi, etc., families. In the rank of the savants and artists of Lorenzo's court, Niccolo portrayed many, as Marsilio Ficino ; — Angelo

Catarina Riario-Sforza.

Poliziano, the intimate friend of Lorenzo and the tutor of his sons ; — Francesco Filarete, architect ; — Lorenzo Cigliamocchi, goldsmith (illustrated) ; — Francesco Lancillotto, painter, etc.

Some medals were modelled at Florence by Niccolo during occasional visits there of the portrayed personages, thus : Johann Greudner, bishop of Brixen (two varieties, one dated 1502) ; — Antonio Pizzamini, a Venetian ; — Prospero Fra Alberto Belli, of Perugia ; — Alfonso d'Este (a youthful portrait, dated 1493) ; — Ercole d'Este, father of Alfonso (probably of the same date) ; — Catarina Riario-Sforza (modelled before 1488, during the life-time of Count Girolamo Riario, her consort ; illustrated) ; — Another, of later date, showing the heroine's portrait in widow's weeds (illustr., Vol. I, p. 385) ; — her son, Ottaviano Riario ; R. the youthful Count on horseback. The last three medals have been attributed in error to Cennini. It is also interesting to note that the reverses of the two last pièces are reproduced almost exactly on medals of Jean du Mas and Antoine de Gimel, two of the French King Charles VIII.'s counsellors. This leads us to the vexed question of the authorship of the medals of that sovereign and members of his entourage, which had hitherto been thought to be the work of a medallist of Lyons, Nicolas de Florence († 1499), whose only authenticated production is a commemorative medal, of peculiar workmanship and in low relief, of the Visit to Lyons of Charles VIII. and Anne of Brittany. The Portrait-pieces above referred to are of Italian fabric and absolutely in the style of Niccolo Spinelli, and Bode's suggestion that they may have been modelled by our artist during the stay at Florence, after the capture of the city by the French, of Charles VIII. and his suite in 1495 is to my mind the correct solution of the problem. These medals comprise two of Charles VIII. and those of Jean du Mas, seigneur de Lisle ; — Jean Matharon de Salignac ; — Béraud Stuart, seigneur d'Aubigny ; —

Gilbert Bourbon, comte de Montpensier ; — and Antoine de Gimel.

To Lorenzo de' Medici's inspiration we owe the medals of some of the famous Florentines ; the poets Dante, Boccaccio and Petrarch ; the latinist Coluccio Salutati ; the warriors Neri Capponi and Niccolo Uzzano ; the secretary of state Marsuppini, and the ecclesiastics Gualberto, and Archbishop B. Antonino. We meet also with medallic portraits of individual members of foreign houses who filled important offices under or were in friendly relation with the Medici ; so the Orsini through Lorenzo's consort, the Bentivoglio, through Ercole Bentivoglio, who was appointed in 1486 commander of the Florentine troops, the Mirandola owing to the friendship of Lorenzo with the scholar Pico, etc.

Savonarola.

To Niccolo Fiorentino Prof. Bode ascribes also several medals of Savonarola, hitherto given, on Vasari's evidence, to one of the two sons of Giovanni della Robbia (q. v.).

Prof. Bode, in Florentine Sculptors, p. 176, makes the following reference to Spinelli : " The die-cutter Niccolò Spinelli at the court of Charles the Bold ; the medallist Niccolò Sforzore Spinelli, who was in the service of Charles VIII. of France and lived for a time in Lyons, where he is supposed to have died in 1499 ; and the artist of the same name whose signature is on the medals of Lorenzo de' Medici and of several other Florentine nobles, and who died in 1514, are made out to have been two, if not three, different persons. His immense oeuvre comprising three times the number of that of Sperandio, accounted the most prolific medallist of the Quattrocento, is then distributed over a series of fabulous artists who are dubbed, in accordance with the reverses of the respective medals, the artist of the “ Eagle ”, or “ Hope ”, or the “ Fortuna ”, to whom might be added with quite as much sense “ the Graces ” or “ the Constantia ” and so on. All these medals have the same strongly marked, broad traits in the reverses, which the artist kept very simple in character and was fond of borrowing from other designs, especially the antique, because he knew that imagination and drawing were his weak points. But to do complete justice to this artist (who, though unequal and often careless, is worthy as a portrait-modeller to stand beside Antonio Pisano), would necessitate arduous researches in the archives of the period as to the personages he portrayed, his relation to other artists of his day, and the attitude of Florentine art towards the contemporary art of the Netherlands — all questions which have scarcely been touched upon to the present ”.

Niccolo Fiorentino drew mostly from the antique for his reverse types ; Athenion's cameo representing Gigantomachos in quadriga served him for the reverse of his medal of Alfonso d'Este, whilst on the medal of Antonio Geraldini is a reproduction of a reverse type of a sestertius of Balbinus. As a rule the artist's reverse types show a connection with the portraits figured on the obverses; thus, Nemesis on the medal of Giuliano de' Medici; Florentia on that of Lorenzo; Hercules (in the style of Pollaiuolo) on that of the army leader, Ercole Bentivoglio; Victory on those of Charles VIII., and Catarina Riario-Sforza; Chastity and Love on that of the youthful Rucellai, etc. Fortune occurs on medals of the period of Savonarola, also on one, dated 1503, of Niccolò Tranqueri, and another, anonymous, showing a bearded man. Spes is found as reverse type on nineteen medals covering a period of thirty years. The three Graces, copied from the well-known cameo, form the reverse type of at least five medals.

Bode remarks: "The single figures recurring frequently without the slightest change on the reverse of his medals are, however, as lacking in imagination as they are careless, even unskilled, in drawing. This applies to the figures of Hope, Love, Fortune, Nemesis, Wisdom, Mercury, as well as to those of the Rulers mounted or on foot, and to the Coats of Arms, Emblems, etc. They all have exactly the same character — wooden or awkwardly moving figures with large extremities, rude features, straggling hair and long ungraceful parallel folds in the fluttering pseudo-classical drapery. Animals are still more superficially characterised and executed, trees or flowers merely indicated. Unless he copies, the artist studiously avoids larger compositions; he cannot even place a few figures side by side with any success, as witness the reverses of the medals of Carlo Federighi and Antonio Pizzamani with the three wooden allegorical female figures in a row. And all his features are monotonously alike. The 'Spes', which, though the feeblest, occurs the most frequently, the 'Caritas', the 'Sapientia' (on an admirable unnamed female medal in the Simon Collection, on a Boccaccio medal and on the large Uzzano), and the 'Fides' of the Fra Alberto Belli medal are almost identical; the 'Nemesis' on the reverse of the Giuliano de' Medici medal, and the 'Minerva' on the Fra Benedetto Fiezzi and that of Ercole d'Este (Heiss, The Medals of the House of Este, Plate VII. 3), and the 'Victoria' on the medals of Catarina Riario and of Charles VIII of France, are similar in pose, drapery, and treatment. Now it is true that of the five signed medals by Niccolo Spinelli three have reverses copied faithfully from antique cameos, the reverse of the fourth is almost entirely covered by an inscription, while the fifth alone bears a design of his own invention, consisting of a 'Florentia' seated under a laurel-tree offering flowers: a figure extraordinarily poor in design and rough in execution, and doubly conspicuous as the reverse of the medal of Lorenzo the Magnificent. In design and treatment this figure is typical of the majority of the medals under discussion, and the same hand is discernible at the first glance. It may also be briefly noted that all the inscriptions bear the same character as regards the form of the lettering and the adaptation to the space.

“Of course, among these hundred and thirty portraits are as many points of divergence to be noted as in the reverses, indeed more, for whereas the artist usually repeats himself in the compositions of the reverses, each portrait offers fresh points of interest, displays anew a masterly insight into character, and an astounding strength of technique in giving each individuality its best plastic expression. Again, certain divergencies are the result of the fact that on occasion the artist did not work from the original sitter, but from some other copy, or even from his own imagination; in the latter case, as is evident from most of his restored medals, his obverses are as rough and sketchy as his reverses”.

Justice, Peace and Abundance.
(R. of medal of Innocent VIII).

Prof. Bode points out that the medals, which have been grouped by French authorities under the headings of “Maître de l’Aigle”, “à l’Espérance”, “à la Fortune”, etc. according to the reverse types recurring on them, are really all by the same hand. The portraits show the same peculiar characteristics of Niccolo Spinelli’s handiwork; conception and treatment, style and art, differ but very little; even the inscriptions, lettering, arrangement of the legends, all indicate the same master. It is most improbable that there should have been at Florence, at the same time, about half a dozen medallists, all working in the same manner. Much more reasonable is the suggestion that Niccolò Fiorentino, the friend of the Medici, should have been entrusted with the modelling of portraits of the celebrities of the period; as Bode remarks: "The mere fact that the majority of these medals represent the most eminent personages and members of the first families of Florence, or men in close relations with them, irrespective of faction, during a period of nearly forty years, is one proof more that they are the work of one artist, and that one — Niccolò Fiorentino. For, then as now, any one requiring a work of the kind would assuredly address himself to the artist most in vogue. But that there should have been half a dozen equally celebrated medallists working in Florence at the same time is as improbable as that they should have all the same style or that there should be no record of a single one but Niccolò".

"When the French entered Florence he modelled Charles VIII. and the great nobles who accompanied him, among them the banished Lorenzino de' Medici, who had returned with the French army. When Savonarola set up his spiritual government in Florence, Niccolò executed one medal after another of the popular friar, whose most enthusiastic partisans were to be found among the artists; and the majority of the medals produced between 1496 and 1498 are portraits of followers of the great Frate. However, after his excommunication when popular favour turned against him, Niccolò had not the slightest compunction in celebrating one of his judges, the old Vicar-General of the Dominicans, Gioacchino della Torre, in a medal dated 1498, the reverse of which shows the dagger and cap, the insignia of his office as executioner".

Obv. Bust of King Edward VII., supported on either side by emblematical figures of Justice and Industry. Above the King is the figure of Peace, expressive of His Majesty's desires. The field is enriched with views of Bloemfontein and Pretoria, and also of the Houses of the Imperial Parliament. Above all is the motto, “OPPRESSORVM CONSERVATOR”, and in the foreground below is the Union Shield.

Rev. The Commander-in-Chief, Earl Roberts, holding his bâton and facing the spectator. Above him are figures of Fame and Victory: the latter in the act of placing a wreath upon his head. In the background is seen a column composed of Regulars and Colonial Troops, Volunteers etc., defiling past a mountainous range. The mottoes “VIRTUTE et DVCTV” behind the equestrian figure, and “PAX QVÆRITVR BELLO” in the exergue are expressive—the former of the valour of the troops under the skilful generalship of Lord Roberts, and the latter of the Nation's object for the War.

Goldsmith of the early sixteenth century, a native of Constance, settled at Zurich before 1502, and died there in 1544 (according to Füssli in 1540). The father of Zurich's celebrated Medallist, Jakob Stampfer. From contemporaneous records we learn that H. U. Stampfer was appointed to assay the newly coined silver in 1526, probably in the quality of Warden of the Mint. From early times goldsmiths were entrusted at Zurich with the cutting of the dies for the currency, medals, seals, etc. and it is almost certain that H. U. Stampfer is responsible for some at least of the coin-dies of the Zurich Mint between 1502 and 1540. In 1514 he was elected to the "Gross Rath", and became 'Zugmeister' in 1526. He was one of the champions of the Reformation at Zurich.

There is a Portrait-medal of him, which is one of the earlier works of his son.

STAMPFER, HANS JAKOB (Swiss). Goldsmith, Medallist and Coin-engraver, and one of the foremost artists of Switzerland in the sixteenth century. A son of H. U. Stampfer, he was born at Zurich circ. 1505, and died there in 1579 (according to some authorities on the 2nd July).

Self-portrait of Jakob Stampfer.

Jakob Stampfer was initiated at an early age by his father in the art of die-sinking and goldsmith's work. In conformity with the custom of the time, he travelled abroad and visited various towns in the South of Germany. Meier suggests that he may have made a stay at Augsburg and worked under the famous medallist, Friedrich Hagenauer, with whose style and method of treatment, especially in portraiture, his own bears strong similarity. In 1530 the artist returned to his native town, and was received a "Meister" in his profession. It is probable that between 1530 and 1540 he worked in conjunction with his father. In 1535 he married Anna von Schönau; in 1544 he was appointed "Zwölfer zum Kämbel", 1555 Master of the guild of goldsmiths, 1560 Statthalter and Chief of the Corporations. From 1570 he filled the office of a bailiff at Wädenswil. He left three sons: Hans, Jakob, and Hans Ulrich, the latter of whom also held important civic appointments.

One of the earliest medallic works of the artist is the Portrait-medal of his father Ulrich Stampfer, dated 1531. Then followed other medallic portraits of his famous compatriots, and foremost amongst these, the Reformers Ulrich Zwingli of Zurich, and Joh. Oecolampadius of Basle, which were issued as presentation pieces to their friends and admirers. The two portraits occur on some specimens as obv. and R. of the same medal. They date from the period between 1531 and 1540. Two other varieties of Zwingli medals are known. In 1537 he cut the medal of the 60 year old historian Hans Füssli, author of the "Eidgenössische Cronik".

Some specimens occur with Füssli's father's portrait on the  $\mathcal{R}$ , which Dr Lehmann considers as a proof that the Füssli medal was executed by the father's wish. The two Portrait-medals of Simon Grynaeus, rector of the University of Basle, 1541, and Magister Johannes Fries of Greifensee, professor of classical languages, first at Basle and later at Zurich, are both dated 1540. Of Heinrich Bullinger, Stampfer engraved two medals, the one dated 1542, which depicts the Zurich Antistes in full vigour, and the other 1566, which shows him as a 62 year old man. To this gallery of scholars' medals belong also those of Peter Martyr Vermilius, theologian of Zurich, executed in the year of his death 1562, Ambrosius Blarer, the Constance reformer, which bears on the  $\mathcal{R}$  an epigram by Rudolf Gwalther, Hans Asper, the Zurich painter. The medal of Colonel Wilhelm Froehlich of Riesbach, near Zurich, who commanded the Swiss in the service of the French King (L. F., Une médaille suisse rare, Geneva, 1904) is given by Erman to Stampfer, from its treatment and style; but this attribution is not absolutely certain. Well-known are Stampfer's medals of Bruder Klaus (Nicholas von der Flüe), which exist in two sizes, and have been duplicated in large numbers, in cast and struck specimens, but the work of which is not equal to some of the artist's best productions. His most famous medallic achievement is the medal commissioned by the Diet of the 13 cantons and allied states as a Presentation piece (Pathenpfennig) to the French King Henry II. on the christening of his daughter, the Princess Claudia, 1547. It was presented in 1548. Duplicates in silver were issued later as presents to statesmen and foreign ambassadors. Of very common occurrence are Stampfer's 'Bundesthalers', showing on one side the Oath of the Grutli. This medal, no doubt on account of its subject, became so popular that even to this day imitations are made. Beside these, Stampfer cut dies for a number of religious and allegorical medals (so-called "Pathenpfennige"), which medals it was customary to give as Presentation-medals on certain occasions and events in life, such as on a Birth, Christening, Confirmation, Marriage, Birthday anniversary, or at certain times of the year, New Year's day, Easter, Christmas, etc. Such medals were issued in large quantities in South Germany, especially at Augsburg, Nuremberg, also at Joachimsthal, etc., and not being signed, except in very few instances, it is difficult to determine the work of any particular artist.

Stampfer's reputation as an Engraver of coin-dies is well deserved. His 'Wappenthalers' of 1558 and 1559, Gold Crowns of 1561, dated and undated Thalers, struck between 1550 and 1570, exhibit the skill of an artist. There is no record of the date when Stampfer came into connection with the Zurich mint, which was owned by Gutenson, the engraver of many types of the currency of this period.

But we learn that on Gutenson being appointed by Duke Wolfgang of the Palatinate to reopen in 1565 the old mint of Meisenheim, he entrusted Stampfer with the entire charge of the Zurich mint. It is quite clear, however, that Stampfer worked for neighbouring mints as well, as for instance, Zoug, St. Gall, Chur, etc., and we find him in 1563 applying to the Zurich Council for a recommendation as Die-cutter to the Archbishop of Salzburg. Bullinger, in a letter to the jurist Wolfgang Weidner in Worms calls him "omnium per Germaniam nobilissimo", an eulogium which is perhaps excessive, although the artist was undoubtedly the first of his time in his own country.

Only two pieces of plate are known so far, which undoubtedly belong to Stampfer: a Goblet, cast in silver, presented by the Canons of Constance Cathedral to Strassburg in 1545 (now preserved in the Hohenlohe Museum), and a double Goblet, in repoussé silver, which is the property of Basle University (on exhibition at the Basle Historical Museum).

Stampfer cut many seals, armorial stamps, etc. On his activity as a seal-engraver cf. Neujahrsbl. zum Besten des Waisenhauses in Zurich, 1896, p. 12.

Stampfer's technique is that of the Augsburg and Nuremberg masters. He worked by the same processes, first preparing his models in honestone or wood, making from these moulds in which the medals were cast.

The Löbbecke specimen of this medal was purchased by the Swiss National Museum, 1908, for 2700 Marks; — Nicholas von der Flüe (Bruder Klaus), in two sizes; the large medal was probably engraved in commission for the Unterwald government, whereas the smaller one was probably meant for general distribution. Cast specimens are not of uncommon occurrence. Several varieties are known (one illustrated); etc.

Nicholas von der Flüe.

Other Portrait-medals are given to Jakob Stampfer with more or less certainty. Dr Lehmann however does not mention them : Josias Simler, 1567 (1576?); — Berthold Haller, the reformer of Berne, 1535 (Sattler I., 1); — Hans Offenpech, of Ratisbon, 1540, etc. These medals are all said to bear Stampfer's monogram JS.

The most famous medallion work by the Zurich artist is the large Medallion issued by the Confederate States and Allies for presentation to King Henry II. of France on the occasion of the Christening of his daughter, Princess Claudia, 1547 (several varieties exist; Haller I., 30; Wund. Cat. 3501-2; Stroehlin Cat. III., n° 5589-92; one illustrated). These medals are cast and chased; some specimens are enamelled. The best example in the Stroehlin Catalogue realized the sum of 510 francs.

The original specimen of this medal weighed 300 crowns in gold. Two others, each of the weight of 50 crowns, were struck for her sponsors (H. I, p. 20, n° 30). Other specimens cast in silver were issued at a later time as Presentation pieces to Statesmen and Ambassadors of foreign States.

The rare medal commemorating the Independence of the town of St. Gall, 1566, is usually attributed to Stampfer (H. 1849; W. 2689; Stroehlin Sale Cat. III, n° 3047; illustrated).

But the medallist's best known medallic work, of which numerous specimens exist and which was largely imitated, is the so-called "Schweizer-Bundesthaler", commemorating the foundation of Swiss Independence, 1291, "Anfang des Puntz im Jar Christi 1291", on which are depicted William Tell of Uri, Stauffacher of Schwytz, and Erne of Unterwald (illustrated).

Besides these Stampfer engraved a series of medals with religious and allegorical representations, Moralphennige, etc. which vary very much in artistic merit. Among these : The so-called "Reise-thaler", representing the conversion of Saul of Tarsus on his way to Damascus; many varieties; — Medal with the three cardinal Virtues, Faith, Love and Hope; — The three Holy Kings; — The Annunciation; — Jesus and the Samaritan woman at the well of Sychar; — The Flight to Egypt; — The Fall, etc.

STANHOPE, EARL (Brit.) Lord Mahon, afterwards third Earl of Stanhope (1786), published in 1775 a tract which he had written two years previously, entitled "Considerations on the means of preventing Fraudulent Practices on the gold coin", 4to; and in 1782, he struck a variety of pieces in illustration of his views upon the means of protecting the coins from forgery, and injury by friction. Hawkins describes seven varieties in Num. Chron., XIII, p. 128; Mr. Montagu owned nine specimens, varied, of the so-called "Pattern Guinea" or "Sovereign", the obv. type of which was made from a puncheon of the Half-Guinea. The principles of Earl Stanhope's remedy are, very low relief, uniform flat surface, deep milling, date incuse, fine wiry lines introduced into part of the work, and the type brought quite close to the edge of the coin. These pieces were not intended as patterns for coins and are not introduced into the regular series. They are dated 1782; the edge is inscribed MDCCLXXXII repeated four times; one variety has MDCCLXXXI followed by MDCCLXXXII repeated three times.

Charles, third Earl Stanhope, 1753-1816, politician and man of science, F.R.S. 1771; constructed two calculating machines, circ. 1777; carried Gold Coin and Banknote Bill 1811, also motions for committees to revise statutes and unify weights and measures; his process of stereotyping acquired by Clarendon Press, Oxford, 1805, also his iron hand-press and logotypes, &c.

Among these I may mention : Dr Moritz Benedikt, professor at the Vienna University ; uniface plaquette ; — 70th Anniversary of Dr Josef Gruber, professor at the Vienna University. STANLEY, SIR THOMAS (Brit.). By a proclamation of the 20th August, 1553, and an indenture of the same date made with Thomas Eger-ton, Thomas Stanley, and others, it was ordered that the gold coins to be henceforth made were to be the Sovereign, which was to be current for 30s. ; the Half-sovereign, to be called the Royal of gold, and to be current for 15s. ; the Angel at 10s. ; and the Half-angel at Sovereign of Mary Tudor, 1553.

5s. All to be of fine gold, i. e. of the old standard, 23cts. 3  $\frac{1}{2}$  grs. fine gold to  $\frac{1}{2}$  gr. alloy. In 1561 Sir Thomas Stanley and Thomas Fleetwood were treasurers of the mint (Rud., I, 339, note 1) ; in 1551 he was comptroller. Ruding in his list of Mint-masters mentions Sir Thomas Stanley as in office, with others, from the second year of Elizabeth to her fourteenth year, and again in the fifteenth. By a commission, dated 31st. December, first year of Elizabeth, Sir Edmund Peckham Knt. (q. v. Vol. IV, p. 442), high treasurer of the mint, Thomas Stanley, comptroller, and others, were authorised "to make sovereigns at thirty-shillings, twenty-four to the pound weight ; angels at ten shillings, seventy-two to the pound ; and Angelets, of the fineness of twenty-three carats ten grains and a half fine gold and one grain and a half alloy, as the record has it, instead of three grains and a half fine and half a grain alloy, which bear the same proportion, and shew evidently the mistake, and of crown gold, twenty-two carats fine ; Sovereigns at twenty shillings, thirty-three to the pound ; Half-sovereigns, Crowns, and Half-crowns. Remedy, as well for fine as crown gold, two grains ; coinage four shillings. And of silver (eleven ounces fine and one ounce alloy). Shillings, sixty to the pound ; Half-shillings, Groats, Half-groats, and Pence. Remedy, two penny weights ; coinage to the queen eighteen-pence per pound weight ”.

Sovereign of Elizabeth, m. m. lis.

Ruding gives further the following interesting note : “ It appears that, during the last reign, money for the use of Philip’s foreign dominions had been coined in the Tower of London. The implements which were made use of for that purpose were, upon the late queen’s decease, detained by the officers of the mint, who supposed them to belong to their office ; but they were afterwards restored, upon a certificate from Mr. Stanley, the comptroller ”.

On the 17th of February 1558-9, a commission was granted also to “ Sir Edmund Peckham, knight, high treasurer of the mints, Thomas Stanley, comptroller within the Tower of London, and others, to coin twelve thousand pounds of the base English money into twenty-four thousand pounds Irish.

‘ On the 1st May 1559, a similar commission was issued authorizing the officers of the mint to alter the base monies then current, into harpe shillings and groats, to be defraied about the queen’s affairs in Ireland. Four thousand pounds of such money to be coined into eight thousand pounds Irish’.

Commissioners were appointed on the 12th of January 1572-3 to receive an account from Mr. Thomas Stanley, then master of the mint, no such account having been given in by the master of the mint from the time of Edward VI., and during the reign of Mary, until the 15th year of Elizabeth.

STANTON, JOHN (Amer.). Die-sinker and Engraver of Cincinnati, born in Orange County, New York, on March 9, 1829; still living (1911). He made during the war of the rebellion, 1861-5, more "Copper heads", "War Tokens", 'Store Cards' and other metal tokens and checks which passed current as money for the value of "one cent", and for higher values in exchange for merchandise, milk, bread, coal, drayage, &c., than any other die-sinker or engraver in the United States. He issued the first of these War Tokens with the Liberty head and date underneath, in 1862, and continued making them in 1863 and 1864 until the close of the war, at about which time the United States Government issued fractional currency, and this put an end to the manufacture of these little metal coins or 'necessity money', which were issued by many merchants throughout the United States.

It was early in the war of the rebellion when Mr Stanton conceived the idea of making these War Tokens, which passed for one cent. While at Lafayette, Ind., he saw for the first time one of the patriotic war tokens of the size of a small cent, which gave him the idea that these things might do as business cards, and at the same time be issued for the value of one cent. He came back to Cincinnati and proposed the same to a number of Cincinnati merchants, and secured orders for very large quantities. He made these tokens for several hundred firms in Cincinnati, and at this time does not recollect how many firms he supplied, but from the number that are known of by collectors they run into the hundreds. Mr. Stanton says that prior to this time, or just at the beginning of the war, when small silver money, and bronze, copper and nickel currency became scarce, the merchants of Cincinnati issued what were known as paper checks or 'Cards of Value', which were about one and one-half inches by three inches, with the names of firms on them, good for so many cents and redeemable by the parties who issued them.

These little copper War Tokens, Copper Heads, or Store Cards passed readily as money in value of one cent from hand to hand, and no questions were ever asked in respect to them. They were quite convenient for making change, and no one questioned that the firms or individuals who issued them would redeem them promptly, which of course, was done, excepting when they were gathered up by collectors and are still held by them.

Mr. Stanton also made quite a number of Sutlers' Checks for almost all of the Western regiments that went into the war. He also made, about 1861, the well-known "Wealth of the South" series, of which he sold a great many, not only in the North, but in the South, and they were used as tokens and also as badges at the time they were made. He issued a circular describing them and sent the same to all the papers throughout the South at the beginning of the war. They advertised them extensively and large numbers of them were sold by him. There was considerable Confederate sentiment in and about Cincinnati, where large quantities were disposed of, and they were worn as badges by Southern sympathisers.

Robert Wright, the dry-goods merchant of Cincinnati, whose name is well-known in connection with war tokens, ordered from him about 10,000 tokens a week during the time that he made them, and he made for this one merchant alone over one million pieces, which, at the current value, would amount to over $10,000. More than 800 firms issued such metal tokens during these years, and if he made for each one of them one-half of this amount, it would appear that there were about $1,200,000 of these little coins, which he made for Cincinnati merchants, that passed as money during these two years alone. He also made a large number of them for Cleveland and other places in Ohio, and for about 1000 firms in Detroit, Michigan.

Mr. Stanton came to Cincinnati in 1851 and went into business in 1852. He first worked for Ira Bisbee, a steel letter and stencil cutter, who flourished in Cincinnati prior to 1853. After he had been with him for about a year Mr. Bisbee retired from business, and Mr. Stanton took it up and picked up the trade of die-sinker and engraver, continuing in it until the present time, excepting at intervals. Mr. James Murdoch Jr., bought him out in 1866 and continued the business for some time, then forming the firm of Murdoch and Spencer, which continued for five years.

Mr. Stanton states that Messrs Lamphear, Hughes, Spencer, Wright, with others and himself, made most of the tokens used in Cincinnati as money during the war. He says that at the time he commenced making these little coins in 1861 and 1862 copper was 39 cents per pound. It went up to 80 cents per pound two years afterwards, after which it was so high that he could not make the tokens and sell them at the price of one cent in order to make any profit on them.

STAPLEY, ABRAHAM (Brit.). A Forger of the Commonwealth period, apprehended in October 1655, as a false coiner of money. "In his house at Deptford were found several false coining irons for half-crowns, and false half-crowns coined with the date 1655. And this is to give notice to all persons whatsoever, that shall receive any of the said money of Stapley's, dated 1655: there being none of that date in his highness' mint coined to this day, the 26th of October." Public Intelligencer, October 22-29, 1655.

STAPPEN, PIERRE CHARLES VAN DER (Belg.). Director of the Belgian Royal Academy of Fine Arts (since 1898), born at Saint-Josse-lez-Noode on 19. December 1843, died on 21. October 1910 at Brussels. A pupil of Portaels. He leaves a considerable number of varied works which are impressed with a characteristic personal feeling. None, amongst Belgian sculptors, had such a decorative instinct. He contributed largely to the ornamentation of numerous public monuments at Brussels. He also laid out the plan for the decoration of the Brussels Zoological Garden, in which he gave a large share to the great sculptors of his country, and especially to Constantin Meunier.

In his style, he clung to the school of the Italian Renaissance. Among his chief productions in statuary, I may mention his Sphinx du mystère (Tervueren Museum); Jeune homme à l'épée (Brussels Museum); David (Antwerp Museum); the group "Le Temps poussant devant lui la jeunesse"; numerous busts of contemporaries and compatriots, among which that of Edmond Picard.

Amongst his best known medallic productions are: Plaquette on the Marriage of Prince Albert of Belgium with Princess Elizabeth, Duchess of Bavaria, 1900 (commissioned by the Société hollandaise-belge des amis de la médaille); — Medal of the Brussels International Exhibition, 1897, with bust of Leopold II. (2 var.); — Presentation-medal to M. Charles Buis, burgomaster of Brussels, 1901; — Centenary of the Royal Academy of Fine Arts of Brussels, 1800-1900, etc.

"C'est Van der Stappen", says M. de Witte (La Médaille en Belgique, 1905) "qui fut l'éducateur de la plupart de nos sculpteurs-médailleurs contemporains, bien qu'il ne se soit essayé à la médaille qu'à d'assez rares occasions. Charles Van der Stappen n'a nul dogmatisme: il apprend à aimer les formes; il en révèle la force; c'est un éveilleur de beauté. On ne l'inite point: on l'écoute. Lui-même excelle à comprendre. Et l'art belge lui doit beaucoup."

STEPHEN, H. Usually known as STEPHEN OF HOLLAND (Vide Vol. II, pp. 530-532). The following notes from Mr. G. F. Hill's Stephen H., Medallist and Painter (Burlington Magazine, Vol. XII, p. 355sq.) present so much interest that I give below copious extracts from this valuable monograph. "The medallist who is generally called 'Stephen of Holland' signs himself on his medals STE., STE.H.F. or STE.H.FEC. The responsibility for the explanation of these abbreviations as Stephanus Hollandus (sic) fecit seems to rest with George Vertue. He has been followed, practically without question, by later writers. For Vertue, who knew only the medals of Englishmen by this artist, it was perhaps natural to suppose that Stephen, a Dutchman, working in England, expressed his Dutch nationality by the letter H. I do not know whether Dutchmen of the sixteenth century used such a barbarism as Hollandicus (or the like) instead of the classical Batavus; but it seems to me incredible that Stephen, when he signed himself STE.H. on medals of Netherlanders made in the Netherlands, before he paid his visit to England, should describe himself as 'Stephen of Holland'. It is only reasonable to suppose that H conceals a surname, or more probably a place-name; that it means 'Hollander' is a supposition that need only be considered when some documentary evidence in its favour is discovered. It is hardly worth while to speculate on the nature of the surname or place-name. It has, indeed, been suggested that it was Van Hollandt, but it is very much to be doubted whether such a suggestion would have been made had not English writers already spoken of the artist as 'Stephen of Holland.'

"Much of the confusion which at present prevails about the identity of this medallist is due to Horace Walpole, whose careless use of the materials which lay before him in the MS. collections of George Vertue makes his 'Anecdotes of Painting' a trap of the most dangerous kind for the unwary. If a publisher could be found for the work, no more valuable service could be done to the history of art in England than the re-writing of the 'Anecdotes' on the basis of the MS. and other materials which are now available.

"We learn from Vertue that '... Stevens, a painter who lived in the beginning of Queen Elizabeth,' painted several family pictures (of the Lumley family), and that among the accounts of that family were receipts of this Stevens for pictures which in Vertue's time were in the possession of Lord Scarbrough. Vertue himself saw one, well drawn and painted, 'on board'. The duke of Devonshire also possessed among his old family pictures some done by ' . . . Stephens a painter '. It is to be noted that Vertue leaves a blank before the artist's name. It seems probable, therefore, that the evidence before him did not give more than ' Stephens ' or something similar; he assumed this to be a surname, and left a blank for the baptismal name. "

Mr. Hill further gives several more quotations concerning Stephens the painter, and then mentions Vertue's marginal cross-reference to his description of the medal of Anna Poinés, of which he gives a sketch, after Vertue's, no original being known to exist.

"Vertue praises this piece highly, and goes on to say once more : ' I think I have seen two or three more of the same work near the same time, particularly that medal of Sir Thomas Bodley and Lord Pembroke — 1562, and Lord Leicester. '

"A little later (fol. 45 b) he gives a drawing of the medal of William Parr, marquis of Northampton, explaining the signature STE.H. as ' Stevens Holandus '. This medal he regards as another confirmation of that artist's having been in England, and the work, being ' so masterly done, sharp, neat, and in good taste ', makes him apprehend that the medallist was a ' sculptor of large works, and made models in wax or clay for medals thus ', and also for ' monuments or other statues '.

"Walpole, without the slightest reservation, identifies the Stephen who signed the medals of 1562 with the sculptor of the Boreham monument and the painter of the family portraits above mentioned. The ' curious portraits at Hardwicke ', of Queen Elizabeth, in a gown embroidered with sea-monsters, the Queen of Scots, both at whole length, and others ', are also dragged in as probably painted by him.

"About the sculptor Richard Stephens, a certain amount of information is forthcoming from the sixteenth-century returns of aliens resident in England and similar documents. From these it appears that in May 1571 there was living in St. Saviour's Parish, Southwark, Richard Stevens, a freemason, born in Brabant, who had been in the country four years; with him lived one man-child, named Steven, and John Bescay his servant, who was born in Antwerp, and had been in the country four years.

"In November 1571 he is returned in the parish of St. George, Southwark, as Richard Stephens, of the age of twenty-nine years, a carver in stone, in England four years, with Jane his wife, born in Ghent, twenty-six years of age, in England three years, and one child called Stephen, born there, of the age of five years. They 'came over for religion.'

"In 1582-3 he is returned by the Company of Freemasons as a stranger practising the Art of Masonry, though he had never been admitted to the Company.

"Finally, another document, probably of 1583, returns him as a Dutch stone-cutter living in St. Saviour's Parish, Southwark.

"Richard Stephens, the sculptor, therefore, was born about 1542, and came to England about 1568; lived there continuously until the end of 1571; and was certainly there in 1582-1583, and 1587-1589. The last fact is proved not only by the documents but by his employment on the Boreham monument, which must have been begun about 1583, and finished in 1589.

"As the evidence stands there is no shadow of a reason for connecting this Richard Stephens with the Stephen or Steven who made the medals of 1562 and (if, as seems certain, medallist and painter were identical) painted the portraits of about the same date. Let us turn to the work of this latter artist. I may begin by describing the hitherto unpublished medals, the discovery of which first suggested the present inquiry. They are in the British Museum.

"1. Medal of Jacobus Fabius. Bust to right, bearded, in coat with furred collar, and cloak. Around, .IACOBVS FABIVS. AET. 40. A.º. 1559. Signed (incised) on the truncation of the arm, STE.H. The the exergue, incised, STE.H.FEC. The letters VE are ligatured. Brass, 42 mm. Presented to the British Museum by the late Mr. Max Rosenheim.

“The inscription is to be read: “Wie dit ontfan(gt) en niet veder (en)brenct(t), verbuert en pont was” — i. e. “He who received this and does not return it forfeits one pound of wax”.

Hans van den Broeck.

“A bronze surmoulage of this same reverse is found attached to a specimen of a portrait-medal of the painter Antonis Mor in the British Museum. The same collection also possesses a lead specimen (from George III.'s cabinet) of the portrait of Mor. The conjunction of the portrait and the yarn-winder reverse on the surmoulage suggests that they are by the same hand. They are of the same diameter to within 1 millimetre. On the larger (the reverse design) the border of pearls stands some slight distance from the edge. If this margin were removed (and it is, of course, unessential) the two would fit exactly, as indeed they do in the surmoulage. It seems, therefore, reasonable to attribute the portrait of Antonis Mor to Stephen.

“The close resemblance between the reverse design with the yarn-winder and that with Charity which belongs to Stephen's portrait of Engelken Tols.

Hans van den Broeck, should be noticed. Stephen has blundered in his motto, which should of course run, 'dabit deus his quoque finem' (Vergil, Aen. I, 199). The motto, correctly worded, was used by Leone Leoni and his copyists on medals, with the reverse of Hercules and the Hydra. Its application to the design by Stephen is not clear. If the portrait of Mor is by Stephen, the further question arises whether the reverse design of Painting which is attached to the portrait of the Brussels specimen published by Simonis (pl. XII, 1) is not also by the same artist. Simonis has attributed it to Jonghelinck; but it is to be noted that he says (p. 105) that at this period no other artist than Jonghelinck, 'sinon Etienne de Hollande', could have shown certain qualities which he finds in the design. Without having seen the medal, or even a cast of it, I hesitate to pronounce decidedly; but I would call attention to the extraordinary resemblance in treatment between the figure of Justus Fit.

Painting on the Mor medal and the figure of Faith on the medal of the marchioness of Northampton. When the evidence of the other reverse connected with the Mor portrait is taken into account, Stephen certainly seems to have a better claim than Jonghelinck to the reverse of the Brussels medal.

“To the pieces so far discussed it is convenient to add two others, the one, of Engelken Tols, because it seems to be a much finer specimen than that illustrated by Simonis; the other, of Hans van den Broeck, because traces of the signature STE.H are visible on the original on the truncation of the bust. The attribution of the medal to Stephen is thus confirmed.

“The British Museum is naturally rich in the portraits of English men and women executed by Stephen in 1562. They will be found well illustrated in plate VII of the ‘Medallic Illustrations’ of Franks and Grueber. For Stephen’s medals of other than Englishmen it is best to refer to the work of Simonis, although it is necessary to regard some of that writer’s attributions with caution. In particular the attempt to credit Stephen with portraits of Adrian VI and of Henry VIII (Vide illustr., vol. II, p. 525) may be set aside without hesitation.

“Stephen’s first dated medals are of 1558. To this year, for instance, belong the portraits of Engelken Tols and George, count of Egmont and bishop of Utrecht. (Of the latter, as we have seen, John Lord Lumley possessed a painting signed by ‘Steven’.) The medallist’s sitters in this year hail chiefly from Utrecht. In 1559, the year of the Fabius medal, and the next two years he did various other portraits, chiefly of Antwerpens. Medals of Sigismund Augustus of Poland are dated 1561 and 1562; and perhaps to the same time belong the undated medals of Catherine of Austria, Bona Sforza and John Sigismund. In 1562 and (if once more we assume his identity with the painter ‘Steven’) in 1563 he was in England; in 1564, as the van Alendorp medal shows, he was back in Utrecht. Then his movements are hidden until he reappears at the Polish court, making medals of Sigismund Augustus, dated 1571 and 1572. After this, no more is heard of him.

“The Italianate style of some of his works (of which the Fabius will serve as an example) has suggested that he went to Italy. Obviously, however, few things are easier to transport than medals, and there can be little doubt that the works of Italian medallists must have found their way across the Alps. Such imported medals would amply suffice for the Italianizing of Stephen’s style. That he was susceptible to outside influences is clear enough from the variety of styles illustrated on the plates.

“The last that we hear of Stephen, then, as a medallist, is in Poland in 1572. That the medallist and the painter were identical is, I think, almost beyond doubt, in view of the coincidence of the dates of their work in England and in one of their subjects — Count Egmont. But the further identification with the sculptor Richard Stephens stands on a different plane. It implies that the medallist was only about sixteen years old when he was doing signed medals of distinguished people like Count Egmont; that at the age of nineteen he was sufficiently famous to go to the Polish Court, and in the next year, coming to England to begin immediately to portray great nobles all over the country; that after returning to the Low Countries he came and settled down in England in 1565 as a stone-mason, and worked for four years; then suddenly went once more to Poland, where he made medals in 1571 and 1572; then returned to England, and from about 1583 to 1589 (according to the most probable date) worked once more as a stone-mason.

"This, even when one takes into account the versatility and the wandering habits of the artists of the time, is a somewhat improbable construction of any man's career. If it is necessary to connect Stephen the medallist and painter with Richard Stephens the sculptor, there is nothing (except the commonness of the name) to prevent our supposing that they were father and son. 'Richard, son of Stephen', would, according to the English usage, be called 'Richard Stephens'".

The medal of Pope Adrian V. ascribed by Simon to Stephen of Holland is undoubtedly Italian; there is a specimen in Mr. Max Rosenheim's collection (69 mill.). Of Alexander Farnese are probably two medals in existence. Simonis describes one dated 1587; Mr. Rosenheim's specimen has the date 1589. The same collector had also the medal of Floris Allewyn, Æ cast, 70 mill.

Jonkheer S. Muller Fz has recently sent me his paper, contributed to the Tijdschrift van het Kon. Ned. Genootschap voor Munt-en Penningkunde, XXIX (1911), 3rd part, on "De medailleur Ste. H. Utrecht" which gives additional information on the place of origin of this much discussed and still imperfectly known Medallist.

The firm has a very good name for Seal-engraving. Besides numerous gems, intaglios and cameos, they have cut dies for several medals, among which I have noted: the Prince Imperial, 1869; — Medal of the Loge Anglaise of Bordeaux, founded in 1732, undated (signed: STERN, PARIS); two types (Marvin,

STIGLMAYER, JOHANN BAPTIST (Germ.). Medallist and Coin-engraver, born on 18th October 1791 at Fürstenfeldbruck near Munich, died on 2nd March 1844 at Munich. His father was an ordinary smith. The youth was first apprenticed to a Silversmith, where he began to show uncommon abilities, which brought him to the notice of the Director of the Mint at Munich, H. v. Leprieur. Under the auspices of his patron, Stiglsmayer learned modelling and die-engraving; and after a time was admitted to the Academy of Fine Arts, where he continued to study sculpture. He was a pupil of Pfeifer, and Sträussl. His first work as a Die-sinker was an imitation of a Syracusan coin with the head of Persephone on obv. and an archer on rev., copied from a Cretan coin-type. In 1814 he obtained the post of Assistant-engraver at the Royal Mint under Maximilian I. Before, however, entering office, he received a government grant to visit Italy. There he directed his attention to the technique of bronze-casting, and studied the art of the Renaissance medallists. Whilst in Rome he produced a number of models which were very successful. On his return to Munich in 1822, he was appointed Engraver of the coins at the Conventionthaler, 1828.

Mint, which appointment he held until 1830, when he was succeeded by Karl Friedrich Voigt. Besides coin-dies, Stiglsmayer engraved many medals. In 1824, he was in Berlin, on the occasion of the casting of the Blücher statue, studying the French achievements in bronze casting. About 1830 he became Inspector of the famous Royal Foundry, which on his death in 1844 he left to his nephew, Friedrich Miller.

For King Ludwig I. of Bavaria Stiglmayer cut the historical conventionsthalers on his Accession 1825, Foundation of the Bavaria-Württemberg Zollverein, 1827, the Royal family, 1828 (illustrated) described in Wittelsbach Medaillen und Münzen, nos 2722, 2726, 2731, of which only few specimens were struck, with or without inscription on the edge. By him are also the medals of Ludwig I. on the Foundation of the Old Pinacothek, 1826; Prize medals of the Academy of Sciences; 'Ludwigs-medaille' for Scholars and Artists (Wittelsb., nos 2628, 2634, 2672). STIELER, AUGUST FRIEDRICH (Germ.). Brother of Johanna Friedrich Stielér, a native of Dresden; was appointed Mint-engraver at Mayence on 1st August 1765 with a salary of 400 florins. By him are probably the following works: Commemoration of the Sede Vacante of Mayence, 1774 (signed: A. STIELER); — Third Centenary of Mayence University, 1784, etc.

STIELER, FRIEDRICH (Germ.). Son of August Friedrich Stielér, born at Mayence in 1772, died there at the age of twenty-seven on 18th January 1799. Hennin ascribes to him the Conventionsthaler of 1791, the issue of which was stopped by the war, but I prefer to give it to August Friedrich S. He is said to have been entrusted with the engraving of the obsidional coinage of Mayence in 1793 (5, 2 and 1 Sol pieces: Hennin, nos 504-507). In 1795 his signature F. S. occurs on a commemorative medal or Thaler, with bust of the archbishop Frederick Charles Joseph, and another on with view of city and monument, struck in honour of the Austrian general, Charles Joseph Count Clairfait, who defeated Pichegru on 29th October 1795. A medal by the same Engraver commemorates the return of the Elector to Mayence in 1794.

Hennin states that until his death Friedrich Stielér was in the service of the Mint at Mayence (which however was closed in 1796) and that he cut numerous coin- and medal-dies: Ducat 1795, AUREA MOGUNTIA View of city; — Ducat, with bust of the Elector, ℞. SALUS PUBLICA Arms; — Another, without inscription on **℞.

In 1755 he was appointed Mint-engraver at Dresden, but already in 1751 he had cut coins dies for Poland, consisting of various patterns for a copper coinage.

I have observed J. F. Stieler's signature on a Leipzig Conventions-thaler 1763 of Friedrich Christian, the R<sup>z</sup>. of which is by I. F. ô Feral; — Establishment of a School of Artillery at Dresden, 1767 (signed : STIELER F.); — Memorial medal of Gelert; — Peace of Teschen; — Recovery of Frederick Augustus III. of Saxony, 1784; — Conventionsthaler 1773 of Clemens Wenzel, Prince of Poland and Duke of Saxony (signed : ST); — Count Marcolini's Royal Game preserves at Moritzburg, 1782, etc.

By him are many coin-dies of Frederick William II. and III., and he is the author of the so-called 'Sterbethaler', memorial Thaler of Frederick the Great, 1786 (with 17. A. 86). He cut dies for numerous medals. L. FORRER. — Biographical Notices of Medallists. — V.

Stockmar, and Bolzenthall, Dr Burckhardt, Schlickeysen, Nagler and other authorities are wrong in the Christian names they give to this Engraver. Dr Burckhardt (Die Münzen und Medaillen des Herzogs Ernst August von Sachsen-Weimar, 1731-1748, Blätter für Münzfreunde 1893, col. 1872) states that Joh. Wolf Heinr. Stockmar was appointed Court-medallist to Duke Ernest Augustus on 9th May 1732, and was still living at Ilmenau, 12th of December 1752. He ascribes to him a medal commemorating the accession of Duke Ernest Augustus to the Principality of Eisenach on the death of Duke William Henry of Saxe-Eisenach, 1741. To the same Engraver, Bolzenthall gives Portrait-medals of Duke Ernest Augustus Constantine.

Dr Domanig (Die Deutsche Medaille, 1907, Pl. 75, n° 671), illustrates a medal, signed P. F. STOCKMAR, commemorating the Marriage of the Prince Elector (later King) Frederick Augustus III. of Saxony with Duchess Amalia Augusta of the Palatinate-Zweibrücken, 1769 (illustrated). By him is no doubt also the medal on the Peace of Hubertusburg, with bust of Francis Josiah, Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Saalfeld, 1763; — Foundation of the Masonic Lodge Ernestus at Hildburghausen, 1755 (STOCKMAR F.), etc.

STOCKMAR, JOHANN LEONHARD (Germ.). Mint-master and Engraver at Eisenach, 1785-1835; died in 1852 at the age of 97. His initials I. L. ST. or L. S. occur on the coinage. I have observed his signature L—S on Conventionsthalers and Gulden of Charles Augustus, Duke of Saxe-Weimar, 1813.

STOCKMAR, KARL CHRISTIAN. Vide CARL CHRISTIAN STOCKMAR.

STOCKMAR, LEONHARDT. Vide JOHANN LEONHARD STOCKMAR.

STOCKMAR, THEODOR (Germ.). Brother of Johann Leonhard and P. F. Stockmar; Mint warden and Engraver at Gotha, 1779-1805; Mint-master at Düsseldorf, 1805-1818. He signed both medals and coin-dies. The signature occurs variously as St.; T. St. F.; T. S.; STOCKMAR F.; TH: STOCKMAR F.

Among his productions, I believe the following may be safely attributed to him: Conventionsthaler of Henry XI. of Reuss-Greiz, 1769 (ST.); — Conventionsthaler of Christian Augustus of Solms-Baruth-Wildenfels, 1770 (ST.); — Visit to Erfurt of Frederick Christian Joseph, Baron Erthal, archbishop of Mayence, 1777; — Fourth Centenary celebrations of the University of Erfurt, 1792; — Successes of the Allies against the French, 1793; signed: TH: STOCKMAR. Reichsthaler of Joachim Murat for Berg, 1806.

1805-1806; — Reichsthaler of Joachim Murat for Berg, 1806 (T S), and Kassenthaler, 1807, etc.

STOCKMAR, WOLFGANG IOHANN HEINRICH (Germ.). Domanig states that the Christian names given by Bolzenthal and others of this Engraver are not correct, and that his initials should be P. F. He was a brother of Johann Leonhard and Theodor Stockmar, and filled the post of Medallist to the court of Saxe-Weimar-Eisenach, during the second and third quarters of the eighteenth century. Vide STOCKMAR, P. F.

STÖHR, ANTON (Austr.). Warden of the Mint at Prague, 1760-1773. He signed his coins A.S., thus Thaler and Zwanziger of Joseph II., varied dates; Thaler of Count Leopold Henry of Schlick, 1767.

Stöhr was previously Mint-assayer for Moravia, 1760.

STÖR, HENNING (Germ.). Mint-master at Wismar, 1661-1670. He issued at his own cost Thalers, 1662, 1666, 1668; Half Thalers, 1668; Quarter Thalers, 1662; Four Schilling pieces, 1662-1670; Schillings, 1661, 1663-69; Sechslings, 1666 and other dates; Dreilings undated, and in 1669 converted his own house in the Schmiedestrasse into a Mint (Münzen und Medaillen der Stadt Wismar, Berl. Münzbl., 1894, col. 1731).

STÖR, JAKOB (Germ.). A citizen of Hamburg; Warden of the Holstein-Gottorp Mint of Steinbeck near Hamburg, 1601; appointed Mint-warden at Hamburg 8. April 1618, and still in office in 1622.

STÖHR or STOER, THOMAS (Germ.). A large religious medal, representing on one side the Baptism of Christ and on the R. the Crucifixion, is reproduced in Domanig, Die Deutsche Medaille, pl. 88, n° 766, diam. 150 mill., and is there ascribed to Thomas Stoer of Nuremberg, from the signature ST—N which appears upon it.

Thomas Stöhr was a native of Joachimsthal, and came as a Goldsmith's apprentice to Nuremberg, where he settled down, and became a Master in 1597 (Rosenberg, op. cit. — Hampe, Nürnberg. Ratsrerlässe, II, n. 1996; — Domanig, op. cit., p. 163).

STOKES, THOMAS (Brit.). Medallist, Engraver and Die-sinker, born in 1830, died at Alphington (Australia) on 13th June 1910. He arrived in Victoria on 1st of January 1854 and after some two years of unsuccessful prospecting settled in Melbourne. In 1857 he purchased the plant and coining-press which had been sent out to Melbourne in 1853 by W. J. Taylor to strike the Port Philip gold 2 oz., 1 oz.,  $\frac{1}{2}$  and  $\frac{1}{4}$  oz. and Victorian silver Shilling and Sixpenny pieces.

By 1862 Stokes had got his machinery brought to perfection, but in 1863 all his plant was thrown idle by the issue in Melbourne of the British bronze coins. Most of the Melbourne Tokens after withdrawal were shipped to Sidney.

Atkins, Colonial Coins and Tokens, 1889, describes a number of Australian tokens by Thomas Stokes, on which the engraver variously styles himself: T. STOKES DIE SINKER SEAL ENGRAVER LETTER CUTTER CHECK & TOKEN MAKER MELBOURNE; THOMAS STOKES MAKER 100 COLLINS ST. EAST & MELBOURNE; T. STOKES MAKER MEL. Besides his own Melbourne Penny and Halfpenny Tokens, Thos Stokes engraved Penny Tokens for Collins & Co., Bathurst, 1864; Love & Roberts of Wagga Wagga, 1865; J. Taylor of Ballarat, 1862 (sev. var.); W. R. Watson & Co. of Ballarat, 1862 (sev. var.); Hodgson Bros of Bendigo, 1862; R. Calder, W. Froomes, Murray and Christie, G. Ryland, all of Castlemaine, 1862; R. Grieve of Eagle Hawk, 1862; S. Deeble, Evans & Foster, J. Hosie, Miller Brothers, George Nichols, Hugh Peck, Robinson Brothers & Co., T. Warburton, all of Melbourne and dated 1862, several varieties; Gippsland Hardware Co. of Port Albert and Sale, 1862; Barrowclough, R. B. Ridler, Jas. Davey & Co., J. D. Leeson, 1862, all of Richmond; Stead Brothers of Sandhurst, 1862; W. C. Cook of Sandridge, 1862; Thos. H. Cope of South Yarra, 1862; — J. Caro & Co., Christchurch (N.Z.).

The pieces by Stokes, says M. P. Coleman P. Hyman (An Account of the Coins, Coinages, and Currency of Australia, 1893) were very well designed and struck. One of the neatest designs in Stokes' reverses is that with the vine-branch, surrounded by the legend IN VINO VERITAS. Stokes is responsible for the existence of about two dozen varieties of pence not bearing names other than his own.

After 1863, Thomas Stokes, later STOKES AND MARTIN, issued a large number of Tokens for firms in New South Wales, West Australia, and New Zealand. I have noticed the firm's signature on Auckland Pennies issued by Holland and Butler, Edward Waters, Mason Struthers & Co., etc. The West Australian ones were for John Henderson, and dated 1874, or undated. These were the last tokens struck by the Stokes firm.

Since the tokens went out the firm of Stokes and Martin, now STOKES AND SON, have executed many varieties of Exhibition medals, Commemorative and Portrait-pieces, some of them being very commendable works.

The signature H. STOKES occurs on a medal of the International Exhibition at Melbourne, 1880; it bears on the obverse a fine bust of Queen Victoria.

In 1887 the Jubilee of Queen Victoria proved a busy time for this firm. They issued for the different districts and localities of Australia a large variety of commemorative medals, many with representations of commemorative buildings and monuments erected in various places in honour of that event. A medal intended as a Prize for the Melbourne Exhibition at the Colonial Exhibition at Earl's Court, 1894, is also signed STOKES & SON. At the Diamond Jubilee 1897 the firm issued no less than seventy-two varieties of medals, displaying on R. the arms of different cities, towns, provinces, &c. They also issued Coronation medals of King Edward VII., but most of their productions bear a local character.

STOLBA, A. (Amer.). This signature occurs on a masonic medal which was struck for sale at the Chicago Conclave of Knights Templar, in 1880. The work is poor. A. Stolba is no doubt a Seal-engraver or ordinary Die-sinker (Marvin, p. 264).

Friedensburg does not know for certain if the MS on Ducats of Reichenstein from 1553 to 1555 represents his signature, nor whether this Stoltz is identical with the Engraver of the same name who is frequently mentioned in the mint records of Prague, 1578-1593 (Wiener Num. Zeitsch. Bd. 27, p. 190 sq.). The latter's privy-mark was a rose.

Stroehlin and M<sup>lle</sup> Amiel, sister of the well-known philosopher. He was educated at Geneva, and studied also at Leipzig and Berlin, 1884-1887. In 1888 he returned to Geneva and three years later started, in conjunction with Dr A. Ladé, a coin and medal-business under the trade name of PAUL STROEHLIN ET C<sup>ie</sup>. The association was broken in 1898. From 1890 to 1908 Stroehlin was President of the Swiss Numismatic Society, of which he had been a member since 1879. He edited for many years the Revue suisse de numismatique, and since 1904 also the Journal des Collectionneurs. His Répertoire général de médaillistique, Annuaire de numismatique, and other works were never brought to completion.

P. C. Stroehlin formed a large collection of Swiss and foreign coins and medals, some of which he disposed of during his life-time, but the bulk was sold by auction at Geneva, November 1909 and February 1911, and in London, July 1910, under my direction. The catalogue which I compiled comprizes over 10.000 lots, and the collection realized £ 15.000.

This firm has been noted for all kinds of die-sinking work, seal-engraving, and trade in medals, miniatures, &c. Their signature STRONGI'TH'ARM occurs on some medals. STROUSSACK, JOHANN (Swiss). Mint-warden at Fribourg, 1473-74. He was a brother of the goldsmith Stephan S., and son of Hans S., who was probably also a Goldsmith or Moneyer.

STUART (Brit.). A clever Medal-chaser and Die-engraver, who flourished about the middle of the eighteenth century. He was much employed, by Mr. Hollis, as a skilful workman, and it is well-known that he designed the medal, executed by Thomas Pingo, issued in commemoration of the Capture of Guadaloupe, 1. May 1759.

Stuart made very clever copies of some of the medals by Abraham and Thomas Simon, and many others, which vary in degree of excellence. But it is quite possible that many of the retrospective medals usually ascribed to Stuart are not by him. The following are however likely productions of this engraver: Coronation medal of Edward VI.; — Henry VIII., as head of the Church; — Philip and Mary, portraits on either side; — Mary (after Trezzo); — Admiral Blake (after Abr. Simon); — Bulstrode Whitelock (after Abr. Simon); — Elizabeth Cleypole (after John Kirk); — Thomas, Earl of Southampton (after Thos Simon); — Sir Edward Nicholas (after Simon); — Abraham Simon (after a portrait in wax by the artist himself) (vide supra, p. 510); — Thomas Simon (after an unknown original) (vide supra p. 519); — Anne, Countess of Dorset; —

Anne, Queen of Great Britain (illustrated), in the late King Edward's collection; — Touch-piece of Cardinal York, son of the Pretender

James III., as Henry IX. ; — Queen Mary Tudor, oval medal described by Till, "as a most exquisite work, being first cast and then finely tooled".

In a recent Sale catalogue, a number of chasings by Stuart brought a high price; these comprised : Oliver Cromwell and General Fairfax : R. Medal; obv. OLIVAR. D. GR. &c., bust to left; R. GENERAL FAIRFAX, Bust to left. Sir Thomas Fairfax; — oval R Badge, in wreath border; R. Arms on garnished oval between branches of laurel and palm. Lord Inchiquin; — R. Medal; R. inscription, &c., in six lines. Sir John Hotham; — R. Medal; obv. MORS. MIHI. VITA, bust to right, etc.

STUART, GILBERT (Amer.). Portrait-painter, born in Narragansett, Rhode Island, U. S. A., 1755; came to England and worked with Benjamin West, 1775, returning in 1792; died in 1828. The painter of Washington.

remarking that Liberty on the other coins had run mad — referring to the dishevelled hair on the head of Liberty on the previous coins — we will bind it up, and thus render her a steady matron”.

While in England, Stuart painted the portraits of Sir Joshua Reynolds, Benjamin West, W. Woclett, Alderman Boydell, John Kemble, Dr Fothergill and many persons of less note. But his best work in this country is a full-length portrait of a Mrs. Grant skating in St. James's Park. It is in the collection of Lord Charles Pelham Clinton. Of his American portraits, that of Washington is the chef-d'œuvre. He painted the President several times.

erheblichen Vorzug: er kam aus dem Handwerk und behielt auch sein Lebtage die handwerkliche Gediegenheit, die im Eindruck seiner Werke nicht an letzter Stelle zur Geltung kommt. Wie er schon in seinem äusseren Habitus der schlichte Mann der Werkstatt ist, so tragen seine Medaillen schon für den oberflächlichen Blick den Stempel der handwerklichen, werkstattmässigen Tüchtigkeit. Damit hängt eng zusammen, dass Sturm in seinem Kunstgebiete eine schwerwiegende Reform einführte, die Wiederentdeckung eines in tiefe Vergessenheit geratenen Verfahrens, nämlich den Steinschnitt. Während der moderne Medailleur — besonders die Franzosen — ein grosses Modell aus Ton oder Plastilin herstellt, darnach den Gipsabguss macht und diesen zum Zwecke der Reproduktion in Bronze mechanisch verkleinern lässt, ist es Sturms prinzipielles Bestreben, das Modell möglichst in genau derselben Grösse herzustellen, wie sie später die fertige Arbeit haben soll. Sein Hauptmaterial ist der gewöhnlich zur Lithographie verwendete solenhofener Stein; um ihn zu bearbeiten, bedarf er keines Hilfsmodelles, sondern nur einer Skizze, einer orientierenden Zeichnung, die meistens auf den Stein selbst gebracht wird. Der Stein gestattet die subtilste Ausführung, er ist so feinkörnig, dass die geringste Modellierung darauf sichtbar wird, Stichel und Eisen übermitteln dem Stein die leiseste Bewegung der Hand und geben den einzelnen Schnitten die Kennmarke der Impression. Das Material gibt unmittelbar den Eindruck wieder, den der Künstler von einer Persönlichkeit erhalten hat, es ist nicht erst ein Überzeiselieren nötig, wie später bei der gegossenen oder geprägten Bronze. Aus diesem Grunde haben auch die Steinschnitte vor den in Bronze oder in einem anderen Material ausgeführten Medaillen ihren überragenden Wert. Der Steinschnitt wird aber auch zugleich dem anderen Sturmschen Kunstprinzip, der Herstellung in Originalgrösse, gerecht; die alten Künstler, die Pisani, die Beham, verfahren nicht anders, denn von den modernen Verkleinerungsmethoden wussten sie noch nichts. Die alte Kunstübung wollte die Individualität des Porträtierten, wie sie sich im Künstlerrauge spiegelte, zur Darstellung bringen. Die moderne Reproduktionsart erlaubt freilich, eine Menge Details auf die Medaille zu bringen, aber sie bekommen durch die Komprimierung eine unangenehme Verschärfung, die Übergänge sind hart, die Flächen begrenzen sich allzu genau. Man hat in einer nach einem Plastilinmodell hergestellten Medaille kein eigentliches Kunstwerk vor sich, sondern vielmehr bloss ein photographisches Abbild des grossen Modells, der Steinschnitt trägt dagegen die unmittelbare Faktur der künstlerischen Hand. Es lässt sich auch behaupten: eine Medaille, die nach einem Steinschnittmodell hergestellt ist, hat einen anderen, weit gediegeneren und abgeklärteren Charakter, als nach Wachs oder Plastilin oder Ton. Denn der Modellierungsmodus dieser Materiale prägt der Arbeit schon in der Herstellung selbst ihren Stempel auf. Der ursprüngliche Steinschnitt wie die nach ihm hergestellte Medaille hat daher die grössten Vorzüge vor den Resultaten des mechanischen Verfahrens. Es ist ja freilich sehr viel leichter und einfacher ein Porträt in Wachs oder Plastilin hinzumodellieren und dabei den Vorzug auszubeuten, die zur Verfügung stehende Fläche mit füllenden Zutaten anzupfropfen, aber man möchte den modernen Medailleuren wünschen, die Zeit und Mühe, die zur Herstellung solcher Steinschnitte gehört, nicht zu scheuen, es lohnt sich reichlich. Es ist Sturms Verdienst, wenn der Steinschnitt wie er im 16. Jahrhundert in Augsburg und Nürnberg, besonders von Hans Sebald Beham gepflegt wurde, wieder zur Blüte kommt. Das Streben, alles mechanische Verfahren beim Kunstwerke überhaupt auszuschalten, die unmittelbare künstlerische Handschrift im Werke direkt sichtbar zu machen, lässt das Sturmsche Kunstprinzip, die Schädlichkeiten der Verkleinerung möglichst auszumerzen, als im höchsten Masse gerechtfertigt erkennen. Welche Früchte eine solch solide Kunstübung zeitigte, wird sich sogleich ergeben.

“Für die wenigen Jahre, in denen der Künstler auf diesem Gebiete schafft, liegen zweifellos Leistungen vor, die sich dem besten anreichen, was die moderne Kunst kennt. Sturm hatte aber auch eine bedeutende Anwartschaft für dieses Gebiet, die Herkunft aus dem Handwerk, die mühelose Beherrschung der Technik, der angeborene Sinn für das Material, die Sorgfalt der Arbeit, die unermüdliche Treue des künstlerischen Strebens, der Blick für das Wesentliche, für die Charakterzüge einer Persönlichkeit in allem schos-seine Befähigung für die Medaillistik zusammen. Sturm hat es in seinem Leben nicht leicht gehabt” (Medaillen und Plaketten von Paul Sturm, Kunstgewerbe Blatt, 1904, pp. 141-144).

trait-medal of Onophrius Korn, dated 1562. This medal, remarks Erman, exhibits a peculiar chasing of the hair and costume and reminds one in the conception of the reverse of the Italian manner. Very similar is the Portrait-medal of the well-known Augsburg patrician Veit Conrad Schwartz, 1563 (illustrated in Domanig, Deutsche Medaille, n° 243).

To the same Medallist, Erman ascribes tentatively the following later medals : 1572. Johann Rezer (Berlin Mus.); — 1572. H. A. (aet. 20. Arms, a rose) (Berl. Mus.); — Undated. Georg Preys, of Augsburg (Berl. Mus.).

SYRIES (Greek). Gem-engraver of the old Ionian school (sixth century B.C.), one of the first Greek artists whose name is recorded on glyptic works. The signature Συρίης ἐποίησε occurs on a steatite of the British Museum (illustrated). The back of the scarabaeus is replaced by a mask of Silenus in relief, whereas on the flat side is represented a male figure playing the lyre. Babelon thus describes the work : “La délicatesse du travail permet de l’analyser dans tous les détails, depuis la barbe en coin, les pommettes et les yeux saillants du personnage, jusqu’à l’ossature de son torse maigre, de ses bras, de ses jambes et de ses pieds, jusqu’aux ornements du diadème, aux cordes et à la clef de la lyre. le jeu exagéré des muscles, la transparence enfin de ce voile qui, épousant les contours du corps, laisse deviner autant de science anatomique que d’habileté technique” (La gravure en pierres fines, p. 99).

“Die Namensform”, says Furtwängler, “lässt einen Ionier erkennen, die Schreibung schliesst aber das kleinasiatische Ionien aus; denn im sechsten Jahrhundert, in welches der Stil des Bildes weist schrieb man dort nirgends E für H und Σ für Σ. Dagegen passt alles dazu Euboea als Heimat anzunehmen; so hat denn auch Köhler a. a. O. bereits die Inschrift als titulum Euboicum bezeichnet. Da kein Lambda vorkommt ist zwischen Chalkis und Eretria nicht zu entscheiden. An die Colonieen möchte ich nicht denken, wenigstens nicht an die westlichen, da das Material mir nur von Gemmen aus Griechenland und den Inseln des ägäischen Meeres erinnerlich ist. Bei Beurteilung des Stiles ist die Weichheit des Steines ebenfalls zu berücksichtigen. Feines sauberes Detail war hier unmöglich. Der Künstler beschränkte sich deshalb auf des was ihm die Hauptsache war, die Hervorhebung des muskelkräftigen Gesamt-erscheinung des Mannes. Das Gewand schmiegt sich den Formen des Körpers an, sie kaum verhüllend; die Falten sind nur als dünne flüchtige Linien eingegraben; die Muskeln der Beine und des Armes wölben sich mächtig heraus. Die derbe Frische, welche das Werk charakterisiert kennen wir auch sonst als der älteren chalkidischen Kunst besonders eigen. Ich glaube den Stein um die Mitte des 6. Jahrh. ansetzen zu dürfen” (Jahrbuch des Kaiserlich Deutschen Archäologischen Instituts, Band III, 1888, pp. 196-7).

Among the principal publications which have repeatedly mentioned the artist's work we find: The Studio; Revue de numismatique belge; Revue de l'art ancien et moderne (Babelon); Mittheilungen der Oester. Gesellschaft der Münzfreunde; Berliner Münzblätter; Bolletino of Milan (Ricci); Numizmatikai Közlöny, etc. and numerous illustrated periodicals.

At the Salon International de la Médaille contemporaine held at Brussels in connection with the Universal Exhibition 1910, M. Szirmai had a very fine exhibit of 95 of his principal medals and plaquettes.

M. Szirmai cannot be said to follow any popular leader. His works betray a marked personality which dominates the whole of his effort, and is manifest in every one of his productions. During the last few years, he has occupied himself almost exclusively with medallic art, which allows him full scope for the exercise of his ingenuity as a designer and a craftsman, and in which his distinctive capacities can be applied to very definite advantage.
